This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. 48TH CONGRESS, 2d Session. | SENATE. | MIS. DOC. No. 5.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

DECEMBER 2, 1884.—Ordered to be printed.

Mr. VEST submitted the following

RESOLUTION:

Resolved, That the Committee on Indian Affairs be instructed to inquire what leases of lands in the Indian Territory for grazing or othe purposes have been made by the tribes of Indians therein, the number of acres embraced by each of said leases, the terms thereof, and the persons, corporations, or associations named therein as lessees. Also, that the committee inquire as to the circumstances under which said leases were made, and the means used for obtaining the same, and whether said leases are authorized by existing legislation, or are conducive to the welfare of the Indians in said Territory.

That the committee have power to send for persons and papers, and shall report by bill or otherwise.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

DECEMBER 2, 1884.—Submitted and ordered to be printed.
DECEMBER 3, 1884.—Considered, amended, agreed to, and ordered to be reprinted.

Mr. VEST submitted the following

RESOLUTION:

NOTE.—Omit words in brackets [ ] and insert words in italics.

Resolved, That the Committee on Indian Affairs be instructed to inquire what leases of lands in the Indian Territory or Indian reservations for grazing and other purposes have been made by the tribes of Indians therein, the number of acres embraced by each of said leases, the terms thereof, and the persons, corporations, or associations named therein as lessees. Also, that the committee inquire as to the circumstances under which said leases were made, and the means used for obtaining the same, and whether said leases are authorized by existing legislation, or are conducive to the welfare of the Indians in said Territory or Indian reservations.

That the committee have power to send for persons and papers [and shall report by bill or otherwise.], and employ a stenographer, and report by bill or otherwise, and that the actual and necessary expenses of said investigation be paid, on the approval of the chairman of said committee, out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

48TH CONGRESS, 2d Session. | SENATE. | MIS. DOC. No. 6.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

DECEMBER 4, 1884.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania, submitted the following

RESOLUTION:

Whereas the shipping trade in American vessels is, and has for years been, depressed, and the export trade in American produce is languishing for want of a market that might be reached if the shipping trade was in the hands of citizens of the United States: Therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be, and is hereby, directed to inquire whether it would be expedient to expend the surplus revenue of the United States, or any portion thereof, for the purpose of reviving the shipping and export trade by allowing a rebate from tariff duties on foreign goods imported in ships built and owned in the United States, and by also allowing a premium on American-grown products and articles of American manufacture exported in American vessels, and report by bill or otherwise.

48TH CONGRESS, 2d Session. | SENATE. | MIS. DOC. No. 7.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

DECEMBER 8, 1884.

Mr. BECK presented the following; which was ordered printed and referred to the Committee on Private Land Claims, to accompany bill (S. 2410) for the relief of François Fournier:

SAINT LOUIS, November 1, 1884.

It appears from the public records of Saint Louis County that on the 16th August, 1824, one François Fournier was in possession of a lot in the Carondelet common field, having a front of one and a half arpents and a depth of forty arpents, bounded on the north by a "common field" lot, originally granted to Joseph Hebert Tabeau (December 28, 1773—Livre Terrein, No. 3, p. 4), and on the south by a common field lot originally granted to Delor de Treget; east and west by the east and west lines, respectively, of the Carondelet common field.

On the 16th August, 1824, François Fournier and wife, by deed of that date, duly acknowledged and recorded in Book O, p. 52, of the office of recorder of deeds of Saint Louis County, conveyed to Louis Rivance so much of this lot as is described as "a piece of land in the 'commons' of Carondelet, containing twenty-eight arpents, more or less, adjoining on the north Henry Chouquette, on the south Louis Constant, and on the east by vendor."

The western part of the lot granted to Delor de Treget had been sold to Constant, and the lot granted to Tabeau had been sold to Chouquette. So far this description was accurate; but instead of being in the "commons" of Carondelet the lot was in the "common field" of that village. The "common" of Carondelet lay wholly to the south of the "common field." The eastern part of the lot granted to Delor de Treget had, in 1824, been sold and conveyed to Berthold; so that, after August 16, 1824, Fournier only claimed as his own property the eastern part of the "common field" lot, of which he sold the western twenty-eight arpents to Rivance on that day. The part retained by Fournier was properly described as bounded north by land of Chouquette, south by land of Berthold, west by land of Rivance, and east by the east line of the "common field" of Carondelet. By this description it was certified by the recorder of land titles as having been confirmed to François Fournier under the act of June 13, 1812. The certificate of the [United States] recorder was issued on June 21, 1825.

By the first section of the act of June 13, 1812, the claims of all inhabitants of certain enumerated towns and villages on Missouri to town or village lots, out-lots, or common field lots, or commons which had been occupied, cultivated, or possessed, prior to the 20th December, 1803, were ipso facto confirmed "to the inhabitants of the respective towns or villages aforesaid according to their several rights, or rights in common thereto."

It is to be remembered that the "common field" of any town or village was inclosed within a "common fence," the keeping up of which was a charge upon all the owners of lots therein; but that the several lots were the property of individual townsmen or villagers. The common of any town or village was a tract of land granted to the inhabitants in common for the use of them all. They obtained fuel from it and used it for the pasturage of their cattle. The lots in the "common field," on the other hand, were cultivated by their respective proprietors, each one having a several right. All this is familiar to the Land Office and to the older members of the bar of Saint Louis. The cases of Choteau v. Eckhert, 2 How., 344; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Peters, 410; Mackay v. Dillon, 4 How., 421; Les Bois v. Brammell, 4 How., 449, may be referred to in illustration of the history of the country, and of the operation of the law of June 13, 1812.

By the act of June 13, 1812, any common field lot was confirmed which had been occupied or cultivated prior to December 20, 1803. (The United States acquired the territory of Louisiana from France by treaty dated April 30, 1803, but the change of flags—the actual surrender of the possession—was not made until December 20, 1803.) All that was necessary to be proved in order to make a title under this act was the fact of such occupation or cultivation. (Benton v. Vasseur, 1 Mo., 296; Page v. Scheibel, 11 Mo., 167; Guitard v. Stoddard, 16 How., 494.) This act was passed, no doubt, to indulge the obstinacy, the ignorance, and the prejudice of the old French and Spanish inhabitants of Missouri. A great number of these had failed to avail themselves of the terms of the acts of 1805 and 1807, constituting a Board of Commissioners for the examination and confirmation of titles to land in that territory, although the penalty of forfeiture was denounced against all who failed to bring their claims before that Board. When the Commissioners made their report to Congress, in 1811, they called the attention of that body to this inertness on the part of the villagers and asked for the passage of an act which, proprio vigore, and without any step taken by the villagers, would clothe with a complete title such of them as had, prior to December 20, 1803, occupied, inhabited, cultivated, or possessed a town or village lot, out-lot, or common field lot; and the act of June 13, 1812, was passed in conformity with this suggestion.

Unfortunately, no provision was made for preserving the evidence of such inhabitation, cultivation, or possession prior to December 20, 1803. But so tenacious was the memory of the villagers respecting the occupation of the lots in the towns or villages and of the common fields at the time when the change of flags occurred, that for many years no practical inconvenience was felt from this cause. The fact of such possession, inhabitation, or cultivation was to be judicially ascertained, and when so ascertained it operated a confirmation. The United States was the first to perceive or to foresee the impending mischief, and on May 26, 1824, it passed an act requiring all persons claiming land under the first section of the act of June 13, 1812, to appear within a limited time before the United States recorder of land titles, make proof of possession, inhabitation, or cultivation, and of the extent and boundary of their respective claims, and thereupon to receive a certificate of such proof from that officer. No penalty was annexed to the failure on the part of any claimant to appear before the recorder and make this proof, and it is believed that Congress having once confirmed such claims, and vested a full title on the confirmees, could not, even if it had made the attempt, have defeated the titles thus perfected. It is sufficient to say, however, that the attempt was not made.

Under this act of May 26, 1824, François Fournier appeared before the United States recorder. made proof of his possession, &c., prior to December 20, 1803, and of the extent and boundary of his present claim. As he had sold to Rivance the western half of his lot, by deed dated August 16. 1824, he did not, on June 21, 1825, claim any part of it except what remained after satisfying the claim of Rivance. He obtained a certificate from the recorder, issued on June 21, 1825, setting forth that he had proved to the satisfaction of that officer that he had cultivated, &c., the lot prior to December 20, 1803; and that the extent and boundaries of his [present] claim were as shown in the recorder's certificate; setting forth that the claim was one and one-half arpents in breadth by about 22 arpents in length or depth, bounded west by Rivance (who, it will be remembered, was his vendee), north by land of Julian Chouquette (this was Tabeau's lot originally), and south by land of Berthold, originally Delor de Treget. This lot (the recorder certified) was confirmed by the first section of the act of June 13, 1812; it was surveyed, and is known as United States survey No. 123. Rivance did not appear before the recorder at all. All those who in 1824 could have proved the possession of this lot in 1803 have died, the last of them within the last twenty years. On March 3, 1851, by deed of that date, recorded in book R. No. 5, page 450, of the office of Recorder of Deeds of Saint Louis County, Rivance conveyed this tract of land to Benjamin Gratz for $3,500. Mr. Gratz in his lifetime, and his devisees since his death, have been unable to sell this land because of the objections which have been urged to the evidence of the emanation of the title of the United States. An abstract of title was prepared by Sterling & Webster, and is herewith submitted. I believe this paper to be deserving of credit so far as it represents the contents of the various records of the United States and of the State of Missouri, recited or quoted in it, but it is, I conceive, wholly erroneous in the inferences which it attempts to draw.

In the first place, it is inferred that the land sold by Rivance to Gratz is part of the tract granted in 1773 to Tabeau. This, I think, is clearly wrong. The tract granted to Tabeau was to the north of that granted to Delor de Treget, but separated from it by another lot of like dimensions to that granted to Tabeau; and it was this intervening lot, adjoining that of Delor de Treget on the north, of which Fournier showed himself to have been in possession prior to December 20, 1803.

But this possession, &c., entitled Fournier to a certificate of confirmation to the whole lot, not merely to a part of it, as was decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, in 16 Howard, 451, Gamache v. Peqnignot, affirming the judgment of the supreme court of Missouri (17 Mo. Rep.,310); and so, by irresistible inference, the fact proved by Fournier before the recorder in 1825 shows that Rivance was entitled to a similar certificate as to the part of the lot which he claimed under Fournier. Of course, if the recorder had issued to Fournier a certificate of confirmation for the whole lot, it would have inured to the benefit of his vendee, Rivance, as to the portion sold to him.

Unluckily, as already said, Rivance does not appear to have presented himself before the recorder at all; and that officer had an interest in subdividing a lot and giving a certificate for each subdivision (§ 3 of the act of May 26, 1824). At all events, there is no direct evidence upon the United States records of the confirmation of the western part of the common field lot, the eastern part of which was certified on June 21, 1825, to have been confirmed to Fournier, and which has been surveyed by an approved survey, No. 123. But it is submitted that it is a matter of irresistible inference that the whole lot was confirmed to Fournier or his legal representatives by virtue of the proof, in virtue of which the recorder, on June 21, 1825, issued to Fournier a certificate of confirmation for that part lying east of what he had sold to Rivance. Wherefore, the devisees of Mr. Gratz pray for the passage of an act releasing to the legal representatives of François Fournier, or to the legal representatives of Louis Rivance, the title of the United States as to the portion of the common field lot lying west of United States survey No. 123, and they submit the draft of such an act.

ored to impress, that our Government, because of its present vast domain and late internal war upon sectional lines and issues, desires no enlargement of territory or additional responsibility of control, but rather to renationalize, reunite, and harmonize the vast population it already has; and even if, in the possibly supposed case, Colombia should seek to surrender its nationality by incorporation with us, it would be answered no, and urged to maintenance of its separate Government, with assurance of all sisterly solicitude and readiness on our part to aid in forcibly resisting usurpation of its independence by any foreign power.

From this premise I have proceeded to ask if any European Government would refuse such proffered control; even if there were not some that, but for fear of consequences, would seize any opportunity to forcibly attain it.

By this line of presentation I have sought to establish peculiarity to our Government, and impress that, in the very nature of things, it must be Colombia's most trusted friend.

This is extent of my diplomatic action thus far; and as correct beginning is important to fortunate conclusion, I trust you will yourself consider these features of my first dispatch, to the end of correcting any error or suggesting improvement where I may have been deficient.

Mr. PRESIDENT: In being presented to Your Excellency for official recognition as minister resident near your Government for the United States of America, I should be false to a prime duty were I to neglect effort to express the thorough and profound friendliness of my country and its authorities to the Government and people whose safety, honor, and welfare are so prominently intrusted to Your Excellency as Chief Magistrate.

If with any there has ever been suspicion or mistrust of this friendship, relying that, under rule of the All Perfect, truth must at the end prevail against error, I confide that, with exercise of the calm and conscientious consideration always due in public affairs, such doubt or prejudice will vanish, and be substituted only with reciprocal confidence and good will.

Sir, in the formation of the two nations history but repeated itself. If we of the United States exult in the memory of our Washington and his compatriots, we must recognize their counterparts in your wise and magnanimous Bolivar, your zealous and sagacious Santander, heroic Cardova, whose glorious youth shone resplendent in the clouds of war, and many others who gave up fortune and life for their country's nationality and independence.

As sister republics with such like history and traditions of "Freedom's battle fought and won," it is a faith with the one I have the honor to represent and its people, that while with the broad liberality proper to freemen we should favor and promote every great enterprise or improvement, commercial or other, tending to serve the welfare of mankind; dealing with all such as private or personal interests in perfect honesty, and generously, too, in the degree of their importance; yet, in all matters of political or governmental control, that both nations will heartily concur in the sentiment "America for Americans," and in disposition to sacredly guarantee and maintain the territorial sovereignty of each in accordance with national boundary lines as at present existing.

It remains for me, with sentiments of profound personal respect and esteem, to deliver into Your Excellency's hands this letter of credence from the honored President of my country.

I have found much occupation in removing causeless apprehenand prejudices toward our Government in this matter, and in ad-to views submitted to the authorities here, as set forth in my tch (No. 1), have suggested that the United States Government, all things, desired assured continuance of its present great maprosperity through uninterrupted peace, and upon the principle ounce of prevention being better than a pound of cure, was con-l that unity of the two Governments by treaty, relieving of the ness of isolation, would, in the degree of increased formidability, all assault upon either, and so serve the best interests of both; that nited States envied Colombia no part of the tolls or revenues to rived from the canal, but only sought such conditions as would ely prevent its use, in case of war, for sudden concentration of naval forces to ravage its extended sea-coasts, and in return for as willing to pledge its powers to maintenance of Colombian sov-ity over the limits of Panama, and conditionally to co-operate in se of its entire territory; that as the nature of things had com-l an European policy for Europe, so the time was at hand when ica would find necessity for an American policy, and surely Colom-uld not look elsewhere for advantages equal to those assured by lliance with the United States.

No. 3.

Mr. Maney to the Secretary of State.

No. 8.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Bogota, January 17, 1882.

SIR: * * * The views set forth in inclosure [1] have also been freely used in interviews with prominent citizens here, as I trust with only favorable results, and some days since it was suggested by the second officer of Exterior Relations department, that I should furnish them in writing to the department, as President Nunez was then preparing his message to Congress, and might desire to examine them. This, without making known my reason, however, I declined, preferring first to be advised by you in the particular.

* * * * * * *

I give it as my best judgment, then, to supply the department here with the writing, as suggested, can do no harm, and possibly may result in some advantage.

My reasoning on the matter is, the necessity is upon us to overcome what has been a violent and perhaps yet is a popular opposition, and for this some positive action is required. If the views have any merit, and the authorities here are friendly to them, they will know how to make the best use of them. If unfriendly, having clear knowledge of them from my very frequent and distinct expressions, verbally, they can more easily impair their force by distortion than if they were in writing. Again, if there is opposition by the authorities the result is defeat, unless support is elsewhere obtained, and their publication might posssibly afford this. In this light we would but exchange certainty of defeat for chance of success.

I am, &c.,

GEO. MANEY,
Minister Resident.

[Inclosure 1.]

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Bogota, —— —, 1882.

To the honorable the Minister of Exterior Relations, &c., &c., &c., Bogota:

SIR: I presume to submit to your honorable department certain views touching the truly important international question of the Panama Canal, which have been verbally discussed with several prominent officials of your Government and many of its private citizens, and if there has not been in all instances entire harmony in conclusions it is a pleasure that there was perfectly friendly and respectful feeling between those who differed.

Making this exposition brief as gravity of the matter permits, I will first say, construction of the canal, under proper guarantees against its possible use ever by non-American powers, for other than the purposes of peaceful commerce, would perhaps be more to the immediate benefit of my country than any of the world, since to compete for the vast trade of China and other populous countries of the remote East, its chief centers of production are now at the disadvantage in water carriage of the Atlantic's breadth, farther from the contested markets than European competitors, while the opening of your canal would bring them within about equal distance.

This fact should at once convince of its sincere desire for the construction. But great as would be the advantage, it can be more than counterbalanced by political control of the canal by European powers maintaining immense standing armies and naval forces, and it is to this condition, fecund of future complications dangerous to the entire family of American Governments, that mine is irrevocably opposed, and remembering opportunities favor results, is profoundly anxious that this grave danger shall not be invited by improvident engagement of such powers, in unneces-troy, in place of adding to, the substance, prosperity, and happiness of the coun-

s. Further, by making this matter strictly an American affair, taking, if deemed edient, American guarantees in the premises, will you not as fully secure to your-es all benefits of the canal, and without risk of its ultimate appropriation by those power to forcibly do so, as under the teachings of history has so often occurred ke cases?

this be opposed with assertion that the joint guarantee of the European nations necessity to command the large means requisite for construction, it may be an-ed that it is in your power at will to take the guarantee assuring use of the canal purposes of peaceful commerce to all nations alike, and then violation of faith by e guaranteeing would not only work forfeiture of all their benefits as guaran-but clearly be casus belli to all nations at interest as beneficiaries in a trust, and er this condition how can facilities for commanding means of construction be ned?

or can this course be in the least cause of umbrage to any European power, since xtent that political relations between the different nations of that continent are ll regulated by others, exclusive jurisdiction is claimed and exercised by European ons, and should any Government, not European, propose participation in this, as arranging what is known as "the balance of power," or guaranteeing a opean nationality, it would be met and treated as an unprivileged intruder. First, he ground that its action warranted reasonable suspicion of ulterior, perhaps sin-
, designs, and, further, that, as neighboring inhabitants, theirs were the best op-unities for knowing and the greatest interest to do what was proper in the prem-

Nor is it to be doubted that this exclusiveness of control in such matters would promptly vindicated by force if necessary.

ay it not, then, be respectfully submitted that, as time and conditions have develd the necessity of a policy by Europe for Europe, so there has now come necessity policy by America for America?

egally viewed under the precedent in full thus established for self-regulation by ope, claiming to be foremost in civilization, it follows that in law and morals, nas to nations are under like obligations as men to men, and to this all reason nts; for should each attempt the same absoluteness in matters, though primarily mainly connected with itself, yet seriously affecting the well being of others, as be justly exercised in those affecting itself solely, in the nature of things peace ld bid the world farewell until, by war and conquest, all had been subjugated one.

it not, then, a sequence to both reason and precedent that, as a constituent part his continent, Colombia may not of right ignore her obligations of relation to er American Governments to their injury and danger?

these views are contested with the claim that it is a boast of America that, in land of different institutions, European precedents are without binding force, hence Colombia has absolute and unconditional right to do her pleasure in this ter without consideration of effects for good or evil upon other countries, it be replied, it is a universally accepted principle of law that "none may use

Certain I am that my Government proposes in all relations with others to limit actions to what is sanctioned by precedent and established principles of law; and being both my instruction and disposition to claim for it no virtue not equally co ceded to yours, Colombia's unwillingness to act in disregard of these must be co cluded.

But, passing further consideration of rights and obligations in law and morals, a viewing the matter simply in the light of Colombia's interest, where can be the w dom of seeking joint guarantees of the European powers? If she possessed with herself power adequate to assure all desired conditions respecting the canal, s would neither ask nor permit any other nation to make the guarantees in questic and this for the sufficient reason of dangerous complications necessarily possible not incident to such foreign guarantees.

Surely no Colombian will dispute this proposition. With then the single guara tee of the United States there is but one risk of such complication, whilst with fi guarantees there will be five such risks, and so on in proportion to the number gua anteeing. Is not diminution of such dangers sound wisdom in the serious matter government?

Nor may we forget in this connection the fate of seizure and permanent retenti by European powers of all great strategic positions of the world, Gibraltar at tl straits, Cypress at head, and other points at foot of the Suez Canal, together wi presently impending threat to Egypt through the jealous strife of England ar France for supremacy over that eastern connection of oceans. Further, was the i tegrity of Turkey preserved, or its dismemberment realized under a joint guarant of European powers, and does experience afford better means to judge the futu than by the past?

If assurance is demanded against possible seizure by the United States Gover ment, the answer may be: First: It holds as a fundamental principle that "i government rests upon consent of the governed"; hence with it usurpation would self-violence. Second: For thirty-five years its single guarantee, faithfully kept, h amply secured to Colombia all her rights of sovereignty and property over the enti isthmus.

And if its well-attested high sense of right and justice need be supported wi reasons of expediency, it may be added that, owing to its late trying civil w growing out of sectional lines and interests, it is without disposition to prom danger of recurrence of such misfortune by enlarging margin for antagonisms, eitl in extending its immense territorial possessions or adding to its responsibilities government. So, in case—supposed, merely for the argument and freely akno edged impossible—should Colombia even seek to transfer to the United States the sponsibility of absolute dominion over the canal and adjacent territory necessary the object, as it would be new in practice, and foreign to the spirit and character that Government to maintain permanent military garrisons beyond its limits, it wo most probably answer that this could be to the advantage of neither, and urge Colo bia to maintain her sovereignty intact, with the assurance of readiness to aid in resi ing any attempt at usurpation of this by others. In a word, under present persuasi that the two are by force of conditions bound to friendship, the United States Gove ment may reasonably prefer Colombia's ownership of the canal to its own, but be t as it may, it is clearly proven by long and scrupulous fidelity to treaty obligations the matter that my Government could only be prompted to attempt even tempor appropriation of any part of Colombia's domain by conviction of necessity, to prev its forcible rape by some less friendly power, to the dangerous exposure of its o security, and that of all other American Governments. So, danger to Colombia's tegrity through designs of the United States is simply impossible; and in this is th not just claim to peculiarity, since any of the European powers would gladly acc Colombia in whole or part as an appendage even if some, but for fear of results, wo not repeat history by inventing excuse for forcible seizure?

These views have impressed. That because of its importance in the future American affairs, and especially of its benefits to our two republics, sooner or la a treaty of friendship, thoroughly identifying them in interest, is destiny, and ev should public men in both labor against this, they can only delay, not defeat, fa for when we are dust, if not before, it will be accomplished. But may it not be r sonably hoped of the intelligence and patriotism of those now officially intrusted wi the welfare of each that they will, by speeding the end, more immediately secure both the immense advantages to follow, and win to themselves continued confide as benefactors to their countries.

In conclusion, with assurances of profound respect and friendliness on part of Government to the Government and people of Colombia,

I am, sir, &c.,

GEO. MANEY

l, which, with inclosures heretofore made in dispatch No. 8, com-supplement or elaboration of points heretofore suggested in reference to the ma Canal, the following is respectfully submitted:

thout discussing the propriety in taste or policy of a nation's indicating its in-ity of self-protection by seeking or accepting indiscriminately from others guars of sovereignty, or property in what is its undisputed own, it should not be for-n, as both experience and history, that complications incident, if not inherent, ch guarantees may promote danger rather than security to the end proposed.
inly in the premises here considered chances of such complications, together with rtunities of seizure, are multiplied in proportion to the numbers so guaranteeing, bjections in this respect are surely not weakened by the fact that the canal cann possibility be completed within ten years. Would it not be wiser, then, to : its completion before entering into engagements so serious in connection with
He is a rash man who will declare even the near future, and scarce a rational ho will answer for that of a decade. Precipitate or premature action in this grave matter may easily be followed by only regrets through all time to come, and certainly in the present there is no pressing reason for incurring such risks or disturbing the status quo.

But to further consideration of the relations of nations to this truly international enterprise—to the question, has the United States any right or claim upon Colombia's property in the canal different or superior to that of other foreign nations, the answer is, as to its uses solely for peaceful commerce, none; but with respect to its uses for war purposes, yes, as against all others than those of America. And this because, as a means of sudden concentration of large naval forces, it can contribute to the injury or destruction of American Governments, but not possibly to that of any European. The security of the two being thus unequal in the matter, their relations to it are of right correspondingly different; for surely the instinct to self-preservation and self-security, common to all nature, beyond being excusable, is commendable in governments, by reason of their paramount importance. Nor can it be overlooked that this is an affair from which the United States Government, because of geographical and other natural relations, could not, if it would, disengage itself.

To the proposition that the United States Government enter into a joint guarantee of the canal, it may be replied that, apart from its cherished tradition, "Friendship to all nations, entangling alliances with none," it would illy accord with its accustomed prudence that, conscious of its own upright and peaceful intentions, yet ignorant of those of others, it should so involve itself in responsibility for the action of European powers, which, even if of good purposes to-day, are likely throughout the future to maintain all present vast preparations for wars and conquests. If insisted that, under the joint guarantee, danger of seizure will be secured against by all being a check upon appropriation by either, and that such course is necessary to command the large means requisite for construction, it may be answered the guarantee in any case would be upon the terms prescribed by the sovereign Colombian Government, and these being "free and equal use of the canal for peaceful commerce to all nations alike," if the guarantee be not thereby fully effected to Colombia's best advantage, through the interest of all to prevent seizure by any, in so making it exclusively the United States Government would plainly become, as it were, a trustee, and compelled to fidelity in its trusts, since violation of them would not only work forfeiture of all rights and benefits as guarantor, but clearly be casus belli to all nations at interest. With such conditions how can facilities for commanding means of construction be diminished; and, in addition, have you not all nations held to your protection by the bond of self-interest without the temptation of opportunity for your spoliation?

Naturally American policies will form a basis for popular politics in America; but let us see if the maxim, "America for Americans," is not above all mere ad captandum, and so founded in reason as to afford, equally with any other immutable law, benefits or penalties, according to its observance or neglect, alike to all.

The United States Government, in the desire of more intimate and friendly relations with its sister republics of the south, may be willing to adopt your canal for all future purposes, and so secure to it exclusiveness as a western inter-oceanic communication, upon condition, however, of its impossible use to its injury in event of the misfortune of war with any great maritime power; but without this security it will naturally look to construction of another which it can control for its defense and protection; and with its immense wealth and progress, who will doubt its capacity to obtain this? With the experience, too, acquired in construction of yours, another can be built through several parts of the narrow land connecting the two Americas, at an equal if not less cost, and any from the Nicaragua route to Tehuantepec, having decisive advantage over yours in water distance between all great trade points. Suppose, then, your enterprise should be duplicated through either of these localities. The United States would secure an inner line, and one much shorter, upon which to manœuver a navy in case of war. But war in this age of enlightenment is not the normal condition of nations; and in peace this, upon all promptings of interest, would be freely and equally opened to commerce, with advantage over yours of difference in distance between all the chief commercial centers of the world of more than a thousand miles in each round voyage.

Need the suggestion be pressed or elaborated?

With a rival possessing such overwhelming advantage, your canal, instead of bearing through Colombian territory the vast commerce of Europe and Atlantic America to and from the dense populations of Asia, may fall from the magnificence of a monopoly into absolute neglect; and if its construction be a question of money, though this grave danger escape the statesmanship of Colombia, it certainly will not the attention of capital, which will be repelled rather than invited to an investment so hazardous.

Are not these views pursuasive, that, above and beyond prejudices or passions of an hour, our two republics are bound to alliance for mutual protection by a fixed law, holding inexorably the penalty of calamity for either which may disregard it?

GEORGIA.

SENATORS.

Joseph E. Brown, of Atlanta, Georgia, was born in Pickens District, South Carolina, April 15, 1821; when he was a boy, his father moved to Georgia; he was educated at Calhoun Academy, South Carolina; he taught school in Canton, Georgia; he was admitted to the bar in August, 1845; he afterwards graduated in Yale College Law School, and returned to Georgia and commenced the practice of law in 1846; in 1849 he was elected to the State Senate; in 1852 he was a Pierce Elector; in 1855 he was elected Judge of the Superior Courts of the Blue Ridge Circuit; in 1857 he was elected Governor by the Democratic party over Hon. Benjamin H. Hill; re-elected in 1859 over Hon. Warren Aiken. He was a Secessionist in 1860, and was active and energetic as a war Governor after the State had seceded. In 1861 he was again elected Governor over the Hon. Eugenius A. Nisbet; in 1863 he was again a candidate for Governor, and opposed by Hon. Joshua Hill, an original Union man, and Hon. Timothy Furlow, an original Secessionist; Governor Brown was elected over both by a handsome majority. During the war, Governor Brown opposed the policy of President Davis on the conscript act, but threw no obstacles in the way of the execution of the law by the Confederate Government; he simply discussed with the President the constitutionality of the measure. After the surrender he advocated acquiescence in the reconstruction measures, and became very unpopular on account of his recommendation that the people acquiesce and carry them out in good faith. As the Democratic party opposed these measures, as a reconstructionist he voted for General Grant, who favored them. During the Legislature of 1868 he was nominated by the Republicans for United States Senator, and defeated by Hon. Joshua Hill, which was the only defeat of his life; in every instance when he has been a candidate before the people he has been successful. After his defeat for Senator he was appointed by Governor Bullock Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia, which position he held till December, 1870, when he resigned and accepted the presidency of the Western Atlantic Railroad Company. He then devoted his life to business pursuits, being a candidate for no office, but acting with the Democratic party since 1872 upon the reconstruction platform. When General Gordon resigned his position in the Senate Governor Brown was appointed to fill the vacancy; he was afterwards elected over General A. R. Lawton, his opponent, by over a two-thirds majority of the Legislature. His term of service will expire March 3, 1885.

COUNTIES.—Alexander, Alleghany, Ashe, Davie, Forsyth, Iredell, Rowan, Surry, Watauga, Wilkes, and Yadkin.

Tyre York, of Trap Hill, was born in Rockford, Surry County, North Carolina, May 4, 1836; received a common-school education, read medicine, and became a student of the Charleston Medical College, of South Carolina; after receiving his medical education, he returned home and commenced the practise of his profession, and in 1859 moved to his present residence in the county of Wilkes; was a Union man during the war; was not in the Army, but served during the latter part of the war as Surgeon of Home Guards, and at the close of the war in 1865 his people solicited him to represent them in the State Legislature; he became a candidate, and was elected to the House of Representatives, and for the last eighteen years he has served his people either in the House of Representatives or the State Senate; his fidelity to his people has won their confidence, and at each succeeding election they have returned him with an increased majority. Doctor York was an active Democratic leader in his section of the State until the question of prohibition was brought before the Legislature of 1880–'81, at the time being Chairman of the joint caucus of the Democratic party; he strongly urged his Democratic friends not to suffer the bill to pass the Legislature, and was the only member of the Senate that made a speech against the measure, and when the bill had passed, he returned home and took the stump against the ratification of the bill, and did more to defeat the measure than any other one man in the State; the campaign brought about much bitterness, the result of which was that Dr. York was nominated by the liberal Democrats of his district and indorsed by the Republicans for a seat in the Forty-eighth Congress. Major Robbins, who had served three terms in Congress, was the regular Democratic nominee, and Dr. Cook was an independent strait-out Republican candidate. The campaign was a long and bitter one; the Democratic majority of the district had usually been about 4,000; this was to overcome, also the Independent, Cook, who carried 1,000 votes in the district, yet the champion of the people's liberties overcame his competitors by a majority of 258 votes.

The Library of Congress occupies the entire western projection of the central Capitol building. The original library was commenced in 1800, but was destroyed with the Capitol in 1814 during the war with England. It was afterwards replenished by the purchase of the library belonging to Ex-President Jefferson, by Congress, embracing about 7,000 volumes In 1851 it contained 55,000 volumes, and by an accidental fire in that year the whole collection was destroyed, except 20,000 volumes. It was rebuilt in 1852, when $75,000 was appropriated in one sum to replenish the collection. The new library halls, three in number are fitted up with ornamental iron cases and iron ceilings, the whole being perfectly fireproof. The library is recruited by regular appropriations made by Congress, which average about $11,000 per annum; also by additions received by copyright, by exchanges, and from the Smithsonian Institution. The library of the Smithsonian Institution has now been deposited in the Library of Congress, where it is secured against loss by fire. This collection is especially rich in scientific works, embracing the largest assemblage of the transactions of learned societies which exists in the country. The library was also enriched by the presentation to the Government, in 1882, of the large private library of Dr. Joseph M. Toner, of Washington, numbering over 27,000 volumes, besides nearly as many pamphlets. The donor whose public spirit is worthy of emulation, adds to the collection annually. The library of copyright books was removed here from the Patent Office in 1870, and all copyrights issued in the United States are now recorded in the books deposited in the office of the Librarian of Congress. The present number of volumes in the whole library, including law books, which are kept in a separate library room under the Supreme Court, is over 525,000, besides about 170,000 pamphlets. A new building to contain its overflowing stores of learning and to afford room for their proper arrangement has become a necessity. This collection is very rich in history, political science, jurisprudence, and in books, pamphlets, and periodicals of American publication, or relating in any way to America. At the same time the library is a universal one in its range, no department of literature or science being unrepresented. The public are privileged to use the books in the library, while members of Congress and about thirty official members of the Government only can take away books. The library is open every day (Sundays excepted) during the session of Congress from 9 a. m. to the hour of adjournment. In the recess of Congress it is open between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m.

THE CAPITOL.

apitol fronts the east, and stands on a plateau eighty-eight feet above the level of the , in latitude 38° 53′ 20″.4 north and longitude 77° 00′ 35″.7 west from Greenwich.
outheast corner-stone of the original building was laid on the 18th of September, 1793, dent Washington, aided by the Freemasons of Maryland. It was constructed of sand- uinted white, from an island in Aquia Creek, Virginia, under the direction of Stephen ett, James Hoban, Geo. Hadfield, and afterwards of B. H. Latrobe, architects. The ing was finished in 1800 and the south wing in 1811, a wooden passage-way connect- n. On the 24th of August, 1814, the interior of both wings was destroyed by British uries, but they were immediately rebuilt. In 1818, the central portion of the building mmenced under the architectural superintendence of Charles Bulfinch, and the original g was finally completed in 1827. Its cost, including the grading of the grounds, alter- nd repairs, up to 1827, was $2,433,844.13.
corner-stone to the extensions of the Capitol was laid on the 4th of July, 1851, by Pres- illmore, Daniel Webster officiating as orator of the day. Thomas U. Walter was arch- d subsequently Edward Clark, under whose direction the work was completed in No- , 1867. The material used for the extensions is white marble from the quarries at Lee, husetts, with white marble columns from the quarries at Cockeysville, Maryland.

The extensions are placed at the north and south the main building, with connecting corridors forty-four feet long by fifty-six feet wide, by columns. Each extension is one hundred and forty-two feet eight inches in front, hundred and thirty-eight feet ten inches deep, with porticos of twenty-two columns each r eastern fronts, and with porticos of ten columns on their ends and on their western The entire length of the building is seven hundred and fifty-one feet four inches, and ntest depth, including porticos and steps, is three hundred and twenty-four feet. The vered by the entire building is one hundred and fifty-three thousand one hundred and square feet.
lome is crowned by a bronze statue of Freedom, modeled by Crawford, which is nine- t six inches high, and which weighs 14,985 pounds. The height of the dome above e-line of the east front is two hundred and eighty-seven feet five inches; the height top of the balustrade of the building is two hundred and seventeen feet eleven inches; greatest diameter at the base is one hundred and thirty-five feet five inches. otunda is ninety-five feet six inches in diameter, and its height from the floor to the e canopy is one hundred and eighty feet three inches.
enate Chamber is one hundred and thirteen feet three inches in length, by eighty feet hes in width, and thirty-six feet in height. Its galleries will accommodate one thou- sons.
epresentatives' Hall is one hundred and thirty-nine feet in length, by ninety-three feet , and thirty-six feet in height.
upreme Court room was occupied by the Senate until December, 1859, the court hav- iously occupied the room beneath, now used as a law library.
ibrary of Congress was burned by the British in 1814, and was partially destroyed by ental fire in 1851. The present centre hall was finished in 1853, and the wing halls shed in 1867.

[From the Department of Justice.]

The examination of questions of law and other matters submitted by the Secretary or the Assistant Secretary, and of all claims.

THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

The Secretary of the Treasury has charge of the national finances. He digests and prepares plans for the improvement and management of the revenue and support of the public credit; he superintends the collection of the revenue, and prescribes the forms of keeping and rendering all public accounts, and making returns; grants all warrants for money to be issued from the Treasury in pursuance of appropriations by law; makes report and gives information to either branch of Congress, as may be required, respecting all matters referred to him by the Senate or House of Representatives, and generally performs all such services relative to the finances as he is directed to perform; controls the erection of public buildings, the coinage and printing of money, the collection of commercial statistics, the marine hospitals, the revenue-cutter service, the life-saving service. Under his superintendence the Light-House Board discharges the duties relative to the construction, illumination, inspection, and superintendence of light-houses, light-vessels, beacons, buoys, sea-marks, and their appendages; makes provision for the payment of the public debt under enactments of Congress, and publishes statements concerning it, and submits to Congress, at the commencement of each session, estimates of the probable receipts, and of the required expenditures, for the ensuing fiscal year.

The routine work of the Secretary's office is transacted in the following offices: Division of Appointments; Division of Warrants, Estimates, and Appropriations; Division of Public Moneys; Division of Customs; Division of Internal Revenue and Navigation; Division of Loans and Currency; Division of Revenue Marine; Division of Stationery, Printing, and Blanks; Division of Special Agent; and two disbursing clerks pay the salaries and compensation of the officers and employés of the Department, and disburse upon the orders of the Secretary, such moneys as have been appropriated to be expended under the direction of the Department.

ASSISTANT SECRETARIES OF THE TREASURY.

One of the two Assistant Secretaries (now Hon. H. F. French) has the general supervision of all the work assigned to the Divisions of Customs, Special Agents, Revenue Marine, Internal Revenue and Navigation, and to the offices of Supervising Architect, General Superintendent Life-Saving Service, Supervising Surgeon-General of the Marine Hospital Service, Bureau of Statistics, and Supervising Inspector-General of Steamboats; the signing of all letters and papers as Assistant Secretary, or "by order of the Secretary," relating to the business of the foregoing divisions, that do not by law require the signature of the Secretary of the Treasury; the performance of such other duties as may be prescribed by the Secretary or by law.

The other Assistant Secretary (now Hon. John C. New) has the general supervision of all the work assigned to the Divisions of Appointments, Warrants, Estimates, and Appropriations, Public Moneys, Stationery, Printing and Blanks, Loans and Currency, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and office of the Director of the Mint; signing of all letters and papers as Assistant Secretary, or "by order of the Secretary," relating to the business of the foregoing divisions and bureau, that do not by law require the signature of the Secretary of the Treasury; the performance of such other duties as may be prescribed by the Secretary or by law.

THE CHIEF CLERK.

The Chief Clerk supervises, under the immediate direction of the Secretary and Assistant Secretaries, the duties of the clerks and employés connected with the Department. The superintendence of all buildings occupied by the Department in this city, the transmission of the mails; the care of all horses, wagons, and carriages employed, the direction of engineers, machinists, firemen, or laborers. The expenditure of the appropriations for contingent expenses of the Treasury Department; for furniture and repairs of same; fuel, lights, water, and miscellaneous items for buildings under the control of the Department; the distribution of the mail; the custody of the records and files and library of the Secretary's Office, the answering of calls from Congress, and elsewhere, for copies of papers, records, &c. Supervision of all the official correspondence of the Secretary's Office, so far as to see that it is expressed in correct and official form; the enforcement of the general regulations of the Department, and the charge of all business of the Secretary's Office not assigned.

THE FIRST COMPTROLLER.

The First Comptroller countersigns all warrants issued by the Secretary of the Treasury covering the public revenues into the Treasury, and authorizing payments therefrom. All accounts examined by the First Auditor, except those which go to the Commissioner of Customs, and all examined by the Fifth Auditor, and accounts of Registers and Receivers of land-offices examined by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, are re-examined and revised in the First Comptroller's Office. Here, also, are examined and reported on the drafts for salaries and expenses drawn by ministers and consuls abroad, and the requisitions for advances drawn by marshals, collectors of internal revenue, secretaries of the Territories, and other disbursing-officers. Powers of attorney for the collection of drafts on the Treasury are examined; and many other duties, having reference to the adjustment of claims against the United States, pertain to the office, but are of too varied a character to be enumerated.

THE SECOND COMPTROLLER.

Accounts received from the Second, Third, and Fourth Auditors against the United States are examined, revised, and certified to, viz: Reported by the Second Auditor—for organizing volunteers, recruiting, pay of the Army, special military accounts, Army ordnance, the Indian service, the Army Medical Department, contingent military expenses, bounty to soldiers, the Soldiers' Home, and the National Home for Disabled Volunteers. Reported by the Third Auditor—disbursements by the Quartermaster's Department, the Subsistence Department, the Engineer Department, Army pensions, property taken by military authority for the use of the Army, and miscellaneous war-claims. Reported by the Fourth Auditor—disbursements for the Marine Corps, by the Navy paymasters for pay and rations, by the paymasters at the navy-yards, for Navy pensions at foreign stations, and the financial agent at London.

These accounts are examined in Divisions, devoted respectively to the affairs of Army Paymasters, Army Quartermasters, Navy Paymasters and the Marine Corps, Army Pensions, Miscellaneous Claims, and Indian Affairs.

THE COMMISSIONER OF CUSTOMS.

The Commissioner of Customs revises and certifies the accounts of revenues collected from duties on imports and tonnage; of moneys received on account of the marine-hospital fund; fines, penalties, and forfeitures under the customs and navigation laws; steamboat inspection; licenses to pilots, engineers, &c.; and from miscellaneous sources connected with customs matters, accounts of the importation, withdrawal, transportation, and exportation of goods under the warehouse system; for disbursements for the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs, revenue-cutter service, construction and maintenance of lights, marine hospitals, debentures, excess of deposits for unascertained duties, refund of duties exacted in excess, life-saving service, construction of custom-houses and marine hospitals; fuel, light, water, &c., for custom-houses, &c.; approves and files the official bonds given by customs officers, and transmits their commissions; files the oaths of office of the persons paid in the accounts certified by him; and prepares for the use of the law officers of the Department the accounts of those in arrears under the heads above mentioned.

The office is organized in four divisions, viz: Customs, Bookkeeper's, Bond, and Miscellaneous.

THE FIRST AUDITOR.

It is the duty of the First Auditor to receive all accounts accruing in the Treasury Department, (except those arising under the internal revenue laws,) and, after examination, to certify the balance, and transmit the accounts, with the vouchers and certificate, to the First Comptroller or to the Commissioner of Customs, having respectively the revision thereof. The subordinate divisions of his office are—

Customs Division.—Receipts and expenditures of the customs service, including fines, emoluments, forfeitures, debentures, drawbacks, marine-hospital service, revenue-cutter service, &c.,

Judiciary Division.—Salaries of United States marshals, district attorneys, commissioners and clerks; rent of court-houses, support of prisoners, &c.

Public Debt Division.—Redemption of the public debt, including principal, premium, and interest; payment of interest; redemption of certificates of deposit; notes destroyed.

ROLLS AND LIBRARY.

Custody of the rolls, treaties, &c.; promulgation of the laws, &c.; care and superintendence of the library and public documents; care of the revolutionary archives, and of papers relating to international commissions.

STATISTICS.

Preparation of the reports upon Commercial Relations.

EXAMINER OF CLAIMS.

[From the Department of Justice.]

The examination of questions of law and other matters submitted by the Secretary or the Assistant Secretary, and of all claims.

THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

The Attorney-General is the head of the Department of Justice, and the chief law officer of the Government. He represents the United States in matters involving legal questions; he gives his advice and opinion on questions of law when they are required by the President, or the heads of the other Executive Departments on questions of law arising upon the administration of their respective Departments; he exercises a general superintendence and direction over United States Attorneys and Marshals in all judicial districts in the States and Territories; and he provides special counsel for the United States whenever required by any Department of the Government.

He is assisted by a Chief Clerk and other clerks and employés in the executive management of the business of the Department.

The Law Clerk, who is also an Examiner of Titles, assists the Attorney-General in the investigation of legal questions and in the preparation of opinions.

THE SOLICITOR-GENERAL.

The Solicitor-General assists the Attorney-General in the performance of his general duties, and by special provision of law in the case of a vacancy in the office of Attorney-General, or in his absence, exercises all these duties. Except when the Attorney-General in particular cases otherwise directs, the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General conduct and argue all cases in the Supreme Court, and in the Court of Claims, in which the United States are interested; and, when the Attorney-General so directs, any such case in any court of the United States may be conducted and argued by the Solicitor-General; and in the same way the Solicitor-General may be sent by the Attorney-General to attend to the interests of the United States in any State court, or elsewhere.

THE ASSISTANT ATTORNEYS-GENERAL.

Two Assistant Attorneys-General assist the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General in the performance of their duties. One assists in the argument of causes in the Supreme Court and in the preparation of legal opinions; the other is charged with the conduct of the defence of the United States in the Court of Claims.

Under the act of 1870 the different law officers of the Executive Departments exercise their functions under the supervision and control of the Attorney-General. They are: the Assistant Attorney-General for the Department of the Interior; the Assistant Attorney-General for the Post-Office Department; the Solicitor of the Treasury; and the Solicitor of Internal Revenue, Treasury Department; the Naval Solicitor, Navy Department; and the Examiner of Claims, State Department.

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

THE COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE.

The Commissioner of Agriculture is required to collect and diffuse useful information on subjects connected with agriculture. He is to acquire and preserve in his office all information he can obtain concerning agriculture by means of books and correspondence, and by practical and scientific experiments, the collection of statistics, and other appropriate means to collect new and valuable seeds and plants; to learn by actual cultivation such of them as may require such tests; to propagate such as may be worthy of propagation, and to distribute them among agriculturists.

The Statistician.—He collects reliable information as to the condition, prospects, and results of the cereal, cotton, and other crops, by the instrumentality of four correspondents in each county of every State; this information is gathered at stated periods of each month, carefully studied, estimated, tabulated, and published.

The Entomologist.—He obtains information with regard to insects injurious to vegetation, investigates the character of insects sent him, to point out their modes of infliction and the means by which their depredations may be avoided; and arranges specimens of their injuries and nest architecture.

The Botanist.—He receives botanical contributions, and after making desirable selections for the National Herbarium, distributes the duplicate plants among foreign and domestic scientific societies, institutions of learning, and botanists; and answers inquiries of botanical agricultural character.

The Chemist.—He makes analyses of natural fertilizers, vegetable products, and other materials which pertain to the interests of agriculture. Applications are constantly made from all portions of the country for the analysis of soils, minerals, liquids, and manures.

The Microscopist.—He makes original investigations, mostly relating to the habits of parasitic fungoid plants, which are frequently found on living plants and animals, producing sickly growth and in many cases premature death.

The Propagating Garden.—Large numbers of exotic, utilizable, and economic plants are propagated and distributed. The orange family is particularly valuable, and the best commercial varieties are propagated and distributed to the greatest practicable extent.

The Seed Division.—Seeds are purchased in this and foreign countries of reliable firms whose guarantee of good quality and genuineness cannot be questioned; they are packed in the Department, and distributed to applicants in all parts of the country.

The Library.—Exchanges are made, by which the library receives reports of the leading agricultural, pomological, and meteorological societies of the world.

UNITED STATES POSTAL REGULATIONS.

FIRST-CLASS MATTER.

Letters, matter wholly or partly in writing, printed or other matter containing a written inscription in the nature of personal correspondence, drawings, plans, designs, samples with prices or width noted thereon in writing, and matter which is sealed against inspection, are first-class matter, and subject to the postage rate of two cents for each half ounce or fraction thereof.

On local or drop letters two cents for each half ounce or fraction thereof.

Postal cards having anything attached, or having writing or printing on the face, other than the address, are subject to letter rates of postage.

SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

Embraces all newspapers and other periodical publications which are issued at stated intervals, and as frequently as four times a year, and are within the following conditions: First. It must be regularly issued at stated intervals, as frequently as four times a year, and bear a date of issue. Second. It must be formed of printed paper sheets, without board, cloth, leather, or other substantial binding, such as distinguish printed books for preservation from periodical publications. Fourth. It must be originated and published for the dissemination of information of a public character, or devoted to literature, the sciences, arts, or some special industry, and having a legitimate list of subscribers: Provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to admit to the second-class rate regular publications designed primarily for advertising purposes, or for free circulation, or for circulation at nominal rates.

THIRD-CLASS MATTER.

Embraces books, circulars, proof-sheets, corrected proof-sheets with manuscript copy accompanying the same, and all matter of the same general character, as above enumerated, designed to instruct or to impart general information, and postage shall be paid thereon at the rate of one cent for each two ounces or fractional part thereof.

On newspapers and periodical publications of the second class, when sent by others than the publisher or news agent, the postage shall be prepaid at the rate of one cent for each four ounces or fractional part thereof.

FOURTH-CLASS MATTER.

Embraces labels, patterns, photographs, playing cards, visiting cards, address tags, paper sacks, wrapping paper, and blotting pads with or without printed advertisements thereon, bill-heads, letter-heads, envelopes with printed addresses thereon, ornamented paper, and all other matter of the same general character, the printing upon which is not designed to instruct, amuse, cultivate the mind or taste, or impart general information. This class also includes merchandise, and samples of merchandise, models, samples of ores, metals, minerals, seeds, etc., and any other matter not included in the first, second, or third classes, and which is not in its form or nature liable to destroy, deface, or otherwise damage the contents of the mail bag, or harm the person. Postage rate thereon, one cent for each ounce or fractional part thereof.

PERMISSIBLE WRITING.

No writing is permitted on third or fourth-class matter except as follows: name and address of sender on the outside or inside of package, preceded by the word "from." On the wrapper may also be written the names and number of articles inclosed. The sender is further allowed to mark a word or passage in a book or paper to which he desires to call special attention. He may also write a simple inscription or dedication upon the cover or blank leaves of a book or pamphlet. Printed circulars may contain the written name of the sender, or of the addressee, and the date. Any other writing on third or fourth-class matter will subject the package to letter rates of postage, and render the sender liable to a fine of ten dollars for each offense. Printed matter may be inclosed with fourth-class matter, but the whole package is subject to the rate of one cent per ounce or fraction thereof.

CONGRESSIONAL DIRECTORY.

MEMBERS OF THE FORTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS.

ALABAMA.

SENATORS.

John T. Morgan, of Selma, was born at Athens, Tennessee, June 20, 1824; received an academic education, chiefly in Alabama, to which State he emigrated when nine years old, and has since resided there; studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1845, and practised until his election to the Senate; was a Presidential Elector in 1860 for the State at large, and voted for Breckinridge and Lane; was a Delegate in 1861 from Dallas County to the State Convention which passed the ordinance of secession; joined the Confederate Army, in May, 1861, as a private in Company I, Cahaba Rifles, and when that company was assigned to the Fifth Alabama Regiment, under Col. Robert E. Rodes, he was elected Major and afterward Lieutenant-Colonel of that regiment; was commissioned in 1862 as Colonel and raised the Fifty-first Alabama Regiment; was appointed Brigadier-General in 1863, and assigned to a brigade in Virginia, but resigned to rejoin his regiment, whose colonel had been killed in battle; later in 1863 he was again appointed Brigadier-General, and assigned to an Alabama brigade, which included his regiment; after the war, he resumed the practice of his profession at Selma; was chosen a Presidential Elector for the State at large in 1876, and voted for Tilden and Hendricks; was elected to the United States Senate as a Democrat, to succeed George Goldthwaite, Democrat; took his seat March 5, 1877, and was re-elected in 1882. His term of service will expire March 3, 1889.

James L. Pugh, of Eufaula, was born in Burke County, Georgia, December 12, 1820; received an academic education in Alabama and Georgia; came to Alabama when four years old, where he has since resided; was licensed to practise law in 1841, and was so employed when elected to the Senate; was Taylor Elector in 1848, Buchanan Elector in 1856, and State Elector for Tilden in 1876; was elected to Congress, without opposition, in 1859; retired from the Thirty-sixth Congress when Alabama ordained to secede from the Union; joined the Eufaula Rifles, in the First Alabama Regiment, as a private; was elected to the Confederate Congress in 1861, and re-elected in 1863; after the war, resumed the practice of the law; was President of the State Convention of the Democratic party in 1874; was member of the Convention that framed the State Constitution of 1875; was elected to the Senate as a Democrat, to fill the balance of the term made vacant by the death of George S. Houston. Took his seat December 6, 1880, and was re-elected in 1884. His term of office will expire March 3, 1891.

REPRESENTATIVES.

COUNTIES.—Choctaw, Clarke, Marengo, Mobile, Monroe, and Washington.

James Taylor Jones, of Demopolis, was born at Richmond, Virginia, in 1832, and removed with his father to Marengo County, Alabama, when two years old; received a classical education, graduating from Princeton College, New Jersey, in 1852, and from the Law School of the University of Virginia in 1855; was admitted to the bar in 1856, and has since been engaged in the practice of his profession, with the exception of four years during the war, when was he a private and afterwards an officer in the Fourth Alabama Regiment; was a Delegate to the Alabama State Constitutional Convention in 1865; was a State Senator in 1872–'73; was elected to the Forty-fifth Congress in 1876, and to the Forty-eighth Congress as a Democrat, in July, 1883, to succeed Thomas H. Herndon, deceased, receiving 6,561 votes against 1,503 votes for Philip Joseph, Republican. Re-elected.

GEORGIA.

SENATORS.

Joseph E. Brown, of Atlanta, Georgia, was born in Pickens District, South Carolina, April 15, 1821; when he was a boy, his father moved to Georgia; he was educated at Calhoun Academy, South Carolina; he taught school in Canton, Georgia; he was admitted to the bar in August, 1845; he afterwards graduated in Yale College Law School, and returned to Georgia and commenced the practice of law in 1846; in 1849 he was elected to the State Senate; in 1852 he was a Pierce Elector; in 1855 he was elected Judge of the Superior Courts of the Blue Ridge Circuit; in 1857 he was elected Governor by the Democratic party over Hon. Benjamin H. Hill; re-elected in 1859 over Hon. Warren Aiken. He was a Secessionist in 1860, and was active and energetic as a war Governor after the State had seceded. In 1861 he was again elected Governor over the Hon. Eugenius A. Nisbet; in 1863 he was again a candidate for Governor, and opposed by Hon. Joshua Hill, an original Union man, and Hon. Timothy Furlow, an original Secessionist; Governor Brown was elected over both by a handsome majority. During the war, Governor Brown opposed the policy of President Davis on the conscript act, but threw no obstacles in the way of the execution of the law by the Confederate Government; he simply discussed with the President the constitutionality of the measure. After the surrender he advocated acquiescence in the reconstruction measures, and became very unpopular on account of his recommendation that the people acquiesce and carry them out in good faith. As the Democratic party opposed these measures, as a reconstructionist he voted for General Grant, who favored them. During the Legislature of 1868 he was nominated by the Republicans for United States Senator, and defeated by Hon. Joshua Hill, which was the only defeat of his life; in every instance when he has been a candidate before the people he has been successful. After his defeat for Senator he was appointed by Governor Bullock Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia, which position he held till December, 1870, when he resigned and accepted the presidency of the Western Atlantic Railroad Company. He then devoted his life to business pursuits, being a candidate for no office, but acting with the Democratic party since 1872 upon the reconstruction platform. When General Gordon resigned his position in the Senate Governor Brown was appointed to fill the vacancy; he was afterwards elected over General A. R. Lawton, his opponent, by over a two-thirds majority of the Legislature. His term of service will expire March 3, 1885.

Alfred Holt Colquitt, of Atlanta, was born in Walton County, Georgia, April 20, 1824; graduated at Princeton College, New Jersey, in the class of 1844; studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1845; served as a staff officer, with the rank of Major, during the Mexican war; was elected and served as a member of the Thirty-third Congress; was a member of the Georgia Legislature in 1859; was a Presidential Elector for the State at large on the Breckinridge ticket in 1860; was a member of the Secession Convention of the State of Georgia; entered the Confederate service as Captain; was subsequently chosen Colonel of the Sixth Georgia Infantry; served as a Brigadier-General, and was commissioned as a Major-General; was elected Governor of the State of Georgia in 1876 for four years, and was re-elected under a new constitution for two years; at the expiration of his term as Governor, he was elected to the United States Senate as a Democrat, to succeed Pope Barrow, Democrat, for the full term commencing March 4, 1883. SEVENTH DISTRICT.

COUNTIES.—Alexander, Alleghany, Ashe, Davie, Forsyth, Iredell, Rowan, Surry, Watauga, Wilkes, and Yadkin.

Tyre York, of Trap Hill, was born in Rockford, Surry County, North Carolina, May 4, 1836; received a common-school education, read medicine, and became a student of the Charleston Medical College, of South Carolina; after receiving his medical education, he returned home and commenced the practise of his profession, and in 1859 moved to his present residence in the county of Wilkes; was a Union man during the war; was not in the Army, but served during the latter part of the war as Surgeon of Home Guards, and at the close of the war in 1865 his people solicited him to represent them in the State Legislature; he became a candidate, and was elected to the House of Representatives, and for the last eighteen years he has served his people either in the House of Representatives or the State Senate; his fidelity to his people has won their confidence, and at each succeeding election they have returned him with an increased majority. Doctor York was an active Democratic leader in his section of the State until the question of prohibition was brought before the Legislature of 1880–'81, at the time being Chairman of the joint caucus of the Democratic party; he strongly urged his Democratic friends not to suffer the bill to pass the Legislature, and was the only member of the Senate that made a speech against the measure, and when the bill had passed, he returned home and took the stump against the ratification of the bill, and did more to defeat the measure than any other one man in the State; the campaign brought about much bitterness, the result of which was that Dr. York was nominated by the liberal Democrats of his district and indorsed by the Republicans for a seat in the Forty-eighth Congress. Major Robbins, who had served three terms in Congress, was the regular Democratic nominee, and Dr. Cook was an independent strait-out Republican candidate. The campaign was a long and bitter one; the Democratic majority of the district had usually been about 4,000; this was to overcome, also the Independent, Cook, who carried 1,000 votes in the district, yet the champion of the people's liberties overcame his competitors by a majority of 258 votes.

The Library of Congress occupies the entire western projection of the central Capitol building. The original library was commenced in 1800, but was destroyed with the Capitol in 1814 during the war with England. It was afterwards replenished by the purchase of the library belonging to Ex-President Jefferson, by Congress, embracing about 7,000 volumes. In 1851 it contained 55,000 volumes, and by an accidental fire in that year the whole collection was destroyed, except 20,000 volumes. It was rebuilt in 1852, when $75,000 was appropriated in one sum to replenish the collection. The new library halls, three in number, are fitted up with ornamental iron cases and iron ceilings, the whole being perfectly fireproof. The library is recruited by regular appropriations made by Congress, which average about $11,000 per annum; also by additions received by copyright, by exchanges, and from the Smithsonian Institution. The library of the Smithsonian Institution has now been deposited in the Library of Congress, where it is secured against loss by fire. This collection is especially rich in scientific works, embracing the largest assemblage of the transactions of learned societies which exists in the country. The library was also enriched by the presentation to the Government, in 1882, of the large private library of Dr. Joseph M. Toner, of Washington, numbering over 27,000 volumes, besides nearly as many pamphlets. The donor, whose public spirit is worthy of emulation, adds to the collection annually. The library of copyright books was removed here from the Patent Office in 1870, and all copyrights issued in the United States are now recorded in the books deposited in the office of the Librarian of Congress. The present number of volumes in the whole library, including law books, which are kept in a separate library room under the Supreme Court, is over 525,000, besides about 170,000 pamphlets. A new building to contain its overflowing stores of learning and to afford room for their proper arrangement has become a necessity. This collection is very rich in history, political science, jurisprudence, and in books, pamphlets, and periodicals of American publication, or relating in any way to America. At the same time the library is a universal one in its range, no department of literature or science being unrepresented. The public are privileged to use the books in the library, while members of Congress and about thirty official members of the Government only can take away books. The library is open every day (Sundays excepted) during the session of Congress from 9 a. m. to the hour of adjournment. In the recess of Congress it is open between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m.

THE CAPITOL.

The Capitol fronts the east, and stands on a plateau eighty-eight feet above the level of the Potomac, in latitude 38° 53′ 20″.4 north and longitude 77° 00′ 35″.7 west from Greenwich.

The southeast corner-stone of the original building was laid on the 18th of September, 1793, by President Washington, aided by the Freemasons of Maryland. It was constructed of sandstone, painted white, from an island in Aquia Creek, Virginia, under the direction of Stephen H. Hallett, James Hoban, Geo. Hadfield, and afterwards of B. H. Latrobe, architects. The north wing was finished in 1800 and the south wing in 1811, a wooden passage-way connecting them. On the 24th of August, 1814, the interior of both wings was destroyed by British incendiaries, but they were immediately rebuilt. In 1818, the central portion of the building was commenced under the architectural superintendence of Charles Bulfinch, and the original building was finally completed in 1827. Its cost, including the grading of the grounds, alterations, and repairs, up to 1827, was $2,433,844.13.

The corner-stone to the extensions of the Capitol was laid on the 4th of July, 1851, by President Fillmore, Daniel Webster officiating as orator of the day. Thomas U. Walter was architect, and subsequently Edward Clark, under whose direction the work was completed in November, 1867. The material used for the extensions is white marble from the quarries at Lee, Massachusetts, with white marble columns from the quarries at Cockeysville, Maryland.

The dome of the original central building was constructed of wood, but was removed in 1856 to be replaced by the present stupendous structure of cast iron, which was completed in 1865. The entire weight of iron used is 8,909,200 pounds.

The main building is three hundred and fifty-two feet four inches long in front and one hundred and twenty-one feet six inches deep, with a portico one hundred and sixty feet wide, of twenty-four columns on the east, and a projection of eighty-three feet on the west, embracing a recessed portico of ten coupled columns. The extensions are placed at the north and south ends of the main building, with connecting corridors forty-four feet long by fifty-six feet wide, flanked by columns. Each extension is one hundred and forty-two feet eight inches in front, by two hundred and thirty-eight feet ten inches deep, with porticos of twenty-two columns each on their eastern fronts, and with porticos of ten columns on their ends and on their western fronts. The entire length of the building is seven hundred and fifty-one feet four inches, and the greatest depth, including porticos and steps, is three hundred and twenty-four feet. The area covered by the entire building is one hundred and fifty-three thousand one hundred and twelve square feet.

The dome is crowned by a bronze statue of Freedom, modeled by Crawford, which is nineteen feet six inches high, and which weighs 14,985 pounds. The height of the dome above the base-line of the east front is two hundred and eighty-seven feet five inches; the height from the top of the balustrade of the building is two hundred and seventeen feet eleven inches; and the greatest diameter at the base is one hundred and thirty-five feet five inches.

The rotunda is ninety-five feet six inches in diameter, and its height from the floor to the top of the canopy is one hundred and eighty feet three inches.

The Senate Chamber is one hundred and thirteen feet three inches in length, by eighty feet three inches in width, and thirty-six feet in height. Its galleries will accommodate one thousand persons.

The Representatives' Hall is one hundred and thirty-nine feet in length, by ninety-three feet in width, and thirty-six feet in height.

The Supreme Court room was occupied by the Senate until December, 1859, the court having previously occupied the room beneath, now used as a law library.

The Library of Congress was burned by the British in 1814, and was partially destroyed by an accidental fire in 1851. The present centre hall was finished in 1853, and the wing halls were finished in 1867.

Under his superintendence the Light-House Board discharges the duties relative to the construction, illumination, inspection, and superintendence of light-houses, light-vessels, beacons, buoys, sea-marks, and their appendages; makes provision for the payment of the public debt under enactments of Congress, and publishes statements concerning it, and submits to Congress, at the commencement of each session, estimates of the probable receipts, and of the required expenditures, for the ensuing fiscal year.

The routine work of the Secretary's office is transacted in the following offices: Division of Appointments; Division of Warrants, Estimates, and Appropriations; Division of Public Moneys; Division of Customs; Division of Internal Revenue and Navigation; Division of Loans and Currency; Division of Revenue Marine; Division of Stationery, Printing, and Blanks; Division of Special Agent; and two disbursing clerks pay the salaries and compensation of the officers and employés of the Department, and disburse upon the orders of the Secretary, such moneys as have been appropriated to be expended under the direction of the Department.

ASSISTANT SECRETARIES OF THE TREASURY.

One of the two Assistant Secretaries (now Hon. H. F. French) has the general supervision of all the work assigned to the Divisions of Customs, Special Agents, Revenue Marine, Internal Revenue and Navigation, and to the offices of Supervising Architect, General Superintendent Life-Saving Service, Supervising Surgeon-General of the Marine Hospital Service, Bureau of Statistics, and Supervising Inspector-General of Steamboats; the signing of all letters and papers as Assistant Secretary, or "by order of the Secretary," relating to the business of the foregoing divisions, that do not by law require the signature of the Secretary of the Treasury; the performance of such other duties as may be prescribed by the Secretary or by law.

The other Assistant Secretary (now Hon. Charles E. Coon) has the general supervision of all the work assigned to the Divisions of Appointments, Warrants, Estimates, and Appropriations, Public Moneys, Stationery, Printing and Blanks, Loans and Currency, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and office of the Director of the Mint; signing of all letters and papers as Assistant Secretary, or "by order of the Secretary," relating to the business of the foregoing divisions and bureau, that do not by law require the signature of the Secretary of the Treasury; the performance of such other duties as may be prescribed by the Secretary or by law.

THE CHIEF CLERK.

The Chief Clerk supervises, under the immediate direction of the Secretary and Assistant Secretaries, the duties of the clerks and employés connected with the Department. The superintendence of all buildings occupied by the Department in this city, the transmission of the mails; the care of all horses, wagons, and carriages employed, the direction of engineers, machinists, firemen, or laborers. The expenditure of the appropriations for contingent expenses of the Treasury Department; for furniture and repairs of same; fuel, lights, water, and miscellaneous items for buildings under the control of the Department; the distribution of the mail; the custody of the records and files and library of the Secretary's Office, the answering of calls from Congress, and elsewhere, for copies of papers, records, &c. Supervision of all the official correspondence of the Secretary's Office, so far as to see that it is expressed in correct and official form; the enforcement of the general regulations of the Department, and the charge of all business of the Secretary's Office not assigned.

THE FIRST COMPTROLLER.

The First Comptroller countersigns all warrants issued by the Secretary of the Treasury covering the public revenues into the Treasury, and authorizing payments therefrom. All accounts examined by the First Auditor, except those which go to the Commissioner of Customs, and all examined by the Fifth Auditor, and accounts of Registers and Receivers of land-offices examined by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, are re-examined and revised in the First Comptroller's Office. Here, also, are examined and reported on the drafts for salaries and expenses drawn by ministers and consuls abroad, and the requisitions for advances drawn by marshals, collectors of internal revenue, secretaries of the Territories, and other disbursing-officers. Powers of attorney for the collection of drafts on the Treasury are examined; and many other duties, having reference to the adjustment of claims against the United States, pertain to the office, but are of too varied a character to be enumerated.

THE SECOND COMPTROLLER.

Accounts received from the Second, Third, and Fourth Auditors against the United States are examined, revised, and certified to, viz: Reported by the Second Auditor—for organizing volunteers, recruiting, pay of the Army, special military accounts, Army ordnance, the Indian service, the Army Medical Department, contingent military expenses, bounty to soldiers, the Soldiers' Home, and the National Home for Disabled Volunteers. Reported by the Third Auditor—disbursements by the Quartermaster's Department, the Subsistence Department, the Engineer Department, Army pensions, property taken by military authority for the use of the Army, and miscellaneous war-claims. Reported by the Fourth Auditor—disbursements for the Marine Corps, by the Navy paymasters for pay and rations, by the paymasters at the navy-yards, for Navy pensions at foreign stations, and the financial agent at London.

These accounts are examined in Divisions, devoted respectively to the affairs of Army Paymasters, Army Quartermasters, Navy Paymasters and the Marine Corps, Army Pensions, Miscellaneous Claims, and Indivn Affairs.

THE COMMISSIONER OF CUSTOMS.

The Commissioner of Customs revises and certifies the accounts of revenues collected from duties on imports and tonnage; of moneys received on account of the marine-hospital fund; fines, penalties, and forfeitures under the customs and navigation laws; steamboat inspection; licenses to pilots, engineers, &c.; and from miscellaneous sources connected with customs matters, accounts of the importation, withdrawal, transportation, and exportation of goods under the warehouse system; for disbursements for the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs, revenue-cutter service, construction and maintenance of lights, marine hospitals, debentures, excess of deposits for unascertained duties, refund of duties exacted in excess, life-saving service, construction of custom-houses and marine hospitals; fuel, light, water, &c., for custom-houses, &c.; approves and files the official bonds given by customs officers, and transmits their commissions; files the oaths of office of the persons paid in the accounts certified by him; and prepares for the use of the law officers of the Department the accounts or those in arrears under the heads above mentioned.

The office is organized in four divisions, viz: Customs, Bookkeeper's, Bond, and Miscellaneous.

THE FIRST AUDITOR.

It is the duty of the First Auditor to receive all accounts accruing in the Treasury Department, (except those arising under the internal revenue laws,) and, after examination, to certify the balance, and transmit the accounts, with the vouchers and certificate, to the First Comptroller or to the Commissioner of Customs, having respectively the revision thereof. The subordinate divisions of his office are—

Customs Division.—Receipts and expenditures of the customs service, including fines, emoluments, forfeitures, debentures, drawbacks, marine-hospital service, revenue-cutter service, &c.,

Judiciary Division.—Salaries of United States marshals, district attorneys, commissioners and clerks; rent of court-houses, support of prisoners, &c.

Public Debt Division.—Redemption of the public debt, including principal, premium, and interest; payment of interest; redemption of certificates of deposit; notes destroyed.

Warehouse and Bond Division.—Examination of accounts received from custom-houses.

Miscellaneous Division.—Accounts of mints and assay offices; Territories; Coast Survey; salaries and contingent expenses of the legislative, executive, and judicial departments of the Government; construction, repair, and preservation of public buildings; Treasurer of the United States for general receipts and expenditures.

THE SECOND AUDITOR.

The Second Auditor examines, adjusts, and transfers to the Second Comptroller for his decision thereon all accounts relating to arrears of pay and bounties, the recruiting service, the pay of the Army, medical and hospital accounts, ordnance accounts, pay of private physicians, contingent expenses of the military establishment, accounts of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers and the Soldiers' Home, and all accounts relating to Indian Affairs. The Divisions are—

Bookkeeper's Division.—Accounts of all appropriations upon which requisitions are drawn, through the Second Auditor's Office, by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Interior. Ledger accounts of all disbursing officers and claimants.

Paymasters' Division.—Army paymasters' accounts and payments of stoppages and fines to the Soldiers' Home.

Ordnance, Medical, and Miscellaneous Division.—Accounts of the Ordnance and Medical Departments of the Army, contingent expenses, regular and volunteer recruiting, freedmen's bounty and pay, publications of rebellion records, and accounts of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

Indian Division.—Disbursements for the Indians, money accounts and property returns of Indian agents, and claims for goods supplied and services rendered.

Pay and Bounty Division.—Examination and adjustment of claims of white and colored soldiers and their legal heirs for pay and bounty, accounts of Soldiers' Home for moneys belonging to estates of deceased soldiers, and forfeitures by desertion.

Investigation of Frauds Division.—Investigation of alleged cases of forgery, fraud, overpayments, unlawful withholding of money, &c., in the payment of white and colored soldiers.

Property Division.—The property accounts (clothing, camp, and garrison equipage) of officers of the Army and volunteers.

THE THIRD AUDITOR.

The Third Auditor examines, adjusts, and transfers to the Second Comptroller all accounts relating to the Quartermaster-General's Department, the Engineer Corps, and the Commissary-General's Department of the Army; claims for lost horses, accounts of unpaid pensions, State war claims, and the claims of States for organizing, arming, and equipping volunteers after 1861. The divisions of the Third Auditor's Office are—

Bookkeeper's Division.—Accounts of the numerous requisitions drawn by the Secretary of War and of the Interior, examined and charged to various appropriations.

Quartermasters' Division.—Accounts of disbursements for barracks and quarters, hospitals, offices, stables, and transportation of supplies; the purchase of clothing, camp and garrison equipage, horses, fuel, forage, straw, bedding, and stationery; payments of hired men and of extra-duty men; expenses incurred in the apprehension of deserters; for the burial of officers and soldiers; for hired escorts, expresses, interpreters, spies, and guides; for veterinary surgeons and medicines for horses; for supplying posts with water; and for all other authorized outlays connected with the movements of the Army not expressly assigned.

Subsistence and Engineer Division.—Accounts of all commissaries and acting commissaries in the Army, whose duties are to purchase the provisions and stores necessary for its subsistence, and to see to their proper distribution; also, accounts of officers of the Corps of Engineers who disburse money for the expenses of the Military Academy, the improvement of rivers and harbors, the construction and preservation of fortifications, the surveys on the coasts, the surveys of lakes and rivers, and the construction and repair of breakwaters.

Army Pension Division.—The duties of this division embrace the settlement of all accounts which pertain to the payment of Army pensions throughout the United States. An account is kept with each pension agent, charging him with all moneys advanced for payment to pensioners, under the proper bond and fiscal year. At the end of each month the agent forwards his vouchers, abstract of payments, and money statement direct to this office, where a preliminary examination is made to see if the money advanced is properly accounted for. The receipt of the account is then acknowledged, and the account filed for audit. Each voucher is subsequently examined, and the payment entered on the roll-book opposite the pensioner's name. The agent's account, when audited, is reported to the Second Comptroller for his revision, and a copy of the statement of errors, if any, sent to the agent for his information and explanation. That account, when revised, is returned by the Second Comptroller to this office and placed in the settled files, where it permanently remains.

State War and Horse Claims Division.—The settlement of all claims of the several States and Territories for the expenses incurred by them for enrolling, subsisting, clothing, arming, paying, and transporting their troops while employed by the Government in aiding to suppress the recent insurrection against the United States; also, the settlement of claims for the loss of horses and equipages sustained by officers and enlisted men while in the military service, and for horses, mules, &c., lost while in service by impressment or contract.

Miscellaneous Claims Division.—The adjustment of claims for the appropriation of stores, the purchase of vessels, railroad stock, horses, and other means of transportation; the occupation of real estate, court-martial fees, travelling expenses, &c.; claims for compensation for vessels, cars, engines, &c., lost in the military service; claims growing out of the Oregon and Washington war of 1855 and 1856, and other Indian wars; claims of various descriptions under special acts of Congress, and claims not otherwise assigned for adjudication.

Collection Division.—Prepares accounts for suit against defaulting officers; answers all calls for information from the files of the office; examines all claims for bounty land and pensions granted to the soldiers of 1812, and certifies them to the Commissioner of Pensions.

THE FOURTH AUDITOR.

The Fourth Auditor examines, adjusts, and transfers to the Second Comptroller all accounts concerning the pay, expenditures, pensions, and prize-money of the Navy and the accounts of the Navy Department. The subordinate divisions of the Bureau are—

Record Prize Division.—Adjusts the prize-money accounts and prepares tabulated statements called for by Congress.

Navy Agents' Division.—Examines the accounts of the disbursements by the navy agents at Portsmouth, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and San Francisco.

Paymasters' Division.—Examines the accounts of paymasters, including mechanics' rolls.

THE FIFTH AUDITOR.

The Fifth Auditor examines, adjusts, and transfers to the First Comptroller the diplomatic and consular accounts, the expenditures of the Department of State, including all international commissions; the accounts of the internal revenue, the census, the Smithsonian Institution, and National Museum, and the contingent expenses of the Post-Office Department. There are three divisions:

Diplomatic and Consular Division.—Adjustment is made of the expenses of all diplomatic missions abroad for salaries, contingencies, and loss by exchange; consular accounts for fees, salaries, loss by exchange, contingent expenses, emoluments, salaries of interpreters and marshals, consular courts and prisons; the relief and passage of American seamen; the return of American seamen charged with crime; the rescuing of shipwrecked American seamen; estates of American citizens and seamen dying abroad; accounts of the bankers of the United States at London; awards of commissions, and expenses of international exhibitions; commissions, boundary-surveys, &c.

Internal Revenue Division.—Accounts of collectors of internal revenue, including salaries, contingent expenses, and compensation of storekeepers.

Miscellaneous Division.—All miscellaneous internal-revenue accounts, including salaries and expenses of agents, surveyors of distilleries, fees and expenses of gaugers, stamp agents' accounts, counsel fees, drawbacks, taxes refunded, redemption of stamps, accounts for the manufacture of paper and stamps, and for the salaries of the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue; also accounts of the Census Office, Smithsonian Institution, and National Museum; contingent expenses of the Post-Office Department, and sundry accounts of the Department of State and the Patent Office.

THE SIXTH AUDITOR.

The Sixth Auditor examines and adjusts all accounts relating to the postal service, and his decisions on these are final, unless an appeal be taken in twelve months to the First Comptroller. He superintends the collection of all debts due the Post-Office Department, and all penalties imposed on postmasters and mail-contractors; directs suits and legal proceedings, civil and criminal, and takes all such measures as may be authorized by law to enforce the payment of moneys due to the Department. There are eight subordinate divisions, viz:

Collecting Division.—The collection of balances due from all postmasters, late postmasters, and contractors; also the payment of all balances due to late and present postmasters, and the adjustment and final settlement of postal accounts.

Stating Division.—The general postal accounts of postmasters and those of late postmasters, until fully stated, are in charge of this division.

Examining Division.—Receives and audits the quarterly accounts-current of all post-offices in the United States. It is divided into four subdivisions, viz, the opening-room, the stamp-rooms, the examining corps proper, and the error-rooms.

Money-Order Division.—Accounts of money-orders paid and received are examined, assorted, checked and filed; remittances are registered and checked; errors corrected.

Foreign Mail Division.—Has charge of the postal accounts with foreign governments, and the accounts with steamship companies for ocean transportation of the mails.

Registering Division.—Receives from the examining division the quarterly accounts-current of all the post-offices in the United States, re-examines and registers them, and exhibits in the register ending June 30 of each year the total amount of receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year.

Pay Division.—The adjustment and payment of all accounts for the transportation of the mails, whether carried by ocean-steamers, railroads, steamboats, or any mail-carrier; the accounts of the railway postal service, railway postal clerks, route-agents, and local agents, mail-depredations, special agents, free-delivery system, postage-stamps, postal-cards, envelopes, stamps, maps, wrapping-paper, twine, mail-bags, mail locks and keys, advertising, fees in suits on postal matters, and miscellaneous accounts.

Bookkeeping Division.—The duty of keeping the ledger-accounts of the Department, embracing postmasters, late postmasters, contractors, late contractors, and accounts of a general, special, and miscellaneous character.

THE TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Treasurer of the United States is charged with the custody of all public moneys received into the Treasury at Washington, or in the sub-treasuries at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Charleston, Cincinnati, Saint Louis, and San Francisco, or in the depositories and depository banks; disburses all public moneys upon the warrants of the Secretary of the Treasury, and upon the warrants of the Postmaster-General; issues and redeems Treasury notes; is agent for the redemption of the circulating notes of national banks, is trustee of the bonds held for the security of the circulating notes of national banks, and of bonds held as security for public deposits; is custodian of Indian trust funds; is agent for paying the interest on the public debt, and for paying the salaries of the members of the House of Representatives. The subordinate divisions of the Treasury are—

Issue Division.—Issues are made of legal-tender notes, currency, coin-certificates, &c.

Redemption Division.—Coin-certificates, national-bank notes, fractional currency, &c., are redeemed, and generally destroyed by maceration.

Loan Division.—Bonds are issued, purchased, retired, cancelled, or converted.

Accounts Division.—The accounts of the Treasury, the sub-treasuries, and the national banks used as depositories are kept.

National-Bank Division.—Bonds held as security for national-bank circulation are examined notes issued, redeemed, and cancelled.

THE REGISTER OF THE TREASURY.

The Register of the Treasury is the official bookkeeper of the United States, and prepares a statement which shows every receipt and disbursement of the public money, which statement is transmitted annually to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury. He signs and issues all the bonds and sends to the Treasurer of the United States schedules showing the names of persons entitled to receive interest thereon. He registers all warrants drawn by the Secretary of the Treasury upon the Treasurer of the United States; transmits statements of balances due to individuals after the settlement of their accounts by the First Comptroller, or the Commissioner of Customs, upon which payment is made; signs all ships' registers; records all marine documents issued to merchant vessels of the United States, and also prepares statements of the merchant vessels of the United States showing the number and tonnage of vessels built and of vessels lost at sea, wrecked, abandoned, and sold to foreigners. The work is distributed among five divisions, as follows:

Loan Division.—In this division registered and coupon bonds are issued, embracing the transfer of all registered bonds; the conversion of coupon into registered bonds; the ledger accounts with holders of registered bonds, and the preparation of schedules upon which interest on the registered bonds is paid.

Receipts and Expenditures Division.—The great account books of the United States are kept in this division which show the civil, diplomatic, internal-revenue, miscellaneous, and public-debt receipts and expenditures; also, statements of the warrants and drafts issued and certified transcripts of the accounts of delinquent revenue officers for suit.

Note and Coupon Division.—In this division redeemed bonds, paid interest-coupons, interest-checks, and interest-bearing notes are examined and registered.

Currency Division.—Treasury notes, legal-tenders, and fractional currency are examined, canceled, and the destruction thereof witnessed and recorded.

Tonnage Division.—Accounts are kept in this division showing the outstanding tonnage of the country, divided into the different classes according to its nature and employment and also showing its annual additions and losses.

THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY.

The Comptroller of the Currency has, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, the control of the national banks. The divisions of this Bureau are—

Issue Division.—The preparation and issue of national-bank circulation.

Redemption Division.—The redemption and destruction of notes issued by national banks.

Reports Division.—Examination and consolidation of the reports of national banks.

THE DIRECTOR OF THE MINT.

The Director of the Mint has general supervision of all mints and assay offices, reports their operations and condition to the Secretary of the Treasury, and prepares and lays before him the annual estimates for their support.

He prescribes regulations, approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, for the transaction of business at the mints and assay offices, the distribution of silver coin, and the charges to be collected of depositors. He receives for adjustment the monthly and quarterly accounts of superintendents and officers in charge of mints and assay offices, superintends their expenditures, and the annual settlements of the operative officers, and makes such special examinations as may be deemed necessary. All appointments, removals, and changes of clerks, assistants, and workmen in the mints and assay offices are submitted for his approval. The purchase of sliver bullion and allotment of its coinage at the mints are made through the office of the Director, and transfers of public moneys in the mints and assay offices, and advances from appropriations for the mint service, are made at his request.

The monthly coinage of mints is tested, and ores, bullion, and coins are assayed, at the Assay Laboratory under his charge. The values of the standard coins of foreign countries are annually estimated by the Director, and the collection of the statistics of the annual production of precious metals in the United States is assigned to him.

THE SOLICITOR.

The Solicitor of the Treasury is an officer in the Department of Justice, having a seal, and is required by law to take cognizance, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, of all frauds or attempted frauds upon the revenue, and exercises a general supervision over all legal measures for their prevention and detection; also to establish regulations, with the approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury, for the observance of collectors of the customs; and, with the approbation of the Attorney-General, for the observance of United States attorneys, marshals, and clerks respecting suits in which the United States is a party or interested. He is also empowered and directed to instruct the district attorneys, marshals, and clerks of the circuit and district courts in all matters and proceedings appertaining to suits in which the United States is interested, except those arising under the internal-revenue laws.

He is required to examine reports of collectors and district attorneys upon bonds delivered for suit; to inform the President of false reports of bonds delivered for suit, and supervise statements from district attorneys concerning suits, and those from marshals relating to proceedings on execution; also reports from clerks as to judgments and decrees; and is charged by the Attorney-General with all post-office litigation.

He also has charge of the secret-service employés engaged in the detection of persons counterfeiting the coin, currency, and public securities of the United States, and all other frauds on the Government. In addition to the duties prescribed by law, the Secretary of the Treasury refers to the Solicitor for opinion a very large number of cases arising in his Department relating to duties, remission of fines, penalties, and forfeitures, navigation and registry laws, steamboat-inspection acts, claims, &c.

THE COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue makes all assessments and superintends the collection of all taxes; preparation of instructions for special-tax stamps, (formerly licenses,) forms and stamps of all kinds; and pays into the Treasury, daily, all moneys received by him.

The business of the bureau is transacted in seven divisions, viz:

Appointment Division.—Is charged with all matters pertaining to issuing of commissions, leaves of absence, office-discipline, assorting and disposition of the mail, registry and copying of all letters, with the care of the general files; and all matters relating to messengers, laborers, office-stationery, printing, advertising, blanks, and blank books for the bureau.

Law Division.—Is charged with all questions (except as hereinafter stated) relating to seizures, suits, abatement, and refunding claims, and those relating to special taxes, documentary stamp-taxes, taxes on incomes, legacies, and successions, and on dividends, &c.; also lands purchased for the United States on distraint, and the extension of time on distraints.

Tobacco Division.—Is charged with all matters (including special taxes) relating to tobacco, snuff, and cigars not in suit or in bond, stamp-tax on medicines and preparations.

The Surgeon-General, under the immediate direction of the Secretary of War, is charged with the administrative duties of the Medical Department; the designation of the stations of medical officers, and the issuing of all orders and instructions relating to their professional duties. He directs as to the selection, purchase, and distribution of the medical supplies of the Army. The Army Medical Museum and the official publications of the Surgeon-General's Office are also under his direct control.

The Paymaster-General and his assistants pay the Army, also Second Auditor's Treasury certificates, and keep a record of said payments.

The Chief of Engineers commands the Corps of Engineers, which is charged with all duties relating to fortifications, whether permanent or temporary; with torpedoes for coast defence; with all works for the attack and defence of places; with all military bridges, and with such surveys as may be required for these objects, or the movement of armies in the field. It is also charged with the harbor and river improvements; with military and geographical explorations and surveys; with the survey of the lakes; and with any other engineer work specially assigned to the Corps by acts of Congress or orders of the President.

The Chief of Ordnance commands the Ordnance Department, the duties of which consist in providing, preserving, distributing, and accounting for every description of artillery, small-arms, and all the munitions of war which may be required for the fortresses of the country, the armies in the field, and for the whole body of the militia of the Union. In these duties are comprised that of determining the general principles of construction and of prescribing in detail the models and forms of all military weapons employed in war. They comprise also the duty of prescribing the regulations for the proof and inspection of all these weapons, for maintaining uniformity and economy in their fabrication, for insuring their good quality, and for their preservation and distribution; and for carrying into effect the general purposes here stated large annual appropriations are made, and in order to fulfil these purposes, extensive operations are conducted at the national armories, arsenals, and ordnance depots.

The Judge-Advocate General and his assistant receive, review, and have recorded the proceedings of the courts-martial, courts of inquiry, and military commissions of the Armies of the United States, and furnish reports and opinions on such questions of law and other matters as may be referred to the Bureau of Military Justice by the Secretary of War.

The Chief Signal Officer superintends the instruction of officers and men in signal duties, supervises the preparation of maps and charts, and has the reports from the numerous stations received at Washington consolidated and published.

THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

The Secretary of the Navy performs such duties as the President of the United States, who is Commander-in-Chief, may assign him, and has the general superintendence of construction, manning, armament, equipment, and employment of vessels of war.

The Chief Clerk has general charge of the records and correspondence of the Secretary's Office.

NAVAL BUREAUS OF THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

The chiefs of the naval bureaus of the Navy Department are officers of the United States Navy, and a part of the naval establishment, viz:

The Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks has charge of the navy-yards and naval stations, their construction and repair; he purchases timber and other materials.

The Chief of the Bureau of Navigation supplies vessels of war with maps, charts, chronometers, barometers, flags, signal-lights, glasses, and stationery; he has charge of the publication of charts, the Nautical Almanac, and surveys; and the Naval Observatory and Hydrographic Office at Washington are under the direction of this Bureau.

The Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance has charge of the manufacture of naval ordnance and ammunition; the armament of vessels of war; the arsenals and magazines; the trials and tests of ordnance, small-arms, and ammunition; also of the torpedo-service, and torpedo-station at Newport, and experimental battery at Annapolis.

The Chief of the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing has charge of all contracts and purchases for the supply of provisions, water for cooking and drinking purposes, clothing, and small stores for the use of the Navy.

The Chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery superintends everything relating to medicines, medical stores, surgical instruments, and hospital supplies required for the treatment of the sick and wounded of the Navy and the Marine Corps.

The Chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair has charge of dry-docks and of all vessels undergoing repairs; the designing, building, and fitting-out of vessels, and the armor of iron-clads.

The Chief of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting has charge of the equipment of all vessels of war, and the supply to their sails, rigging, anchors, and fuel; also of the recruiting of sailors of the various grades.

The Engineer-in-Chief directs the designing, fitting-out, running, and repairing of the steam marine-engines, boilers and appurtenances, used on vessels of war, and the workshops in the navy-yards where they are made and repaired.

The Judge-Advocate-General receives, revises, and records the proceedings of courts-martial, courts of inquiry, boards for the examination of officers for retirement and promotion in the naval service; and furnishes reports and opinions on such questions of law and other matters as may be referred to him by the Secretary of the Navy.

THE DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

The Secretary of the Interior is charged with the supervision of public business relating to patents for inventions; pension and bounty-lands; the public lands, including mines; the Indians; education; railroads; the public surveys; the census, when directed by law; the custody and distribution of public documents; and certain hospitals and eleemosynary institutions in the District of Columbia. He also exercises certain powers and duties in relation to the Territories of the United States.

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

The Assistant Secretary of the Interior performs such duties as are prescribed by the Secretary or required by law, aiding in the general administration of the affairs of the Department. In the absence of the Secretary, he acts as the head of the Department.

The Chief Clerk has the general supervision of the clerks and employés, of the order of business, records and correspondence, and contingent expenditures in the Secretary's Office, also the superintendence of the Interior Department Building.

COMMISSIONER OF PATENTS.

The Commissioner of Patents is charged with the administration of the patent-laws, and supervises all matters relating to the issue of letters-patent for new and useful discoveries, inventions, and improvements. He is aided by an Assistant Commissioner, three Examiners-in-Chief, an Examiner of Interferences, an Examiner of Trade-marks, and twenty-five Principal Examiners.

COMMISSIONER OF PENSIONS.

The Commissioner of Pensions supervises the examination and adjudication of all claims arising under laws passed by Congress granting bounty-land or pension on account of service in the Army or Navy during the Revolutionary War and all subsequent wars in which the United States has been engaged. He is aided by two Deputy Commissioners and a Medical Referee.

COMMISSIONER OF THE GENERAL LAND-OFFICE.

The Commissioner of Public Lands is charged with the survey, management, and sale of the public domain, and the issuing of titles therefor, whether derived from confirmations of grants made by former Governments, by sales, donations, or grants for schools, railroads, military bounties, or public improvements. The Land-Office audits its own accounts.

COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has charge of the several tribes of Indians in the States and Territories. He issues instructions to, and receives reports from, Agents, Special Agents, and Traders; superintends the purchase, transportation, and distribution of presents and annuities; and reports, annually, the relations of the Government with each tribe.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION.

The duties of the Commissioner of Education are to collect such statistics and facts as shall show the condition and progress of education in the several States and Territories, and to diffuse such information respecting the organization and management of schools and school systems, and methods of teaching, as shall aid the people of the United States in the establishment and maintenance of efficient school systems, and otherwise promote the cause of education throughout the country.

COMMISSIONER OF RAILROADS.

The Commissioner of Railroads is charged with prescribing a system of reports to be rendered to him by the railroad companies whose roads are in whole or in part west, north, or south of the Missouri River, and to which the United States have granted any loan of credit or subsidy in lands or bonds; to examine the books, accounts, and property of said companies, to see that the laws relating to said companies are enforced; and to assist the Government Directors of any of said railroad companies in all matters which come under their cognizance, whenever they may officially request such assistance.

DIRECTOR OF THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

The Director of the Geological Survey has charge of the classification of the public lands, and examination of the geological structure, mineral resources, and products of the national domain.

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE CENSUS.

The Superintendent of the Census supervises the taking of the census of the United States every tenth year, and the subsequent arrangement, compilation, and publication of the statistics collected.

THE POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

The Postmaster-General has the direction and management of the Post-Office Department. He appoints all officers and employés of the Department, except the three Assistant Postmasters-General, who are appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; appoints all postmasters whose compensation does not exceed one thousand dollars; makes postal treaties with foreign Governments, by and with the advice and consent of the President, awards and executes contracts, and directs the management of the domestic and foreign mail service.

THE FIRST ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

The First Assistant Postmaster-General has charge of the Appointment Office, which includes five divisions, viz:

Appointment Division.—The duty of preparing all cases for the establishment, discontinuance, and change of name or site of post-offices, and for the appointment of all postmasters, agents, postal clerks, mail-messengers, and Department employés, and attending to all correspondence consequent thereto.

Bond Division.—The duty of receiving and recording appointments; sending out papers for postmasters and their assistants to qualify; receiving, entering, and filing their bonds and oaths; and issuing the commissions for postmasters.

Salary and Allowance Division.—The duty of readjusting the salaries of postmasters and the consideration of allowances for rent, fuel, lights, clerk hire, and other expenditures.

Free Delivery.—The duty of preparing cases for the inauguration of the system in cities, the appointment of letter-carriers, and the general supervision of the system.

Blank Agency Division.—The duty of sending out the blanks, wrapping-paper, and twine letter-balanees, and cancelling stamps to offices entitled to receive the same.

THE SECOND ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

The Second Assistant Postmaster-General has charge of the Contract Office, mail eqiupments, &c., including the following three divisions:

Contract Division.—The arrangement of the mail service of the United States, and placing the same under contract, embracing all correspondence and proceedings respecting the frequency of trips, mode of conveyance, and times of departures and arrivals on all the routes, the course of the mails between the different sections of the country, the points of mail distribution, and the regulations for the government of the domestic mail service. It prepares the advertisements for mail proposals, receives the bids, and has charge of the annual and occasional mail lettings, and the adjustment and execution of the contracts. All applications for the establishment or alteration of mail arrangements and for mail messengers should be sent to this office. All claims should be submitted to it for transportation service not under contract. From this office all postmasters at the end of routes receive the statement of mail arrangements prescribed for the respective routes. It reports weekly to the Auditor all contracts executed, and all orders affecting the accounts for mail transportation; prepares the statistical exhibits of the mail service, and the reports to Congress of the mail lettings, giving a statement of each bid; also of the contracts made, the new service originated, the curtailments ordered, and the additional allowances granted within the year.

Inspection Division.—The duty of receiving and examining the registers of the arrivals and departures of the mails, certificates of the service of route-agents, and reports of mail failures; noting the delinquencies of contractors, and preparing cases thereon for the action of the Postmaster-General, furnishing blanks for mail registers, reports of mail failures, and other duties which may be necessary to secure a faithful and exact performance of all mail service.

Mail Equipment Division.—The issuing of mail locks and keys, mail pouches and sacks, and the construction of mail-bag catchers.

THE THIRD ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

The Third Assistant Postmaster-General has charge of the Finance Office, &c., embracing the following four divisions:

Division of Finance.—The duty of issuing drafts and warrants in payment of balances reported by the Auditor to be due to mail contractors or other persons; the superintendence of the collection of revenue at depository, draft, and depositing offices, and the accounts between the Department and the Treasurer and Assistant Treasurers and special designated depositories of the United States. This division receives all accounts, monthly or quarterly, of the depository and draft offices, and certificates of deposit from depositing offices.

Division of Postage-stamps and Stamped Envelopes.—The issuing of postage-stamps, stamped envelopes, newspaper wrappers, and postal cards; also, the supplying of postmasters with envelopes for their official use, and registered-package envelopes and seals.

Division of Registered Letters.—The duty of preparing instructions for the guidance of postmasters relative to registered letters, and all correspondence connected therewith; also, the compilation of statistics as to the transactions of the business.

Division of Dead Letters.—The examination and return to the writers of dead letters, and all correspondence relating thereto.

The Superintendent of Foreign Mails has charge of all foreign postal arrangements, and the supervision of the ocean mail steamship service.

The Superintendent of the Money-order System has the general supervision and control of the postal money-order system throughout the United States, and the supervision of the international money-order correspondence with foreign countries.

THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

The Attorney-General is the head of the Department of Justice, and the chief law officer of the Government. He represents the United States in matters involving legal questions; he gives his advice and opinion on questions of law when they are required by the President, or by the heads of the other Executive Departments on questions of law arising upon the administration of their respective Departments; he exercises a general superintendence and direction over United States Attorneys and Marshals in all judicial districts in the States and Territories; and he provides special counsel for the United States whenever required by any Department of the Government.

He is assisted by a Chief Clerk and other clerks and employés in the executive management of the business of the Department.

The Law Clerk, who is also an Examiner of Titles, assists the Attorney-General in the investigation of legal questions and in the preparation of opinions.

THE SOLICITOR-GENERAL.

The Solicitor-General assists the Attorney-General in the performance of his general duties, and by special provision of law in the case of a vacancy in the office of Attorney-General, or in his absence, exercises all these duties. Except when the Attorney-General in particular cases otherwise directs, the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General conduct and argue all cases in the Supreme Court, and in the Court of Claims, in which the United States are interested; and, when the Attorney-General so directs, any such case in any court of the United States may be conducted and argued by the Solicitor-General; and in the same way the Solicitor-General may be sent by the Attorney-General to attend to the interests of the United States in any State court, or elsewhere.

THE ASSISTANT ATTORNEYS-GENERAL.

Two Assistant Attorneys-General assist the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General in the performance of their duties. One assists in the argument of causes in the Supreme Court and in the preparation of legal opinions; the other is charged with the conduct of the defence of the United States in the Court of Claims.

Under the act of 1870 the different law officers of the Executive Departments exercise their functions under the supervision and control of the Attorney-General. They are: the Assistant Attorney-General for the Department of the Interior; the Assistant Attorney-General for the Post-Office Department; the Solicitor of the Treasury; and the Solicitor of Internal Revenue, Treasury Department; the Naval Solicitor, Navy Department; and the Examiner of Claims, State Department.

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

THE COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE.

The Commissioner of Agriculture is required to collect and diffuse useful information on subjects connected with agriculture. He is to acquire and preserve in his office all information he can obtain concerning agriculture by means of books and correspondence, and by practical and scientific experiments, the collection of statistics, and other appropriate means; to collect new and valuable seeds and plants; to learn by actual cultivation such of them as may require such tests; to propagate such as may be worthy of propagation, and to distribute them among agriculturists.

The Statistician.—He collects reliable information as to the condition, prospects, and results of the cereal, cotton, and other crops, by the instrumentality of four correspondents in each county of every State; this information is gathered at stated periods of each month, carefully studied, estimated, tabulated, and published.

The Entomologist.—He obtains information with regard to insects injurious to vegetation; investigates the character of insects sent him, to point out their modes of infliction and the means by which their depredations may be avoided; and arranges specimens of their injuries and nest architecture.

The Botanist.—He receives botanical contributions, and after making desirable selections for the National Herbarium, distributes the duplicate plants among foreign and domestic scientific societies, institutions of learning, and botanists; and answers inquiries of botanico-agricultural character.

The Chemist.—He makes analyses of natural fertilizers, vegetable products, and other materials which pertain to the interests of agriculture. Applications are constantly made from all portions of the country for the analysis of soils, minerals, liquids, and manures.

The Microscopist.—He makes original investigations, mostly relating to the habits of parasitic fungoid plants, which are frequently found on living plants and animals, producing sickly growth and in many cases premature death.

The Propagating Garden.—Large numbers of exotic, utilizable, and economic plants are propagated and distributed. The orange family is particularly valuable, and the best commercial varieties are propagated and distributed to the greatest practicable extent.

The Seed Division.—Seeds are purchased in this and foreign countries of reliable firms, whose guarantee of good quality and genuineness cannot be questioned; they are packed at the Department, and distributed to applicants in all parts of the country.

The Library.—Exchanges are made, by which the library receives reports of the leading agricultural, pomological, and meteorological societies of the world.

48TH CONGRESS, 2d Session. | SENATE. | MIS. DOC. No. 15.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

DECEMBER 15, 1884.—Ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

Mr. MORRILL submitted the following

RESOLUTION:

Whereas the Legislature is the department of Government by which commerce should be regulated and laws of revenue passed, the Constitution in terms communicates the power to regulate commerce and to impose duties to that department. It communicates it in terms to no other. The representatives of the people, sitting in their legislative capacity, with open doors, under the eye of the country, communicating freely with their constituents, may exercise this power more intelligently, more discreetly, may acquire more accurate and more minute information concerning the employment and interests on which this description of measures will press, and may better discern what true policy prescribes or rejects, than is within the competence of the executive department of the Government: Therefore,

Resolved, That so-called reciprocity treaties, having no possible basis of reciprocity with nations of inferior population and wealth, involving the surrender of enormously unequal sums of revenue, involving the surrender of immensely larger volumes of home trade than are offered to us in return, and involving constitutional questions of the gravest character, are untimely, and should everywhere be regarded with disfavor.

RESOLUTION:

Resolved, That when the Calender of Bills and Resolutions is next taken up for consideration under Rule 8, measures from the House of Representatives shall first be considered in their order subject to said rule.

48TH CONGRESS, 2d Session. | SENATE. | MIS. DOC. No. 17.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

DECEMBER 16, 1884.—Referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MORGAN submitted the following

RESOLUTION:

Resolved by the Senate, That the Secretary of War be directed to inform the Senate whether, in the construction of the new reservoir in the District of Columbia, under the act approved July 15, 1882, any serious natural difficulties have been encountered not contemplated or adequately provided for in the plans for said work as approved; also, whether any changes or modifications in or of the said plans have been made at any time during the progress of said construction; and if so, on whose recommendation and for what causes were such changes or modifications made?

2. That the Secretary of War be directed to furnish, at the earliest practicable date, for the use and information of the Senate, a topographical map of said reservoir, embracing as much of the contiguous terrain as may be rendered liable to the process of filtration through permeable strata by the establishment of a water-head such as is contemplated by the existing plans; the map to embody shadings and indices showing the location, area, and soundings of the several deposits of decayed vegetable matter, ooze, or quicksand known to exist within the flow-limits of the reservoir; and also a report of chemical analyses of specimens of soil taken from each of said deposits; and also a report from the Chief of Engineers U. S. A. stating whether the existing plans for constructing the reservoir afford adequate expedients to deal with the said natural difficulties, and if not, what modifications of the said plans are required to guarantee purity in the water to be supplied from the reservoir when completed and security from leakage by filtration through permeable strata in the contiguous earth.

3. That the Secretary of War also send to the Senate an estimate of the cost of making any changes in the plan of constructing the reservoir that may be needed to make it more secure and to give greater purity to the water-supply.

MEMORIAL

J. A. DONALDSON, OF MICHIGAN,

RELATIVE TO

The pre-emption and timber-culture laws.

DECEMBER 16, 1884.—Referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed.

SAINT JOSEPH, MICH., December 11, 1884.

SIR: The pre-emption and timber culture acts having been repealed by the House of Representatives since my communication to you last winter, I beg leave to address you once more upon the subject, taking a more general view. It appears to me that the friends of the bill do not take a practical view of the question.

One hundred and sixty acres of land as near the Atlantic coast as the State of Illinois would, perhaps, be a liberal allowance to the settler, but in a country from 500 to 800 miles farther west the condition of the farmer would be very different. The greater cost of transportation makes a great difference in the value of the products of the farm between these points. At this moment there must be an average difference in value of $300 on 100 acres of wheat between the most distant settlements west and the country bordering on the Mississippi River. This difference must continue as long as the present rates of transportation continue. To enable the wheat-grower of the frontier to derive as much income from the business as the farmer of Illinois or Iowa, he must—other conditions being equal—cultivate more acres, when prices are high enough for the business to afford him any profit. But other conditions are not equal.* The prairie country now being settled is very deficient in rainfall. It has only about half of the spring and summer rainfall of the Mississippi River country. If we except the extreme northern part of the public lands, within easy reach of Lake Superior, where the winter frosts penetrate so deeply that it lasts to almost midsummer, compensating to some extent for the lack of rainfall by holding moisture through part of the growing season, the growing of wheat will probably not be extensively engaged in, except when prices are high.

On account of the heavy transportation tax, the frontier farmer will be obliged to concentrate as much value in as little weight as possible; and stock-growing will undoubtedly become his chief business. A deficiency of rainfall will make it necessary to have a greater area of grass land to sustain his stock.

Taking into consideration these disadvantages—to which may be added the greater cost of farm implements, lumber, fuel, and family supplies—I believe that 320 acres is the least that the settler should be restricted to. It would be much better to allow him to have more than he needs, than less.

The social and educational advantages of being thickly settled must be admitted, but the individual must prosper or the community cannot carry on public enterprises satisfactorily. It is true that, in course of time, this question will settle itself. When experience demonstrates that the farmer has too small an amount of land to satisfy his ambition the result will be a thinning out of the population and an increase in the size of the farms. Would it not be better for the Government to save the emigrant this trouble, expense, and disappointment by giving or selling him that amount of land which experience, in the settlements near the public lands, proves to be necessary for the farmer's prosperity.

In regard to timber culture, the objection has been urged that parties could hold them long enough to speculate on without improvement. If people were allowed to enter timber claims only after entering a homestead, and were restricted to 80 acres or less, this objection, in my opinion, would to a great degree be obviated. It has been my experience that enterprising settlers do not care to part with their timber claims when holding other claims, unless they sell all.

Very respectfully,

J. A. DONALDSON.

Hon. O. D. CONGER, United States Senate,

ARNOLD A. RAND AND ALBERT ORDWAY

RELATIVE TO

A collection of photographic negatives illustrating the war of the rebellion.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The undersigned, Arnold A. Rand and Albert Ordway, respectfully represent:

That we are the owners of a collection of about four thousand photographic negatives, taken during the war of the rebellion, illustrating the campaigns, sieges, battle-fields, fortifications, camps, regiments, and incidents of the war.

The Government some years ago purchased what is generally known as the "Brady collection" of photographic negatives.

These two collections, now owned respectively by the Government and ourselves, embrace not only all that is now in existence, but all the negatives that were taken during the war, with the exception of a few duplicate stereoscopic views that were taken by Brady, and the few negatives that may have been taken by itinerant photographers.

The collection owned by the Government is made up principally of views that were taken during the first year of the war in the vicinity of Washington, and during the last year of the war in and about Petersburg and Richmond, together with a small series of views taken in and about Chattanooga and Atlanta, and a large number of portraits. The value of the collection is considerably diminished by the fact that, the original catalogue being lost, a very large number of the views and portraits are unknown.

Our collection is not only very much larger than that of the Government, but contains much more valuable material and is in perfect condition in every respect. Included in our collection are over two thousand negatives that were taken by the late Alexander Gardner while he was attached to the headquarters of the Army of the Potomac, which illustrate all the active campaigns of that army, and cover the whole period lacking in the "Brady collection." The balance of the collection covers fields of operations of which no other illustrations are in existence, and includes about one thousand portraits of distinguished officers.

It is apparent that the Government's collection and our own are each incomplete, the one without the other, while together they would make a collection not only of great interest but also of unique and inestimable historical value.

Believing that our collection, as a part of the records of the war of the rebellion, is of too great value to remain in private hands, with the liability of being scattered or lost in future years, we deem it proper to call your attention to its existence and to offer it to the Government on such terms as may be mutually agreed upon.

If the Government should find it desirable to avail itself of our offer we would also undertake to restore the value of its present collection by identifying and labeling it, as we are probably the only persons who can do it, so that the consolidated collection might be made immediately available, or put in proper shape for preservation in the archives of the Government for future use.

We append a catalogue of our collection.

ARNOLD A. RAND.
ALBERT ORDWAY.

48TH CONGRESS, 2d Session. | SENATE. | MIS. DOC. No. 20.

ALPHEUS HARDY AND OTHERS, MERCHANTS OF BOSTON AND NEW YORK, RELATING

To the distribution of the Geneva award.

DECEMBER 19, 1884.—Referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists respectfully represent:

First. That during the war of the rebellion, they, in common with many others similarly engaged in business, paid large sums of money to insurance companies for insurance of vessels, cargoes, &c., against war risks, commonly known as war premiums, the aggregate of the premiums thus paid amounting probably to the sum of $17,000,000.

Second. The amount awarded by the Geneva tribunal, $15,500,000, was invested in a bond of the United States of like amount, at interest at the rate of 5 per centum per annum.

Third. Under the act approved June 23, 1874, judgments were rendered for losses on account of property destroyed by inculpated cruisers (to losses by which class of cruiser that act was limited) to the amount, principal and interest, of $9,315,753.19, which amount was paid from the proceeds of said bond.

Fourth. The residue of this bond was on the 30th of June, 1877, including accumulated interest (making a total of $9,703.904.89) and premiums on bonds sold ($385,100.07), covered into the Treasury, aggregating the sum of $10,089,004.96, which amount was, on the 30th day of June, 1877, available for such future disposition as Congress might see fit to make thereof thereafter.

Fifth. The act of June 5, 1882, provided for payment out of this fund of two classes of claims:

(A). Losses by acts of exculpated cruisers mainly.

(B). Premiums paid for insurance against war risks.

The first of the above-named consisted largely of cases in which the owners of property did not insure, and therefore contributed nothing directly or indirectly to the fund in question.

The second are cases where the parties did insure and thereby contributed to the balance of the fund. It is susceptible of demonstration that but for the payment of war premiums by your memorialists and those who stand in the same position, no fund would have remained after the distribution provided by the said act of 1874. Yet notwithstanding the superior merit of this class of losers over the other, the latter were accorded priority of payment.

Sixth. At the time the act of 1882 was passed granting this priority, it was supposed that the fund would be sufficient to pay both classes, the losses by acts of exculpated cruisers being then estimated to be about $1,200,000; but the judgments already rendered by the present court show that this class of claims will amount in the aggregate to a much larger sum, and will not leave available for the "war premium" claimants an amount to exceed $5,830,000, exclusive of interest on the fund.

Seventh. It is now apparent from the records of the present court that these war-premium judgments will aggregate about the sum of $13,500,000, including interest. So that if no interest is allowed on the fund that was covered into the Treasury, then the most meritorious of these claimants will not be paid to exceed 50 per cent. of their judgments.

Eighth. It is also demonstrated by the records of the court that (although only about $13,500,000, including interest, will be adjudged) in fact over $17,000,000 were actually paid by merchants and ship-owners as war premiums in support of commerce in American ships.

Ninth. It was for the purpose of reimbursing them for this enormous tax upon their business that the act under which the court is now acting was passed.

By the act of 1874 it was contemplated that the balance, after satisfying judgments rendered under the act, should remain a fund out of which future distribution should be made, but instead of permitting the same to remain on interest as a separate fund, the bond was disposed of, and on the 30th of June, 1877, the amount was covered into the Treasury. The Government has had the benefit of the interest on it ever since, through the use of it in the redemption of its bonded debt.

In view of these facts your memorialists most respectfully pray for such legislation as will authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to allow interest on said fund from the date it was covered into the Treasury, and to that end present herewith a bill which they pray may be enacted into law.

[H. R. 7608, Forty-eighth Congress, second session.]

Mr. STONE introduced the following bill:

A BILL relating to Alabama claims.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of money to be applied to the payment of judgments of the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims, interest shall be computed on the balance of the Geneva award fund remaining in the Treasury on the thirty-first day March, Anno Domini eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, for future disposition, namely, nine million five hundred and eighty thousand five hundred and ninety-nine dollars, from that date to the date of the payment of the judgments of the second class rendered and to be rendered under the act approved June fifth, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, entitled "An act re-establishing the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims, and for the distribution of the unappropriated balance of the Geneva award," making the usual deductions in said calculations on account of payments that may have been from time to time made in satisfaction of judgments in cases of the first class since said date; and the amount, principal and interest, so ascertained, together with the sum of three hundred and eighty-five thousand one hundred dollars and seven cents, amount of premium received on account of sales of balance of bond, seven million one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, shall be applicable to the payment of the judgments of the second class rendered by said court under the provisions of the said act; and the said aggregate, after deducting the expenses of the court, shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, on account of said judgments of the second class, according to the provisions of the said act approved June fifth, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, applicable to said judgments.

48TH CONGRESS, 2d Session. | SENATE. | MIS. DOC. No. 21.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

JANUARY 8, 1885.—Ordered to be printed.

Mr. HAWLEY submitted the following

RESOLUTION:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, requested, if in his opinion it be not incompatible with the public interest, to communicate to the Senate a historical statement concerning the public policy of the executive department of the Confederate States during the late war of the rebellion, reported to have been lately filed in the War Department by General William T. Sherman.

48TH CONGRESS, 2d Session. | SENATE. | MIS. DOC. No. 22.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

JANUARY 12, 1885.—Referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HOAR submitted the following

RESOLUTION:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the two houses of Congress shall assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives the 11th of February, 1885, at 12 o'clock, noon, pursuant to the requirement of the Constitution and laws relating to the election of President and Vice-President of the United States, and the President of the Senate shall be the presiding officer; that two persons be appointed tellers on the part of the Senate, and two on the part of the House of Representatives, to make a list of the votes as they shall be declared; that the result shall be delivered to the President of the Senate, who shall announce the state of the vote, and the persons elected, to the two houses assembled as aforesaid, which shall be deemed a declaration of the persons elected President and Vice-President of the United States; and, together with a list of the votes, be entered on the Journals of the two houses.

LETTER

THE SECRETARY OF WAR

TO THE

ACTING CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS, UNITED STATES SENATE,

IN RELATION TO

The bill to prevent the discharge from the military service of the United States of graduates from the Military Academy.

JANUARY 17, 1885.—Ordered to be printed (to accompany bill S. 2492).

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, January 10, 1885.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 7th instant, inclosing Senate bill 2492, and asking for any information in my possession touching the subject-matter of the bill, and also requesting my views as to the propriety of enacting the bill into a law.

The bill is undoubtedly framed to repeal section 3 of the act of Congress approved June 11, 1878. The description of that section in the proposed bill is incorrect, as the chapter, 181, in which it is found is not chapter 181 of the "Supplement to the Revised Statutes," but a chapter bearing that number in the volume of laws passed by the Forty-fifth Congress, being the act of June 11, 1878, and the bill should at least be amended in that particular.

My only objection to the bill is that it does not go far enough. My opinion is that both sections 2 and 3 of that act should be repealed, and also section 3 of the act approved June 18, 1878, and a new enactment made covering the subject matter of those sections, and I have the honor to inclose a draft of such a proposed law.

The actual bill under consideration repeals that provision of law which requires the discharge from the military service of all graduates of the Military Academy for whom there may not be available vacancies upon their graduation. An amendment, which I have the honor to submit herewith, affects the same purpose, and I have designed to accomplish certain other purposes which I will explain.

First. The change limiting the law to the Corps of Engineers and the line of the Army avoids a conflict with a law relating to the appointment of second lieutenants in the Signal Corps who are by law appointed from non-commissioned officers of the Signal Corps.

Second. The proposed change fixes a date—July 1 in each year—for the beginning of the reservation of vacancies into which any civilian appointment shall be made until the next graduating class at the Military Academy and the annual selection of meritorious non-commissioned officers are appointed, thus preventing any of that class of persons being excluded by appointments from civil life made in the year.

Third. The proposed change abolishes the provision of the act of June 11, 1878, requiring the discharge from the service of graduates of the Military Academy for whom no vacancies may be existing at the time of their graduation. It is possible that the provision of the act of June 11, 1878, requiring such discharge was enacted under a misapprehension of the facts and under a supposition that the number of graduates at the Military Academy exceeded the requirements of the service. This is not correct. Inclosed herewith is a table showing the number of vacancies in the Corps of Engineers and in the line of the Army, for filling which graduates of the Military Academy are available, which occurred in the ten years preceding July 1, 1884, and also a table of appointments to such places in the same period. From an inspection of this table it will be seen that the aggregate number of vacancies, not including those made by transfers, occurring in the ten years beginning July 1, 1874, was 702, or an annual average of 70. In the same time 502 graduates of the Military Academy were appointed, or an annual average of 50, so that the Military Academy graduates were in number five-sevenths of the young men required to fill the position of second lieutenant in the Corps of Engineers and the line of the Army. It may be observed that during a period of nearly four years no appointments from civil life into the grade of second lieutenant have been made except to fill vacancies occurring prior to July 1 in each year, and remaining after the appointment of graduates of the Military Academy, and of all non-commissioned officers who met the requirements of the law and the regulations. At the present time all vacancies which have occurred since June 30, 1884, are upon a list reserved for the next class to be graduated at the Military Academy. In short, the Department, under the direction of the President, has, during a period of nearly four years, rigidly adhered to an administrative system in dealing with the subject of civilian appointments, which it is recommended should be made obligatory by the proposed legislation. Under it the yearly list of vacancies reserved from July 1 in each year is filled by Military Academy graduates, non-commissioned officers, and civilian appointees in the order named. Such an order is thought to be best for the public interests, and to insure the fulfillment of all reasonable expectations entitled to consideration in that order.

As I have said, I regard the whole of the proposed changes in the legislation upon the subject as quite important. I think the acts of 1878 were framed with similar intentions, but by the omission of the fixing of any particular date at which vacancies should commence to be reserved, the act was left in an unsatisfactory condition. The repeal of the law requiring the discharge of the graduates of the Military Academy I regard as particularly important. Unless it is repealed, it is almost inevitable that a considerable number of the class which will be graduated in 1886 will have to be discharged from the service. The class to be graduated in 1885 numbers forty members. That to be graduated in June, 1886, numbers eighty-three members—a number larger than the average annual number of vacancies in the service. The subject was called to my attention by the superintendent of the Academy in a communication of October 13, 1884, of which a pertinent extract is herewith inclosed.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ROBERT T. LINCOLN,
Secretary of War.

Hon. J. D. CAMERON,
Acting Chairman Committee on Military Affairs,
United States Senate.

LEGISLATION PROPOSED BY THE SECRETARY OF WAR.

SECTION 1. That hereafter all vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant in the Corps of Engineers and in the regiments of the Army shall be filled by appointment from the graduates of the United States Military Academy so long as any such remain in service unassigned. Meritorious non-commissioned officers of the Army recommended on or before June 30, in each year, under the provisions of section 4 of the act of Congress approved June 18, 1878, and the general regulations made thereunder, shall be promoted into vacancies thereafter remaining, and any such vacancies remaining after such promotion of non commissioned officers and the appointment of graduates of the Military Academy as aforesaid, and which may have occurred on or prior to the last day of the month in which the Military Academy class may be graduated in each year, may be filled by appointment of persons in civil life, but appointments of persons in civil life to be second lieutenants of the Corps of Engineers or in any of the regiments of the Army shall, in time of peace, be made only into vacancies which occurred on or prior to the last day of the month in each year in which the last class at the Military Academy was graduated, and which have remained unfilled after the appointment of graduates of the Military Academy in service, unassigned, and the promotion of non-commissioned officers recommended according to law and regulations.

Sections 2 and 3 of the act of Congress approved June 11, 1878, and section 3 of the act of Congress approved June 18, 1878, are hereby repealed.

[Extract from the Annual Report, 1884, of the Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy.]

HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY,
West Point, N. Y., October 13, 1884.

SIR: * * * I desire to call the attention of the proper authority to the present strength of the second class and the numbers that will probably graduate and be recommended for commissions in the Army in 1886. The class has now 83 members. Of these, making the usual allowances for casualties, from 75 to 80, probably the latter number, will graduate and be for promotion. Unless something is done to hold open the vacancies in the Army from this time forward for the graduates of the Academy, a number of the class of 1886 will be required to go into civil life. If this were usual or necessary every year, it could scarcely be considered a hardship, but occurring as it does once in a great length of time, through no fault of the class, but rather owing to ability, energy, and continuous application on the part of its members, something should be done to prevent their being unjustly affected by the law. A law permitting them to be attached to the Army as additional second lieutenants, provided that vacancies cannot be reserved for them, would mitigate this hardship of the case. I earnestly recommend such action in this matter as will give to the members of this class appointments in the Army.

The appointments equal the number of vacancies occurring prior to July 1, 1884, but the discrepancy of one between the vacancies in the Engineers and Infantry, and the appointments therein, is explained by the substitution of one engineer vacancy occurring prior to June 30, 1884, for which no one was available, into the present reserved list of vacancies in lieu of an Infantry vacancy occurring since June 30, 1884, and for which a civilian designation has been made.

The actual number of vacancies reserved for the next class is the same, as appears by the following table:

ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

PUBLIC PRINTER,

SHOWING THE CONDITION OF

THE PUBLIC PRINTING, BINDING, ETC.,

FOR THE FISCAL YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1884.

JANUARY 19, 1885.—Referred to the Committeen on Printing and ordered to be printed.

WASHINGTON:
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.

OF

THE PUBLIC PRINTER.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC PRINTER,
Washington, December 4, 1884.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit to Congress, through you, the annual report of this office for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1884.

I am, sir, with respect, your obedient servant,

S. P. ROUNDS,

HON. GEO. F. EDMUNDS,
President of the Senate pro tempore.

In obedience to the requirements of the statute, I have the honor to report the condition, the amount and cost of the public printing, binding, lithographing, and engraving; the amount and cost of all papers purchased for the same; a statement of the contracts entered into for the purchase of paper; all payments made during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1884, including those for material and labor for the Congressional Record; the amount of work ordered and done, with a general classification thereof, for each Department; the number of persons employed in the Government Printing Office, and the time each has been employed, and the amount each has received.

The law also provides that the Public Printer shall report "such further information touching all matters connected with the Printing Office as may be in his possession."

In my report last year, I called attention at length to several important matters in connection with the economical management of the Government Printing Office, and with the experience of another year I should enlarge upon them, but at the last session of Congress the Joint Committee on Public Printing was authorized by legislation—

"To examine into the numbers printed of the various documents, reports, bills, and other papers published by order of Congress, or of either House thereof, and of the Congressional Record, and to report a bill in December next, making such reductions in the numbers and cost of printing, and such changes and reductions in the distribution of said publications, as they may deem expedient, with a report giving their reasons therefor; and that the said committee is also instructed to investigate the printing and binding for the Executive Departments, executed at the Government Printing Office and at the branch printing offices and binderies in the various Departments, and report a bill in December next making such reductions in expenses and imposing such checks as they may deem expedient, with a report giving their reasons therefor; and said committee is further instructed to make any other investigations calculated, in their opinion, to reduce the cost of the public printing, and report the result thereof; and the said committee is hereby authorized to summon and to examine experts and witnesses, and to call upon the heads of Executive Departments and the Public Printer for such information regarding the preceding matters as they may desire; and any expenses necessarily incurred in making the investigations aforesaid shall be defrayed equally from the contingent funds of the two Houses of Congress."

In the organization of the Government Printing Office it is apparent that the wants of both Houses of Congress were first to be considered, although it was also intended that work for the various Executive Departments should be executed at this office. The Public Printer is required to report direct to Congress, and is not connected with any of the Executive Departments. The work of the office has grown from year to year, and Congress has recognized the necessity for some additional legislation, looking to a better and more complete organization of this department.

In view of the above enactment it would not seem proper to anticipate the action of the committee in this report.

CONGRESSIONAL PRINTING AND BINDING.

During the first session of the Forty-eighth Congress, up to and including the 30th day of June, 1884, there were ordered printed for the Senate 3,837 bills and joint resolutions, 201 executive documents, 118 miscellaneous documents, 820 reports of committees, 63 resolutions, and 29 confidential documents. For the House there were ordered printed 9,109 bills and joint resolutions, 173 executive documents, 59 miscellaneous documents, 2,023 reports of committees, and 72 resolutions. During the first session of the Forty-seventh Congress up to and including June 30, 1882, the Senate ordered 3,234 bills and joint resolutions as against 3,837 at the first session of the Forty-eighth Congress. During the same period the House ordered 7,898 as against 9,109. These two items will show the increase and constant fluctuation of orders made by Congress.

The amount of printing completed by order of the Senate during the year was $149,143.62 as against $64,464.77, and for the House $276,333.40 as against $175,267.39 for the previous year.

THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Under the joint resolution of Congress approved June 20, 1874, the Congressional Printer is directed to keep a separate and exact account, in detail, of all expenditures for printing, mailing, and binding the Congressional Record, &c., and publish the amounts thus yearly expended in his next succeeding annual report, and each succeeding report, separately from the other disbursements of his office. This information is given in Table No. 6. The Record for the first session of the Forty-eighth Congress, including index, made seven volumes, comprising 7,508 pages. The number of copies of each volume printed and bound was 6,000, aggregating 42,000 volumes. These have been disposed of as shown by Table 24.

Not unfrequently at the close of the session it requires one, two, or three issues of the Record to publish speeches held for revision. It would be an easy matter to give all of them in one issue if members filed them with the Public Printer within five days after adjournment. I would suggest also that, after such adjournment, revised speeches be transmitted through the President of the Senate or Speaker of the House, respectively, as otherwise the Public Printer has no discretion, and must print and publish as the permanent record of Congress any matter that may be filed by a member withholding his speech for revision. While it is true that this question is one that belongs especially to Congress, still the Public Printer should have some protection in the premises.

EXECUTIVE PRINTING.

Work executed for the Executive Departments shows a slight increase. On account of the insufficient allotment made several of the Departments, it was necessary during May and June to almost wholly suspend orders from three of the Executive Departments.

CENSUS WORK.

During the year the census work completed amounted to $293,009.12 as against $134,006.35 the previous fiscal year. The office responded promptly to all calls made upon it by the Census Bureau, and no delays of any kind have been caused by or can be justly attributed to it, as the records of the office will clearly demonstrate, although delays have occurred in the return of proofs, which I am advised was not the fault of the Census Office, but of various parties throughout the country to whom the proofs were referred. There has been some delay in the publication of these reports, and without desiring to reflect upon any one, it is due to this office to make this statement. So long as the Government employs agents engaged in other occupations to investigate and report upon the special topics referred to, these delays may be expected. The facilities of the Government Printing Office are such as to justify the statement that Congress can always depend upon prompt service in the printing of these reports.

REBELLION RECORD.

This office was authorized to sell volumes 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, of the Rebellion Record. Volume 6 and subsequent volumes are to be sold by the Hon. Secretary of War. Volumes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, are out of print. The stereotype plates are in possession of this office, and, in order that the public may obtain complete sets, I recommend that authority be given to print 2,000 copies of each volume for sale, under the law.

SCIENTIFIC REPORTS.

The scientific publications printed by this office for the Geological and other Bureaus have received marked commendation for their typographical appearance from both foreign critics and those in our own country. These reports are very valuable, and I have endeavored to bring the letter press up to a higher standard of excellence. In order to meet the demands for this class of cut-work I have added three of the latest improved stop-cylinder presses, which will turn out a finer grade of work than that heretofore printed. In the production of these books very much depends upon first-class presswork, and it is my purpose to have this class of printing especially creditable to the Government.

PAPER CONTRACTS.

The system of contracting with the lowest bidder for paper is not, in my judgment, the best method for obtaining such supplies. Past experience has shown that bids have been submitted much lower than the cost of production, and the consequence is, in too many cases, that there is throughout the year a contest between the office and the contractor as to the proper grade and quality.

It is advisable that the Government have a higher grade of paper, and I have no doubt that the business between the office and the contractors would be more satisfactory if the law governing the award of contracts for paper was changed so as to give the Joint Committee on Printing more discretion. The joint committee could then at any time relieve the office of delays and embarrassments, which are frequently very vexatious and a hinderance to the public service.

I am advised that imported rags are largely used by contractors who annually supply this office with paper. The question having been officially considered by the Treasury Department and an order issued prohibiting the importation of these rags from cholera-infected countries, I deem it my duty to bring the subject to the attention of Congress. If there is danger in the use of these rags at the mills, it would seem that the disease might be communicated in bundles, packages, and paper (likely to come in contact with such rags), which are daily received at this office. In view of the expected approach of cholera, and in the name of the 2,300 people under my charge, many of whom come directly in contact with these bundles and packages of paper, I respectfully submit that this is a proper question for the consideration of Congress.

REDUCTION OF ESTIMATES.

It is difficult to estimate intelligently for the annual appropriations for the year in advance, for the reason that there is no limit upon the amount of printing that may be ordered by Congress. The amount that may be expended by the Public Printer per quarter and the allotments of the various Departments are limited, but the office can never anticipate the orders of Congress.

The estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1885, were $3,014,000. By reason of the improved press facilities, the introduction of more modern machinery, and the application of some well-accepted business principles in the management of the department, I have no doubt that in the future the Government Printing Office can turn out a larger volume of work at reduced cost. Therefore the estimates for the next fiscal year have been cut down $339,000 under the preceding year, making a total of $2,675,000, as against $3,014,000 for the previous year.

As far as possible, I have continued the policy outlined in my former report of substituting improved modern fast presses, capable of printing 19,000 to 22,000 single sheets per day at the same expense as many of the old badly-worn presses I found in use that were printing but 5,000 during the same period of time. The saving alone on press-work will, within a very short time, justify a still further reduction in the annual appropriations. These improvements have been made without decreasing the volume of business done, nor was it necessary to ask for any special appropriation. The following showing, taking 14 presses for comparison, will illustrate the saving:

Fourteen Adams presses, 27x41 inches, each making 5,000 impressions, or 20 tokens, per day of 8 hours, will, in 309 working days, give 86,520 tokens per annum.

Fourteen two-revolution fast cylinder presses, each double the size, say 35x54, can be run at a speed of 1,500 per hour, or 48 tokens per day; but call it double the speed and same size sheet, will give 173,040 tokens.

But as they print a sheet twice the size, or two sheets to one and twice as fast, they have four times the capacity, and would give a product of 346,080 tokens.

And as most of the time these presses are run from 12 to 16 hours or even longer per day, the saving would be increased in the same proportion.

By the adoption of other improvements under consideration, it is safe to say that in the following year a still further reduction can be made in the cost of the public printing, but the quantity is under control of Congress.

RECEIPTS FROM SALES OF WASTE PAPER, ETC.

During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1884, there was received from sales of documents, Records, waste paper, &c., the sum of $175,825.75, which has been deposited in the Treasury.

EMPLOYÉS.

The number of employés is regulated by the demands for work upon the office. The average number at the dates mentioned during the four quarters of the fiscal year was as follows:

Number of employés September 30, 1883	2,128
Number of employés December 31, 1883	2,230
Number of employés March 31, 1884	2,319
Number of employés June 30, 1884	2,331

LEAVES OF ABSENCE.

I desire to renew my recommendation of last year for fifteen days' leave of absence annually for the employés of the Government Printing Office. In speaking upon this subject I then said:

"In view of the fact that the clerks in the various Departments, working a less number of hours per day, are entitled to thirty days' leave of absence each year, I submit that as a matter of right and justice to the employés of the Government Printing Office, who have ever been faithful day and night, it would seem proper that at least to some extent the law should be so modified that they too can be favored with a leave of absence. A more faithful and devoted class of employés cannot be found in any Department; and I respectfully call the attention of Congress to this question, and express the hope that some provision may be made for them in the direction indicated."

A bill making a specific appropriation for this purpose (as was done in the case of the letter-carriers of the Post-Office Department at the last session) would be an act of justice to those who work more hours for less pay than any other class of Government employés. When unfortunately stricken down by sickness, their pay at once ceases, while in almost every other branch of the Government under such circumstances employés continue to draw their pay. Leading members of the most important committees in both houses of Congress can bear testimony to the fact that the prompt, efficient, and faithful work of this office, especially during the last session, advanced legislation in a very gratifying degree.

Believing that such a deserved and just law would be recognized by a still more efficient service, and, above all, on account of the equity in the request, I earnestly recommend that a special appropriation of $85,000 be made for the purpose of granting the employés of this office fifteen days' leave with pay. This recommendation is made in lieu of any proposed legislation for leave on account of sickness, as it is well understood that furloughs granted on account of sick leave might result in much abuse of the privilege. Under all the circumstances, in my judgment, fifteen days' annual leave will be more satisfactory.

CIVIL SERVICE.

In my last annual report attention was called to the subject of appointments, and reference was made to some of the new regulations adopted which it was hoped would relieve the Public Printer in a measure from the heavy tax upon his time in the consideration of this subject to the detriment of the more important practical operations of the office. As shown by the present report, the pay-roll for the year amounts to $1,767,362.64, or an average per day of $5,646.52. The Government Printing Office is and should be practically a work-shop—a manufactory—and the standard required of its employés should only be that of skill and efficiency, and as in all successful private establishments of the kind, employés, after a fair trial, falling below the average, should give place to others better qualified. In this way only can this office be kept in its proper state of efficiency.

It was the recognition of this policy at the outset that induced me to consider as the main qualifications, in the selection and retention of my assistants—the various foremen and assistant foremen—true merit, practical workmanship, and a thorough knowledge of the duties to be performed. These officers, generally without political influence, have by faithful and devoted service contributed largely to the success that has been accredited the Government Printing Office under my administration, and I cheerfully bear testimony to that fact. With a life-long experience, thoroughly trained in the line of their particular duty, that success for which I have constantly labored was more easily attained. Thus have I endeavored to introduce and encourage a practical civil service. It is proper to state that there is not a single officer throughout the building who could not, if necessary, perform any portion of the practical labors he assigns to those under his charge. I am confident if it was possible to extend this same rule to the appointment and retention of employés generally, that the Public Printer could make a record for actual work done that could not be equaled by any private establishment working the same number of hours per day.

NO FURLOUGHS.

The appropriations were sufficient to keep the force regularly employed during the fiscal year. The action of Congress in restricting the expenditures per quarter was wise legislation, and if carried out in spirit as in the letter of the law, will prevent large expenditures during the first half and a partial suspension of work during the last half of the year. The restrictions imposed, when properly observed, will also obviate the necessity for an unusual suspension of employés for want of funds during the closing months of the year.

STORAGE ROOM.

Under a special act of Congress the Public Printer executed leases for additional storage room. This fund will become exhausted during this session, and it will be necessary to make another appropriation. In this connection I desire to say that the want of room is a serious embarrassment to the prompt and economical management of the office. A great quantity of folded sheets are subjected to hydraulic pressure, tied up, and removed to the store room fully half a mile away. When required to collate the books these packages must be hauled back to the main office, involving much additional expense and loss on account of frequent handling and exposure. I urge upon Congress the necessity for more room, and respectfully request that the Joint Committee on Printing be authorized to consider the matter in all its bearings. It cannot be questioned that the expense of the public printing could be materially reduced if a building were provided specially adapted to the wants of the service. A private firm, handling this large volume of printing, would look upon this question as one involving much loss unless corrected.

SANITARY CONDITION.

With about 2,300 working people on the rolls, the sanitary condition of the building becomes a matter of great importance, both from a humanitarian standpoint and from the further fact that the amount of service rendered must depend more or less upon the health of the employés. In response to my urgent appeal, Congress made a special appropriation for this important work, and I have to report a radical improvement for the better during the past year. There has been a marked decrease, both in the sick-roll and death-rate, among the employés, and the entire force feel gratified at the change, and as a consequence are prepared to render much more efficient service.

This most satisfactory result was brought about by the introduction of new water-closets throughout, careful attention to cleanliness and a more rigid enforcement of hygienic regulations.

ELECTRIC LIGHT.

The Edison system of electric light, which was introduced in the Record room by my predecessor, has been extended to the press and document rooms, with very gratifying results. The light produced is cheaper than gas, far superior in all respects, and is much preferred by the employés. Connection has also been made between the eletric-light engine and the press-room, so that in case of accident to the main engine there would not be a suspension of work in the press room.

CONFIDENTIAL PRINTING.

There has been an increased amount of confidential printing executed both for Congress and the Executive Departments during the past year.

The regulations referred to in my former report have been sufficient to protect the confidence reposed, and in no single instance has there been a complaint that confidential matter was given out from this office. With the care given this class of work, I am confident that the record of the past year will be maintained in the future.

48TH CONGRESS, 2d Session. } SENATE. { MIS. DOC. No. 25.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

JANUARY 20, 1885.—Ordered to be printed.

Mr. PLUMB submitted the following

RESOLUTION:

Whereas the United States, in 1866, acquired from the Creek and Seminole Indians by treaty certain lands situate in the Indian Territory, a portion of which have remained unoccupied until the present time; and

Whereas a widely extended belief exists that such unoccupied lands are public lands of the United States, and as such subject to homestead and pre-emption settlement, and pursuant to such belief a large number of citizens of the United States have gone upon them claiming the right to settle and acquire title thereto under the general land laws of the United States; and

Whereas it is understood that the President of the United States does not regard said lands as open to settlement, and believes it to be his duty to remove all persons who go upon the same claiming the right to settle thereon, and for that purpose has directed the expulsion of the persons now on said lands by the use of military force, and there seems to be a probability of a conflict growing out of the attempt to expel said persons so claiming right and attempting to settle: Therefore,

Resolved, That the President be requested to advise the Senate as to the status of the lands in question as viewed by the Executive, the action taken, if any, to expel persons seeking to settle thereon, and the reason for the same, together with any other information in his possession bearing upon the existing controversy.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR, DISTRICT ASSEMBLY NO. 66,

PROTESTING

Against the passage of the bill (S. 2507) to amend the law concerning mechanics' liens in the District of Columbia.

JANUARY 20, 1885.—Referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia and ordered to be printed.

To the Senate of the United States:

The undersigned, for and on behalf of District Assembly No. 66, Knights of Labor, representing the building trades of the District of Columbia, respectfully protest against the passage of Senate bill No. 2507, to amend the law concerning mechanics' liens in the District of Columbia, believing its enactment will be injurious to the interests of mechanics and laborers.

The mechanics' lien law has been in operation six months, and it is efficiently accomplishing the object of its enactment. But, in securing to mechanics the reward for their labor, it does, as might have been expected, occasion inconvenience to other parties whose interests conflict with ours, notably unscrupulous builders and contractors, and real-estate and money brokers. In exact proportion to the benefit we derive from the law will be the outcry of the parties who find our claims an obstacle to their schemes.

It is urged that the lien law was inconsiderately passed. This we deny, and we assert that the fact that the law is doing exactly what it was intended to do shows that it was sufficiently considered. We charge undue haste upon the proposed amendment which interested parties are seeking to rush through at a time and in a manner which forbid proper investigation and deliberation.

The proposed amendment will enable interested parties to defeat our claims by the preparation of secret mortgages, trusts, and liens, intended to be published and made operative only in case liens are filed under the lien law.

As the law stands our claims may be fairly enforced. As it is proposed to amend section 3 every claim for wages can be defeated except when our liens are filed day by day from the very commencement of the work. This is too absurd to be discussed. We should be allowed a reasonable time to collect our dues by application and importunity, and not be forced to use the courts except when necessary. The proposed amendment gives other creditors ample opportunity to perfect prior incumbrances between the time when our wages are due and the time when we discover that there will be difficulty in collecting them. The law may as well be repealed as to be thus amended.

Money-lenders and real-estate dealers and others opposed to the lien law have every species of formality, public record, and legal safeguard to protect their interests and facilitate their operations. The mechanics have but this one, solitary, lien law, to secure the prompt payment of their dues. We have borne great inconvenience and loss, and we submit that in a conflict of interest between ourselves and the parties seeking the amendment of the lien law, our rights and wishes should have a preponderating influence with the Senate.

We ask that the law may have a fair trial as it now stands, and that it may not be emasculated because it is accomplishing its purpose, even though in giving security to the mechanic it causes inconvenience to those whose purposes would deprive him of his earnings.

The lien law holds the premises liable only to the extent of the value which has been added to them by labor performed and material furnished. All of the value which existed as the property of the owner prior to the improvement still exists, and is security for as large a loan as it ever was. When we have added value to a house and lot there is sound justice in giving us an exclusive hold upon that value until we have been compensated. There is no reason why that value should be used to augment the borrowing power of the owner or the security of a subsequent money-lender. Yet that is the object of the amendment.

It is with great difficulty that we can secure the enactment of a few laws that are ostensibly for our protection. It is with still greater difficulty that we can secure the enactment of a law that is really for our protection. Having secured such a one in the mechanics' lien law we hope that the Senate will not indicate, by the adoption of a debilitating amendment, that the vigor of the law was the result of a legislative inadvertence.

PROPOSED BY

MR. VEST TO RESOLUTION OF MR. PLUMB,

IN RELATION TO

Certain lands in the Indian Territory acquired by the United States from Creek and Seminole Indians.

JANUARY 21, 1885.—Ordered to be printed.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed and empowered to ascertain, by communication with the authorities of the Creek and Seminole Nations of Indians in the Indian Territory, upon what terms the said nations will relinquish and convey to the United States all the right, title, and interest in and to all that country described in article 3 of the treaty made between the United States and the Creek Nation on June 14, 1866, as "the west half of their entire domain, to be divided by a line running north and south," the lands so described in the treaty being now known as "Oklahoma," and being fully described in Senate Ex. Doc. No. 109, Forty-eighth Congress, first session, page 4, and the lands described in article 3 of the Seminole treaty of March 21, 1866. (14 Stat., 756.)

That the Secretary of the Interior shall communicate with the authorities of the Creek and Seminole Nations immediately, by special agent or otherwise, as he may deem necessary, and transmit the result to Congress.

Mr. INGALLS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, submitted the following:

LETTER FROM MAJ. G. J. LYDECKER, UNITED STATES ENGINEER, IN RELATION TO THE WATER SUPPLY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

OFFICE OF WASHINGTON AQUEDUCT,
Washington, D. C., January 15, 1885.

SIR: In response to request contained in letter from your committee dated January 9, 1885, I have the honor to state that in the construction of the new reservoir near Howard University, no material difficulties have as yet been developed that were not contemplated by me as likely to arise in its progress, none that are not provided for in the act making appropriations for the work, or in the specifications under which the same is now being prosecuted.. I can see no necessity for the passage of the resolution in question nor imagine what good can be accomplished thereby.

In addition to this categorical answer to the questions submitted to me, I desire to add that it is unreasonable to presume that any engineer would not have foreseen the probability of a variation in the character of material, such as is suggested by the resolution, in the excavation of an area so extended as that included in the proposed reservoir. The existence of quicksand, muck, decaying vegetable matter, &c., has been known from the start, but it is also known that a stratum of compact, impermeable clay exists at the level of the proposed bottom of the reservoir throughout most of its extent.

To prepare such a map as is indicated would be a question of considerable time and expense, and would be of insignificant value in determining exactly what should be done at each point, as compared with the precise information that will be furnished when the general excavation is completed. At that time much of the existing quicksand area will have become drained, dried out, and easily removable.

Very respectfully,

G. J. LYDECKER,
Major of Engineers, United States Army.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE SUPERVISING ARCHITECT,
January 22, 1885.

SIR: I have the honor to advise you that the plans for the public building now in course of construction, at Columbus, Ohio, call for a building two stories high, affording the greatest amonnt of accommodation possible within the present limit of cost. I am satisfied that the accommodation furnished is inadequate to the demands of the public service at Columbus, and that the interests of the Government would be best subserved by the addition of a third story to the building as at present designed. To do this an additional appropriation of $60,000 will be required. In order that work may proceed advantageously and economically, this additional appropriation should be made at the present session of Congress.

I have to request that this matter may be called to the attention of the chairman of the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and Senate.

Very respectfully,

I agree with the Supervising Architect as to the necessity of the construction of this additional story, and in my judgment an appropriation should be made therefor during the present session of Congress.

LETTER

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF STATE,

TO THE

CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS.

REGARDING

Our trade relations with the several countries on this continent (except British North America).

FEBRUARY 13, 1885.—Referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 12, 1885.

SIR: I have the honor to invite your attention to some commercial statistics submitted herein, showing our trade relations with the several countries on this continent, British North America excepted. These statistics and the subjoined considerations are suggested, in part, by a resolution introduced in the Senate by Mr. Morrill, of Vermont, on December 15, 1884, and read on the 7th ultimo, before the same honorable body, but which has not been adopted. This resolution appears to sum up the principal arguments brought forward in opposition to the conclusion of reciprocity treaties with "inferior nations." If not controverted it is calculated to excite the public fears by the assertion of inequalities so broadly made therein. A simple statement of statistics from facts may show the unproved character of the assertions that inequalities in wealth and population carry with them inequalities of trade, also, even under reciprocity.

Mr. Morrill's resolution reads as follows:

Whereas the legislature is the department of Government by which commerce should be regulated and laws of revenue passed; the Constitution in terms communicates the power to regulate commerce and to impose duties to that department. It communicates it in terms to no other. The representatives of the people, sitting in their legislative capacity, with open doors, under the eye of the country, communicating freely with their constituents, may exercise this power more intelligently, more discreetly, may acquire more accurate and more minute information concerning the employment and interests on which this description of measures will press, and may better discern what true policy prescribes or rejects, than is within the competence of the executive department of the Government; therefore,

Resolved, That so-called reciprocity treaties, having no possible basis of reciprocity with nations of inferior population and wealth, involving the surrender of enormously unequal sums of revenue, involving the surrender of immensely larger volumes of home trade than are offered to us in return, and involving constitutional questions of the gravest character, are untimely, and should everywhere be regarded with disfavor.

Waiving the constitutional questions involved in the negotiation of reciprocity treaties, and confining this communication to their commercial aspects and results, a survey of the field would seem to show that any increase of our trade with foreign countries, commensurate with our industrial development and requirements, especially in the matter of finding markets for our manufactures, can only come through our commercial relations with countries "inferior to us in population and wealth." Such countries, in fact, afford the only field for the development of natural resources and the consumption of foreign manufactures at the same time; and reciprocity treaties would seem to be the most effective medium through which such increase can be fostered. Further, it seems to me that such treaties are only profitable with such "inferior nations," as the simplest study of the trade conditions of the nations, our equal in wealth and population, will prove.

The few nations which are equal to the United States in wealth, population, and trade, are confined to Europe. As these nations, through abundance of capital and industrial appliances, not only supply their own wants in manufactures, for which we require foreign markets, but, through possession of the world's marts and perfect commercial communication, organized to the least detail, contribute in a large degree toward supplying the wants of the "inferior nations," it is not clear how we could enter into reciprocal trade relations therewith. The wants of Europe, in so far as we can supply the same, are confined chiefly to breadstuffs and provisions, cotton, kerosene, tobacco, timber, and other raw materials, of which the several nations already draw upon us for their principal supplies. As these nations are plethoric of manufactures, it is clear that if they could, even by reciprocity, purchase more of our products than they purchase at present, they would only do so by a reciprocity on our side which would admit their manufactures into the United States in larger quantities than they are admitted under existing conditions. But as we are seeking for enlarged foreign consumption for our manufactures, as well as for our raw materials, such "reciprocity" would be no reciprocity whatever, but would fully sustain the fears recited in the resolution, by "involving the surrender of enormously unequal sums of revenue and immensely larger volumes of home trade than would be offered to us."

It would seem, therefore, that we must look, if anywhere, to the nations "inferior to us in wealth and population" for any marked enlargement in our export trade.

A simple analysis of the conditions of our intercourse with such nations should dispel all fears in regard to "surrendering enormously unequal sums of revenue and immensely larger volumes of home trade than are offered to us."

It does not necessarily follow, because our markets are larger than any of the markets of the several nations "inferior to us in wealth and population," that under reciprocity treaties therewith we would have to surrender more revenue or any larger volumes of home trade than they would surrender to us.

Indeed, the main object of reciprocity treaties with "inferior nations" is the equalization of trade relations, to enable us to sell to such nations products and manufactures sufficient to equalize our imports therefrom, which is far from being the case at present.

It can be laid down as an economic axiom that the exports and the imports of the nations of the world "inferior to us in wealth and population"—and the more "inferior" they are the more applicable is this axiom—equalize each other. This fact alone should dispel any fears of our having to "surrender enormously unequal sums of revenue, and immensely larger volumes of home trade than are offered to us" through reciprocity treaties with "inferior nations."

The following figures, bearing on this subject, are submitted as proofs of this axiom:

The total imports of the South American countries amount to $296.587,000, and their exports to $312,760,000—a difference of only $16,173,000 in this immense and diffused trade. Were exact figures obtainable there can be little doubt but that the imports and exports would be found of equivalent value.

The imports of the British West Indies, twenty-one islands, are estimated at $30,907,000, and the exports at $31,613,000.

The imports of Hayti and San Domingo amount to $7,742,000, and the exports to $9,654,000.

The imports of Mexico are estimated at $42,579,000, and the exports at $13,509,000. The exports of American productions and manufactures alone to Mexico during the year 1883 amounted to $14,371,000, or $862,000 more than the value of the total exports of that country.

The imports of Central America, British Honduras included, amount to $11,164,000, and the exports to $15,551,000.

The imports of Cuba and Porto Rico are estimated at $62,805,000, and the exports at $75,000,000.

The imports of the French West Indies are estimated at $11,903,000, and the exports at $13,384,000.

Summarizing the whole trade of the countries of the American continent (except the United States and British North America) we have: Imports, $463,687,000; exports, $471,471,000; leaving a difference of only $7,784,000.

This shows that the import and export trade of the "inferior nations" is in substantial equivalence, and in fact conforms to a well defined law of necessity, that any group of such nations must import very nearly the value of their exports, but cannot go beyond this with impunity.

The foregoing equilibrium being established, it does not appear how "reciprocity treaties" could stultify themselves by "involving the surrender of enormously unequal sums of revenue and immensely larger volumes of home trade than are offered to us in return." The sole aim of reciprocity treaties, it need hardly be said, is the removal of trade inequalities by special stipulations, so that, for concessions given we may receive equivalents, and in devising such equivalents, other considerations than customs revenue become factors in the problem. Reciprocity accomplishes this by guarding the carrying interests, and by protecting the consumer from enhanced price, for under treaty stipulations the imposition of burdensome duties on ships and export duties on the merchandise we favor can be forbidden.

In the absence of reciprocity treaties with any of the foregoing "inferior nations," our trade therewith stands as follows:

Imports therefrom, $170,488,000; exports thereto, $74,759,000, show a balance of trade against us of $95,729,000, which can only be equalized through reciprocity treaties in some form.

As our trade with Brazil and the Spanish West Indies shows the most pronounced inequalities, it is herewith taken for illustration in this connection:

Our imports from Brazil amount to $50,266,000, and our exports thither to only $8,695,000—nearly six to one against us.

Our imports from Cuba and Porto Rico amount to $64,092,000, and our exports thither to $13,135,000—nearly five to one against us.

The reciprocity treaty now before the Senate was prepared with a view to the equalization of our Spanish West Indian trade, and the amount of revenue surrendered through its adoption would necessarily imply a reduction in colonial revenue, approaching equality to our reduction as our exports thither increased. Besides, the nature of our exports, for the increase would occur chiefly in manufactures, would be of far greater trade-value, dollar for dollar, than the imports from the colonies, which would continue to be raw sugars and tobacco chiefly, articles which after importation would undergo manipulation enough to entitle them to rank as American manufactures.

Reciprocity is impossible unless associated in some form with the surrender of revenues on both sides, and the only question to be considered in this connection is whether the advantages gained, directly and indirectly, immediately and ultimately, are of more general importance than the loss of revenue which results from its adoption.

In the case of Cuba and Porto Rico, seeing that we already import more than three-fourths of their total exports, there does not seem to be much danger that reciprocity would "involve the surrender of immensely larger volumes of home trade than are offered to us in return;" on the contrary it would open a large field for the consumption of our products and manufactures, now closed to us and occupied by other nations, and the tendency would be toward equalization of the existing disparity.

While upon the question of surrendering revenue, for which we may be supposed to receive reciprocal consideration in the form of revenue also surrendered by the party to our treaty, as well as in the shape of an enlarged export trade, it may not be inappropriate to refer to the fact that the revenue surrendered to Brazil in the single article of coffee, without any reciprocal returns whatever, would, if the duty were then in force, have amounted to $10,500,000 for the year 1884. If in surrendering this large revenue we had concluded a treaty of reciprocity with Brazil, our exports to that Empire would now amount to from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 per annum, composed principally of manufactures, instead of an annual export, as it is now, of $8,690,000, composed principally of natural products, while England and France export thereto manufactures to the annual value of $34,492,000 and $15,157,000, respectively.

Your attention may be here invited to the working of the reciprocity treaty with Hawaii, which may be taken as illustrative of what similar treaties would effect in our trade relations with the so-called "inferior nations."

The trade between the United States and Hawaii in 1876 and in 1884 was as follows:

Years.	Exports to Hawaii.	Imports from Hawaii.	Totals.
1876	$809,000	$1,383,000	$2,192,000
1884	3,523,000	7,926,000	11,449,000
Increase	2,714,000	6,543,000	9,257,000

Of the total commerce between the United States and Hawaii during the year 1884, about 95 per cent. was effected in American vessels, showing that this trade, with all its profits, freights, insurance, commissions, &c., as well as the regular profits on the merchandise imported and the manufactures exported, is in American hands. In this connection it may be stated that the whole round of our trade relations presents no other such favorable conditions.

The latest Hawaiian returns at hand are for the calendar year 1883; according to these the total imports into the Kingdom amounted to $5,624,000. The imports of American goods admitted free under the reciprocity treaty amounted to $3,169,000.

The imports of Hawaii subject to duty amounted to $2,187,000, of which American goods constituted $813,000 and British goods $939,000.

The importation of free goods under the general treaty amounted to $267,000, in which American goods must have held their full share. It thus appears that out of a total import amounting to $5,624,000, American products and manufactures amount to $4,000,000.

The population of Hawaii is estimated at 70,000; our exports thither in 1884 amounted to $3,523,000; this shows a per capita consumption of American goods as they leave our ports of a fraction over $50.

The following statement shows the per capita consumption of American products and manufactures in the several countries on this continent, British North America excepted:

Countries.	Population.	Exports from the United States.	Amounts per capita.
Hawaii	70,000	$3,523,000	$50 00
Mexico	9,300,000	12,744,000	1 36½
Central America	2,600,000	3,608,000	1 36
United States of Colombia	3,000,000	6,380,000	2 09
Venezuela	2,075,000	2,427,000	1 17
The Guianas	295,320	2,306,000	7 82
Brazil	12,000,000	8,695,000	72½
Uruguay	500,000	1,368,000	2 74
Argentine Republic	2,500,000	5,075,000	2 03
Chili	2,500,000	3,267,000	1 31
Bolivia	2,000,000	.....	.....
Peru	2,700,000	1,071,000	40
Ecuador	1,000,000	629,000	63
Spanish West Indies	2,307,000	13,135,000	5 69
British West Indies	1,133,000	8,849,000	7 98½
French West Indies	384,000	1,821,000	4 75
Hayti	572,000	2,760,000	4 82
San Domingo	290,000	1,294,000	4 46
Total	45,216,320	75,389,000	1.668

In 1876 the consumption of American goods in Hawaii amounted to $12.66 per capita. The increase under the reciprocity treaty has, therefore, been $37.34 per capita.

It is not intended in this communication, even for illustrative purposes, to create the impression that any system of reciprocity treaties must produce such favorable results in the foregoing countries as has been produced in the case of Hawaii; although the stimulus which reciprocity treaties would give to the development of the resources of many of the smaller countries, and the consequent increase in the consumption of our products and manufactures, would, undoubtedly, result in a marked enlargement of the total volume of trade.

I may assume that a well devised system of reciprocity treaties with the foregoing countries would produce results at least one tenth as favorable as those produced under the Hawaiian treaty. This would give a consumption of $5 per capita (a per capita consumption exceeded at present by the British and Spanish West Indies, and the Guianas, and nearly equaled by the French West Indies, Hayti, and San Domingo), which would give us an export trade amounting to $226,081,600, a gain on our present trade of $150,693,000.

Taking into further consideration the fact that of the total imports into the United States from the several countries under review, the goods entering free of duty amount to $75,882,000, against $94,814,000 subject to duty, it would seem as if the surrender of duty on our part would not equal that of the countries herein recited; neither does it appear to me that the home trade we would be called upon to surrender would be in "immensely larger volume than would be offered to us in return." Seeing that the trade which would be offered to us would be largely made up of manufactures, the benefits which would accrue would be simply what are contemplated in reciprocity treaties; that is, reciprocal.

The disparity in revenues surrendered is influenced by still another circumstance, growing out of the difference in the duties imposed in different countries. Sugar, for instance, in contrast with the general policy of treating raw materials with favor, is subject in the United States to a high duty.

The free admission into the United States of sugar to the value of one hundred millions releases more revenue than the free admission of one hundred millions of American manufactures into the several countries from which the sugar supply is derived; but, on the other hand, a reciprocity treaty prevents those countries from increasing their duties to the same proportion as the United States tariff.

The opening up of our markets to the natural products of the several countries would undoubtedly stimulate the development of their resources, as before asserted, but as this development would equally affect our exports thither, by creating markets therefor, and enabling and compelling the several countries to purchase more freely, as in the case of Hawaii, there need not be a single dollar or principle surrendered for which we would not receive much more than an equivalent.

It should be further borne in mind that any enlargement of our commerce under a system of reciprocity treaties would also stimulate our ship-building and shipping interests, for the special stipulations which would be advantageous to our general commerce would apply with equal advantage to our carrying trade. As in the case of Hawaii, our trade fostered and developed by reciprocity treaties would be largely in American hands, in the buying and selling, in the handling and shipping, as well as in the production and manufacture thereof—and it should be remembered that in international trade the handling, carrying, and shipping are secondary only to production, manufacture, and preparation—indeed, it may be questioned whether the commissionmen, handlers, and ocean carriers do not realize as much thereon as the producers.

I have thus sought to point out the impracticability of entering into reciprocal commercial interchanges with nations our equal in population and wealth, for the reason that the principal desire of such nations is to find markets for their manufactures, and that, at the best, they could only offer, even under the most favorable reciprocity treaties, a very little larger field for our natural products than their necessities give us under present conditions, in return for our surrender of revenue and home trade to make room for their manufactures.

On the other hand, all accessible conditions show that the nations which are inferior to us in population and wealth are those which can offer us new fields for the enlargement of our commerce through reciprocity treaties, and that without such treaties we cannot hope for enlargement sufficient to relieve our over-production, no matter what efforts we put forth in other ways.

The question may be thus summed up:

Our markets are necessary for the consumption of the products of "inferior nations," indeed, are natural markets therefor. Their markets are necessary for the consumption of our manufactures, are equally natural markets therefor. Certain artificial conditions intervene which turn these trade channels from their natural courses and prevent free interchange, to the mutual loss of the nations concerned and the disarrangement of the commerce of a continent.

The rational conclusion is that a balance can only be restored by reciprocity treaties.

There is scarcely a product of the countries under consideration that cannot be consumed in the United States; indeed, some of their leading products can only find a profitable market in the United States.

The principal portion of the sugar and coffee products already comes to the United States. The development of the beet-root industry in Europe has reached that stage where it not only supplies home demand in many cases, but the product is being already exported. England is therefore the only market of consequence left in Europe for the import of American sugars.

Notwithstanding our high tariff on sugars as contrasted with admission thereof into England, the sugar imports from this continent into England amount to only $25,000,000 against $83,000,000 imported into the United States.

Our total imports from the countries under review amount to $170,488,000 against $116,182,000 and $115,867,000 as imported into England and France respectively. Our total exports to the same countries amount to only $74,759,000 against $127,788,000 and $84,929,000 from England and France respectively.

The balance of trade is against us to the amount of $95,729,000; against France to the amount of $30,938,000, and in favor of England to the amount of $11,606,000. The balance of trade against France is due to the large imports of wool and hides from the Argentine Republic. As these two articles enter into the leading manufactures of France the balance of trade here noted is of a profitable rather than of an unprofitable character.

The condition of our trade with this continent, as here cursorily reviewed, would seem to call for speedy adjustment. To my mind, the revenue collected on the imports from these several countries would be more than counterbalanced by even an increase in our exports thereto sufficient to bring them up to the English exports, and if such increase could be brought about by reciprocity it seems to me that the inauguration of a system of treaties to that end is worthy the immediate consideration of Congress.

The resources of the countries with which such treaties may be concluded are practically without limit, and their governments and people are fully alive to this fact. It follows that the superior nation which aids in such development can monopolize the greater portion of the import trade of each and all.

As before stated, the United States can consume, with profit to its industries, almost the entire product for export of these countries, the principal products being necessary to our industries, and secure for itself a large portion of the imports thereinto.

To attain such a consummation some revenue will have to be surrendered, and, perhaps, some home trade displaced; but for every dollar of revenue surrendered, and for every dollar's worth of home trade displaced, we will receive equivalent in our enlarged exports, and the impetus given to our various industries from the field to the factory and from the foundry to the ship-yard.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

Unification and simplification of legal practice.

f the practice and proceedings in all the courts of this country were the same; if y were, in all the classes of cases in each of these courts, as nearly the same as the ure of the proceedings would permit; and if, in addition, this uniform method of cedure were simplified to the wisest point of practical reform, the labor of lawyers learning practice and of both bench and bar in settling questions of practice uld be greatly lessened, because every lawyer, if he engages in business in various isdictions, must now learn several complicated systems, when he would then learn ly this one uniform and simplified practice; which, under the concentrated labors the bench and bar, of the whole country, would soon be cleared of ambiguity and come as nearly fixed and perfect as is permitted to human institutions to be; so at the works on practice and the books of reports, thus being divested largely of estions of practice, would then shrink to reasonable dimensions. This saving in ne, labor, and expense to the courts and to attorneys would inure to the immediate benefit of litigants in a speedier, less costly and more satisfactory decision of their controversies.

But, there being no one legislative authority competent to prescribe a code of procedure and compel its use in all the Federal, State, and Territorial courts, such uniformity can be secured only by obtaining for it, as a reasonable improvement in the personal interests of the people, the approval of a majority in the several legislative bodies of the country and their favorable action thereon.

As a practical method of effecting this unification and simplification of legal practice in the entire country, it is proposed—

That Congress appoint a committee of its own members, or a commission outside of that body, to prepare a code of procedure for all Federal tribunals of every kind and jurisdiction, and invite and provide for the voluntary co-operation of the several States and Territories in the work of the commission; that Congress accompany such action by the declaration that, for the purpose of unifying and simplifying the judicial administration of law throughout the United States, it purposes to enact such a code as will be most likely to meet the needs and wishes of the whole country, and then to compel its use in all courts subject to its authority; all with the view to its voluntary adoption by each of the States and Territories.

The commission having prepared a Federal code of procedure, and Congress having made it the rule of action in all Federal courts, Federal authority could go no further in securing the desired end; but, so much wisely done, would secure the rest; and within a reasonably short time every State and Territory in the Union would, in its own interest, adopt it as its own. Public opinion tends strongly in that direction. Already the public judgment of a majority has been expressed in favor of such a simplified and unified code. It has already been adopted by eighteen States and by seven of the eight Territories. In substance and general methods these codes are the same and would almost to a certainty be the framework and model of the new Federal code, and thus would be secured in advance its adoption by twenty-five of the forty-six States and Territories. Add to this the influence of its compulsory use in all Federal courts in the non-code as well as in the code States and Territories as herein proposed, and no State or Territory could long withstand the demand of its people, both the bar and laity, to be placed in line with the rest.

But while the fundamental ideas, and, indeed, the salient provisions of these codes are the same, lack of concert of action in carrying them into detail has led to a diversity of form in many instances where the substance is the same, which diversity would mainly disappear when uniformity should become, as it then would, a common end sought by all. Absolute sameness in all details, could, perhaps, never be obtained in all jurisdictions, nor is it essential.

To the members of the legal profession nothing need be added to the brief statement already made to secure their assent to the desirableness of a simpler and more uniform practice. It must have occurred to all this absolute waste of educated labor is too great to longer escape attention and an effort for a remedy. There is constantly forced on the attention of each one the great disproportion in legal literature between the amount devoted to the exposition of legal principles and that required to settle the practice. In the law library at Saint Louis, Mo., which may be rightly assumed to be an average sample of law libraries and of legal literature in general, there are a few more than thirteen thousand volumes. Of these about twenty-seven hundred volumes are reports and other expositions of foreign laws; about 10,300 volumes are devoted to American law, and are divided as follows: On practice in the Federal and State courts, 180 volumes; Federal, State, and territorial reports, 3,629 volumes; digests, 362 volumes.

Some of these reports are exclusively Practice reports, and all are largely filled with discussions and decisions on practice. If it be assumed, as is believed to be correct, that one-third of the reports and digests are devoted to practice, we have, with 180 volumes on practice, a total of 1,510 volumes devoted to American practice out of a total of 10,282 volumes on American law. This large number is beyond its due proportion to meet the necessities of this branch of legal learning. The waste of labor shown by this disproportion in legal literature is a fair index of similar waste on the part of both bench and bar in the whole routine of practice. The time has arrived when the public judgment, both in and out of the profession, if it does not demand, will, at least, sustain an organized effort throughout the United States, to systematize legal labor, and, by a general movement, to discard cumbrous forms and methods and replace them with others that have the simplicity and directness of adaptation of means to ends that characterize modern labor, and thereby to make judicial administration the best possible means for the speedy and just decision of legal controversites.

Such a reform will, in the natural course of things and of necessity, be followed by a codification, little by little perhaps, of the great body of the law. To simplify forms and systematize administrative labor will crystallize principles into codes.

The substance of the suggestion herein made is to enable the States to indirectly prescribe their own system of legal proceeding for the Federal courts. Congress has already, in section 914, United States Revised Statutes, requiring Federal courts in each State to use that State's practice, expressed its willingness to co-operate to that end; and the Supreme Court of the United States (91 U. S. 441), in commenting on this section, says: "The purpose of the provision is apparent on its face. It was to bring about uniformity in the law of procedure in the Federal and State courts of the same locality. It had its origin in the code enactments of many of the States. While in the Federal tribunals the common-law pleadings, forms, and practices were adhered to, in the State courts of the same district the simpler forms of the local code prevailed. This involved the necessity on the part of the bar of studyng two distinct systems of remedial law, and of practicing according to the wholly dissimilar requirements of both. The inconvenience of such a state of things is obvious. The evil was a serious one. It was the aim of the provision in question to remove it."

A majority of the States and Territories, as we have already seen, Congress, and the Federal judiciary are at one on this subject. It needs only that they act in concert. But it is a voluntary combination, and any dissenting State would be then, as now, free to retain its own peculiar practice.

Soon, much sooner than may now seem possible, the practical good sense of this active people would evolve from the complicated methods of the past a simple method composed of the excellences of all; and, from the brief and comprehensive rules of code pleading, would come forth a system quite as rational and far more easily applied than even the common-law system is claimed to be.

The awards made to those Creeks who enlisted in the Federal Army, loyal refugees and freedmen, and asking the action of Congress upon that subject.

FEBRUARY 24, 1885.—Referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The undersigned, loyal Creek Indians of the Creek Nation, are charged by those loyal Creeks who enlisted in the Federal Army, loyal refugees and freedmen, with the duty of presenting and urging upon the attention of Congress the claim of those individuals against the United States, by virtue of an award made to them by a commission composed of the agent of the Creeks and the superintendent of Indian affairs for the Southern superintendency, which award was duly approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior. To accomplish that object, we beg leave to present this memorial, and thus respectfully, but earnestly, urge Congress to pay said awards and thereby not only do that justice promised by our treaties, but relieve our people and enable them to pursue their efforts of civilization and progress.

A short history of the Creek Nation becomes necessary to show the reasons for their views, to explain their conduct, and to show the security they felt in the treaty of 1856, that the legality of the claim shall be beyond controversy, and its equity be startlingly apparent.

While the Creek Nation was in Alabama it was divided into two bands and known as the Upper and Lower Creeks, but better known among the nation as the McIntosh and Ho-po-thle-ya ho-la bands. In the war of 1814 the McIntosh band joined the forces of the United States, and fought and conquered the Ho-po-thle-ya-ho-la band. At that time our nation was comparatively uncivilized, with no property save ponies and huts. Yet at the conclusion of that war the Congress of the United States paid the individuals of the McIntosh band $195,000 for the loss of property, which they sustained by reason of their joining the forces of the United States and making war upon the Ho-po-thle-ya-ho-la band; this, too, without any treaty stipulations requiring it. Our nation subsequently removed to their present locality. In the traditionary history of all their councils it is clearly shown that the subject which engaged their attention most was how to obtain guarantees from the United States for protection against domestic violence upon them, committed by Indians.

The last clause of this article brings the Indians within the diction of the act of June 30, 1834, known as the intercourse law. law provides, in substance, that where a white person shall hav property stolen or destroyed by an Indian, such white person sha ceive full pay therefor out of the annuities of the nation of India which the Indian or Indians belong who stole or destroyed the erty; but if they have no annuity, then out of the Treasury o United States.

If, then, upon this principle and this rule the United States agre pay this indemnity to the Creeks and Seminoles, it must be paid o the Treasury of the United States. Or, if our people are to come u sections 2154 and 2155 of the Revised Statutes (compiled section of 1834), still it must be paid out of the Treasury of the United St For those sections provide, in substance, that where a white p shall be convicted of the commission of any offense against an In he shall be sentenced to pay double the value of any property s or destroyed; and if the person cannot be convicted the individu dian whose property has been stolen or destroyed shall receive therefor out of the Treasury of the United States. But such ind nal Indian shall not receive pay for such losses if he or any memb the tribe to which he belongs has committed any act of reven which his misfortune was the result. Those Creeks who enlisted i Federal Army, loyal refugees and freedmen, are clearly entitled t demnity within the provisions of these sections, for they lost property mostly by those white persons whose cause they have espo as will more clearly appear hereafter, none of the nation having mitted any act of hostility against the whites for revenge.

In 1861, contrary to the treaty stipulations, the United States drew all protection from the Creeks, and to obtain that protection w the United States had guaranteed, a part of the Creek Nation tre with the so-called Southern Confederacy; and this, too, was the M tosh band, which, in the war of 1814, joined their fortunes with the U States against the Ho-po-thle-ya-ho-la band, while the Ho-po-thl ho-la band, relying in good faith upon the guarantees of their t e belief that the Indians will readily continue their dependence upon the United ates when persuaded that the Goverment is still maintained, and that it will not ıly give them all necessary protection, but faithfully perform all its treaties with ıem, and as soon as its agents can be established in their midst will in good faith conane their annuities; upon which last point especially you are requested to give them ıe strongest assurances. It is particularly desired that this belief should be impressed pon their minds in the most effectual manner, so that upon their return to their ·ibes they may report the facts. And it is believed that by this means the falsehood nd deception practiced upon them by the agents of the rebellious States may be sucessfully exposed. You will, of course, understand the importance of having this romptly done, because, if it is not, these deluded people may be induced to join the onfederate forces and take up arms against the United States. The President's conciousness of this fact has prompted him to indicate you as the most suitable person) do this; an opinion in which I fully concur. (See report of the Commissioner of ndian Affairs for the year of 1861, page —.)

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,
June 5, 1862.

SIR: I return herewith a resolution adopted by the House of Representatives, in ıe following words, calling for information from you relative to the Southern Refugee ıdians who are now in Kansas; which resolution was, on the 29th instant, referred y you to this office for the information sought.

I cannot, perhaps, better give the information desired than by reporting the action ' this office more or less in detail. On the 9th day of January last I received inırmation that the disloyal Indians in the territory west of Arkansas, aided by a conderable force of white troops from Texas and Arkansas, had attacked the Union or ıyal Indians of that territory.

The Union Indians, as nearly as I could ascertain, were composed of three-fourths f the Creeks, one-half or two-thirds of the Seminoles, and members from all other ·ibes in said Territory, except, perhaps, the Choctaws and Chickasaws, of whom very ıw, if any, adhered to the Government.

Notwithstanding the abandonment of all the forts of the Territory by the United tates troops, and treachery of the superintendent and agents first appointed by the resent administration, these Indians stood firmly to their treaty obligations with ıe United States, and under the renowned Ho po-thle-ya-ho-la met their opponents pon the battle-field. Twice they succeeded in repulsing the combined forces of whites nd Indians arrayed against them, but in the third battle, which took place early in anuary last, they were defeated and compelled to flee from the country with their ımilies, leaving everything in the way of property that would impede their flight. hey reached Kansas about the middle of that month. When in December last, and revious to any knowledge of their defeat, I learned of the noble struggle then being ıade by Ho-po-thle-ya-ho-la and the Creeks, Seminoles, and other Indians under im. I renewed through you my application to the War Department for troops ır their relief, which resulted in authority being given to General Hunter to organe and arm four thousand loyal Indians, to accompany the expedition then proposed o be sent into the Indian country under General Lane. On the 3d day of January ast I received your communication (copy herewith marked A), authorizing me to ssist General Hunter in the organization of these Indians. After advising with the 'resident and yourself I proceeded to Fort Leavenworth, in Kansas, which point I eached late in January last.

On my arrival I was informed by General Hunter that Ho-po-thle-ya-ho-la had been lefeated, and was, with five or six thousand of his people, in Southern Kansas in a nost deplorable condition—men, women, and children naked, starving, and without ıelter. Numbers of them had been wounded in battle, and very many being barefooted, and otherwise exposed, were badly frozen. The sick and feeble, the dead and lying, were scattered along their route for a hundred miles or more. I had no information until I reached Kansas of these disasters.

On the 6th day of February I received a communication from General Hunter, with ccompanying documents (copies herewith marked B, C, D), advising me that he ould only supply the people with provisions temporarily; that the provisions made by the officers under his command for their support would be exhausted by the 15th lay of February, and from that time I would be expected to make provision for them. I could but feel that the responsibility was great. The numbers had been accumulatng, until it was estimated that they amounted to eight thousand to be provided for, nd these lying upon the ground, which was covered with snow and ice; and the weather intensely cold. General Hunter advised me that he had no authority to furnish them clothing, but that Superintendent Coffin, acting under his advice, had purchased some $10,000 worth of blankets and other necessaries. It will be seen that this purchase amounted to no more than $1.25 to $1.50 for each person, and left them about as destitute as before. They were, therefore, not only to be fed, but also clothed. I had no funds applicable to the purpose, and was powerless to relieve them except by purchases made on the faith of an appropriation to be at the discretion of Congress. The superintendent was in Southern Kansas, so that I could not consult or reach him with instructions as to the immediate wants of the Indians. I therefore appointed Dr. William Kile, of Illinois, who, being commissioned by the President to act upon General Lane's staff, was then in Kansas, and had been detailed by that officer as brigade quartermaster, as a special agent to act temporarily in supplying the necessities of these wards of the Government (see copy of instructions herewith, marked E). On the same day I telegraphed to you as follows: "C. B. Smith, Secretary of the Interior: Six thousand Indians driven out of Indian Territory naked and starving. General Hunter will only feed them until 15th. Shall I take care of them on the faith of an appropriation?" To which I received the following reply: "Go on and supply the destitute Indians. Congress will supply the means. War Department will not organize them." I was also advised by you that difficulties had arisen in the way of organizing Indians into the Army; that General Lane's expedition had been countermanded, but that it was not expected that it would be abandoned, but would go forward under command of General Hunter, with whom I arranged verbally for the protection of the Indians to their homes whenever it should proceed.

On my return to Washington I advised you fully as to the condition of these people, and then learned that Congress had authorized the application of their annuities to their relief. Still, being anxious that they should immediately return to their homes, in order to plant crops in season for their support during the coming year, I again, with your hearty concurrence, urged upon the War Department the propriety of arming a home guard of Indians, who, with a sufficient escort of white troops, should return with these people to their homes and protect them there while raising a crop. This resulted in an order from the War Department to General Halleck, directing him to detail two regiments of white troops to accompany two thousand Indians, to be armed for the purpose above stated. I also obtained an order upon the commandant at Fort Leavenworth for two thousand rifles, and suitable ammunition to arm the two thousand Indian home guards. That there might be no delay in the execution of these orders, Judge Steele was appointed a special messenger to bear them to their destination. What action was taken by General Halleck, under the order delivered to him, I am unable to say. The order for the rifles and ammunition was honored at Leavenworth, and on the 16th of April they were delivered to the superintendent in Southern Kansas.

For some time but little was heard of the expedition, but on the 16th day of May I received a communication from Colonel Furnas, of the First Indian Regiment, inclosing an order issued by General Sturgis, for the arrest of all officers and others engaged in executing the order of the War Department relating to Indian home guards. I mention these particulars to show that I had reason to consider these people as only temporarily in Kansas, and to expect from week to week that they would be on their way home.

After the order to arrest the officers engaged in organizing the Indian home guards, the changes in the command of the Kansas millitary department were so rapid that I have been unable to keep pace with the proceedings; but, from the best information I have, I believe the expedition, if not already started, will soon be en route for its destination.

Superintendent Coffin estimates the per diem expense of subsisting these Indians at 15 cents each. An estimate furnished to me by Captain Turner, chief of the commissary department at Fort Leavenworth, was the basis of my instructions to Agent Kile and Superintendent Coffin. (In this connection, see paper marked F.) Learning that Mr. Collamore was in this city, and had recently visited these Indians and made careful investigation as to their number and condition, and believing that information derived from him would be reliable, as at the commencement of the rebellion he was selected as State agent and quartermaster, to provide subsistence and forage for the Kansas troops, I have procured from him a report of the numbers and the various tribes comprising these refugees, and his estimate of the cost of clothing and subsistence necessary for a given time, a copy of which is herewith, marked G. I have no means other than the estimates to even approximate the daily expense of feeding and clothing these Indians. Some $25,000 of accounts for purchases have been forwarded here, examined, and paid. From $50,000 to $55,000 have been forwarded to Superintendent Coffin, but no account of his disbursements has yet reached me, though I learn by telegraph that his accounts for the past quarter are on the way. I have, as instructed by you, ordered the accounts for the present quarter to be forwarded to this office for examination before payment.

Special Agent Kile is still employed under his original instructions, as I have seen no reason to change them, and do not know what day the removal of the Indians will enable me to dispense with his services.

For your information I will state the mode of distributing the articles purchased, whether of clothing or provisions. Agent Kile makes no disbursements but turns over to Superintendent Coffin all purchases, taking his receipt therefor. No claims or account is allowed except such as are certified by Agent Kile and Superintendent Coffin. Mr. Culter, of Kansas, agent for the Creeks, Mr. Coleman, of Indiana, agent for the Choctaws and Chickasaws, Mr. Chatterton, of Illinios, agent for the Cherokees, Mr. Shaw, of Indiana, agent for the Seminoles, and Mr. Carruth, of Kansas, agent for the Wichitas, are upon the ground, acting as commissaries for their respective tribes, and to them the goods are delivered for distribution by Superintendent Coffin, he taking their receipts for the same. When funds are in the hands of Superintendent Coffin he may pay accounts; otherwise they are forwarded to the office for adjustment; and in this connection it is proper to state that all expenses incident to the support and relief of these Indians are paid from their annuities, under authority of the act of Congress above mentioned.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. P. DOLE,
Commissioner.

Hon. C. B. SMITH,
Secretary of the Interior.

During the entire war none of the annuities were paid for any purpose designated by treaty, but all their annuities, with those of other Indian nations, were gathered into one vast sum and used for the purpose of feeding and clothing refugees from the Indian country. The Indians were poorly clothed and poorly fed, but they bore this without complaint. All that was done with reference to the diversion of annuities from 1861 to 1866, inclusive, was done without authority of treaty, and had to be remedied by treaty, which was made in 1866. The Creeks had been in their country for a long time, and in lieu of being uncivilized they were comparatively civilized. They had good houses, large farms, inclosed with good fences; they had immense herds of cattle and horses, and all the comforts and many of the luxuries of civilized life. They could have gone with the McIntosh band and saved all their property; but they chose obedience to their treaty obligations and loyalty to that Government which had guaranteed protection to them and indemnity for all losses of property which they might sustain by so doing. Remembering that the individuals of the McIntosh band were indemnified for their losses when they joined the United States against the Ho-po-thle-ya-ho-la band, when no law or treaty required it, they felt doubly secure when a positive treaty obligated the United States to do for the Ho-po-thle-ya-ho la band in this case that which they voluntarily did in 1814 for the McIntosh band.

Our houses were burned, our fences destroyed, and our fields laid waste by those who were hostile to us for going north, and our vast herds of cattle and horses were stolen and taken north and sold to feed and supply the Army of the United States, and to cattle-brokers to speculate upon our misfortunes. So extensive did this matter become that to read the report of Superintendent Sells, made to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in 1865, you must conclude that in order to be respectable in those days men had to steal some Indian cattle. In that report he estimates the value of cattle stolen out of the Indian country and taken to be $4,500,000. With this amount of property stolen (although we know he did not approximate to the value of the property which was taken north) and with the vast sum of annuities which were diverted during the six years, it became necessary that some settlement should be made to do justice to the loyal Indians, &c.

The expedient of a treaty was resorted to, and in 1866 our nation was requested to meet a commission of the United States for the purpose of making a new treaty. Those who had been south had returned; they were the most learned and sagacious in all such matters; they were suspicious of wrong-doing and sensitive for the welfare of the whole nation, but their counsels and protests were unheeded by the commissioners of the United States, while those who had been loyal to their treaty stipulations, and had been in the Army of the United States, confiding implicitly in the good faith of the United States, selected three delegates to represent them in the council to make a new treaty—three men, neither of whom could speak one word of English, and for an interpreter a freedman who could neither read nor write. Under these circumstances and with these delegates the treaty of 1866 was made and explained and signed. They forced us to sell nearly one-half of our national domain for less than half per acre than was paid the Cherokees and Osages for land not half as good. When it was discovered a wrong had been committed against the Osages the whole power of the Government was brought into requisition to do them full justice, but not so with the loyal Creek Indians. The $100,000 to be paid to those who enlisted in the Federal Army, loyal refugees and freedmen, "proportionate to their losses," was explained to them to mean that it was only a payment in part; and the fourth article was explained to them to mean a manner by which their losses could be ascertained, and that they should be paid in full; that the eleventh article provided only a settlement of any controversy which might arise with reference to the annuities which had been diverted, or any kindred national claim; and that article 14 confirmed all their rights under article 18 of the treaty of 1856; under these circumstances they signed that treaty of 1866. Under article 4 of the treaty of 1866, the United States agent of the nation and the superintendent of Indian affairs for the southern superintendency made the investigation of the losses of the loyal Creek Indians. Those who had lost filed a statement of the precise property lost and its value, under oath, with these two officers. The amount of claims thus filed amounted to over $5,000,000, the agent and superintendent acting as a commission on the part of the United States.

After a careful scrutiny of each claim an award was made of the amount due each individual, the aggregate of which was $1,900,000. These awards were approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior, and are now on file in the Department of the Interior. About 5 per cent. of this amount has been paid. The balance remains unpaid.

That the Ho-po-thle-ya-ho-la band of the Creek Nation were loyal to the United States is not denied; that they lost $1,900,000 is the verdict of a Commission composed of United States officers, and that verdict is approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior. The United States owe these individuals that sum of money, or the treaty of 1866 was made to protect the respectable thieves (as Superintendent Sells calls them in his report of 1865), and to leave these Indians in poverty and distress because they were Indians. The young men of the Ho-po-thle-ya-ho-la band joined the Federal Army, not as scouts or Indians, but as soldiers, and did valiant service, many of them giving their lives to the cause. They were swindled out of most of their bounty and first payment of their pension by an agent of the United States, but no reparation is made to the soldier, or widow, or orphan.

This award is in no sense a national claim, but an individual claim of the "party or parties" referred to in Article 18 of the treaty of 1856, and there is nothing in the treaty of 1866 with which it conflicts. That their claim is legal there can be no question; that all the equity is with them is beyond the shadow of a doubt. Their poverty in consequence of their losses is more than oppressive; civilization has been retarded for years, and they almost look upon their present condition as a penalty for their loyalty. Therefore we ask in their behalf your early and favorable action upon the subject, and a settlement of the whole matter. We beg at your hands action upon this matter now, that the suffering of those who have lost may be relieved, and that the claim may not lie dormant for years, until the real sufferers are dead, and the claim, like many others similar to it, will be met with the complaint that it has become stale and therefore cannot be considered.

Finally, at the close of the late war, and before the treaty of 1866 was made, the United States was obligated by treaty to pay to the "party or parties" whatever they had lost by the "aggression of other Indians and white persons." By the "aggressions of other Indians and white persons" the Ho-po-thle-ya-ho-la band of the Creek Nation lost houses, their fences, and their farming implements; by the aggression of white men from Kansas and other border States they lost their vast herds of cattle and horses, and the United States had agreed to pay them by article 18 of the treaty of 1856, and in which these Indians felt perfect security. Those individuals of the Ho-po-thle-ya-ho-la band of Indians had a vested right in that contract which could not have been treated away without their consent or the full payment. The treaty of 1866 does not interfere with those vested rights, but confirms them. Article 4 of the treaty of 1866 provides a means by which the exact amount each individual had lost could be ascertained and guarantees payment therefor. Article 14 of said treaty confirms the existence of article 18 of the treaty of 1856. Under article 4 of the treaty of 1866, a commission was created to examine the claims and make an award. They did so after a most critical examination, and made an award to each individual, the aggregate of which was $1,900,000. One hundred thousand dollars has been paid them out of the funds belonging to the nation; there is still due them $1,800,000 out of the Treasury of the United States.

The United States paid the McIntosh band $195,000 out of the Treasury for property lost, because of their loyalty in 1814. They had but little property to lose, and the United States were not required by law or treaty to pay them. The United States have paid the Ho-po-thle-ya-ho-la band only $100,000, and this out of the fund belonging to the Creek Nation, for their loyalty, notwithstanding the fact of a treaty in which it is stipulated that all such loss should be paid out of the Treasury of the United States; the United States have acknowledged that at the lowest possible estimate their losses were $1,900,000. Is the comparison a fair or just one? We in their behalf ask that it be paid and paid to the individuals who lost, or their legal representatives, a list of whose names is on file in the Department of the Interior, together with the amounts awarded.

That there may be early and favorable action is the prayer of your petitioners.

ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

BRARIAN OF CONGRESS,

EXHIBITING

THE PROGRESS OF THE LIBRARY

DURING THE

CALENDAR YEAR 1884.

WASHINGTON:
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.
1885.

ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

LIBRARIAN OF CONGRESS.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS,
Washington, February 14, 1885.

The Librarian presents herewith his annual report, summarizing the condition and recent growth of the Library of Congress, and the business of the copyright department, for the calendar year closing December 31, 1884.

The enumeration of the books and other publications in the Library has been attended with increasing difficulty, because of its overcrowded condition in every part, rendering a second count necessary in some divisions of the collection to verify the figures. As completed, it exhibits an aggregate of 544,687 volumes, and of 185,000 pamphlets. This is an increase of 31,246 volumes during the year 1884, derived from the following sources:

	Volumes.
From purchase	7,261
From copyright deposits	15,145
From deposit by the Smithsonian Institution	2,779
From exchanges	2,397
From donations	3,248
From increase of the Toner collection (presented)	416
Total	31,246

The enumeration in the law department of the Library gives a total of 63,265 volumes, included in this aggregate, and showing additions during the year of 2,546 volumes in the law library.

The copyright office still shows an increased business, both in the number of entries and in the publications deposited, notwithstanding the commercial and industrial depression. The number of copyright entries in the year 1884 was 26,893, showing an increase over 1883 of 1,620 entries. The fees received for copyright amounted to $21,773, being $874 more than in the year preceding.

The following table embraces the various classes and number of publications entered by their titles for copyright in 1884:

Number of articles entered in 1884.

Books	9,555
Periodicals	5,570
Dramatic compositions	587
Musical compositions	6,241
Photographs	836
Engravings and chromos	1,868
Maps and charts	1,622
Prints	42
Designs and drawings	436
Paintings	136
Total	26,893

The following statement exhibits the number of each class of publications deposited in the Library, and the additions thus made to the collection by the copyright law:

Number of copyright publications received in 1884.

Books	15,145
Periodicals	12,118
Dramatic compositions	196
Musical compositions	11,247
Photographs	1,509
Engravings and chromos	2,726
Maps and charts	2,452
Prints	85
Designs and drawings	129
Total	45,610

As the law requires the deposit of two copies of each publication to be deposited in order to perfect the copyright, the net addition to the collections during the year embraced 22,805 separate articles, of which 7,573 were books and 6,059 were periodicals. The aggregate increase in the receipts of copyright publications in 1884 over those of 1883 was 2,172.

The various funds appropriated for the Library exhibit unexpended balances as follows on the 1st of January, 1885:

Fund for increase of the Library	$10,205 50
Fund for works of art	8,470 72
Fund for contingent expenses of Library	1,348 16
Fund for additional accommodations	2 90
Fund for purchase and printing of unpublished historical manuscripts relating to early French discoveries in America	3,160 04

Since the beginning of the year several important accessions of miscellaneous books and pamphlets have been received from the Department of State, including many duplicates from the library of that Department, as well as volumes not needed for the uses of that collection, but which help to fill gaps in the Library of far wider range at the Capitol. The continuations of newspaper serials deposited in the Library of Congress by the Department of State have also been received, bound, and made available for immediate reference. The growing importance of periodical literature, both American and foreign, and the great and increasing demands upon public libraries for the freshest material for use and reference, render these acquisitions of special value. The same is to be said of the very considerable body of periodicals and serial reports, commercial, industrial, and financial, which have been deposited in this Library during the past year (as well as in previous years) by the Bureau of Statistics, which has inadequate room for rapidly-growing files of periodicals. These accessions, likely to be widely extended hereafter from various Departments and Bureaus of the Government which have room only for a carefully-selected working library of reference, while they are temporarily accommodated with storage in the rooms recently provided beneath the Library, add increased force to the urgent demand for a new building.

THE TONER COLLECTION.

The valuable collection of books, periodicals, and pamphlets presented to the Government in 1882 by Joseph M. Toner, M. D., has been further increased during the year just closed by the addition of 416 volumes of books, besides 2,284 pamphlets, purchased and presented by the original donor of the library; which, added to the original gift and annual additions, makes a total of books and pamphlets in this collection of 28,116 volumes of books, besides about 18,000 pamphlets. This collection, thus fostered and cared for, needs wider and more accessible space for its arrangement and preservation, and its acceptance by Congress, executed as it was in view of what was deemed the immediate prospect of the erection of a new and commodious National Library building, adds another to the many cogent arguments for the consummation of that object.

THE LIBRARY BUILDING QUESTION.

At the last session of Congress a bill was passed by the Senate, with practical unanimity, providing for the erection of an ample fire-proof building for the accommodation of the Congressional Library, on grounds immediately east of the Capitol, and separated therefrom by the eastern park and by the line of First street. This bill, unfortunately for the interests of the Library and the protection of the Government property, has not yet reached a consideration in the House of Representatives. It is quite unnecessary for the undersigned to add here any further statements to the suggestions urged in many former reports as to the pressing necessity for a permanent and adequate provision for the Library of the nation. There is no public want which has been more universally recognized, nor is there any object of expenditure which could be more unanswerably defended upon grounds of public expediency, or which would receive a more hearty and general sanction at the hands of the people. It is earnestly hoped that the present Congress will give effect to the general desire by providing for this great collection the accommodation so indispensable and so long delayed.

AINSWORTH R. SPOFFORD,
Librarian of Congress.

Hon. JOHN SHERMAN,
Chairman of the Joint Committee on the Library.

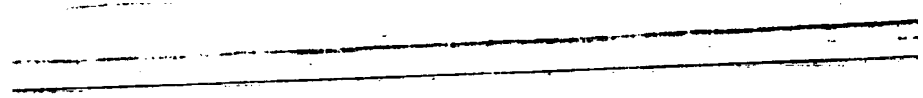
FEBRUARY 28, 1885.—Referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HILL submitted the following

RESOLUTION:

Resolved, That it is the opinion of the Senate that no patents should issue to the assignee of the New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Vicksburg Railroad Company to the lands granted to the said company until the Senate has acted upon the pending bill relating to that subject.

O



3TH CONGRESS, 2d Session. } SENATE. { MIS. DOC. No. 61.

MEMORIAL OF J. C. ADAMS,

FOR AND IN BEHALF OF

HE STOCKBRIDGE AND MUNSEE TRIBE OF INDIANS.

:BRUARY 28, 1885.—Referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

› the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

We are constrained to notice a memorial and protest against the ıssage of bill (H. R. 2889) claiming to be on behalf of the Stockbridge ation. (Senate Mis. Doc. 119, Forty-eighth Congress, first session.)

This memorial has been addressed to the Congress of the United tates, and contains sundry statements against the tribe which, if unnswered, would greatly mislead and attach gross injustice to a greater ortion of the tribe against whom it is made. It will be observed ıe memorial is long, and is framed to misrepresent facts, by one who ı either unacquainted with our tribal affairs, or else skilled in intriguery nd false accusation.

We wish it to be particularly noticed by your honorable body that efore we were made acquainted with the purports of said memorial we ıd submitted all our communication to the honorable Commissioner of ıdian Affairs, and that the honorable Committee on Indian Affairs of ıe House of Representatives had considered the subject-matter and ade a favorable report thereon and recommended the passage of bill 89. (H. R. Report No. 1054, Forty-eighth Congress, first session.)

And if the committee had been misled by misrepresentations of facts, which evidence could have been found, if we were acting under the fluence of which we are charged.

Without stating at length our grievances and reposing the fullest faith the justice and equity of our claim, we, for ourselves and in behalf the Stockbridge and Munsee tribe of Indians, beg leave to submit e following brief for your consideration:

In 1808 the Stockbridge and Munsee tribe of Indians, in conjunction ıth the Delawares, obtained a grant of land from the Miami Indians ı White River, Indiana. (P. 111, Appendix, Rep. Secretary War, 20.) The right to this land the Miamis subsequently recognized in ıe second article of the treaty of Fort Wayne, of 30th September, 1809. Stats., vol. 7, p. 113.)

On the 3d of October, 1818, the United States by treaty purchased f the Delawares this tract of land. (Stats., vol. 7, p. 188.)

The Stockbridge and Munsees claimed an equal interest in this land. he United States promised to aid them to make a purchase of lands om the Western tribes.

Under encouragement given by letter from the Hon. John C. Calhoun,

Secretary of War, of the 12th of February, 1816, and February 9, 1820, and of June 4 and 21, 1821. (Senate Doc. 189, pp. 10, 12, 13, Twenty-seventh Congress, second session.)

On the 18th day of August, 1821, the Stockbridge and Munsee tribe of Indians, in connection with the Six Nations, made a treaty with the Winnebagoes and Menomonees for the purchase of a tract of land near Green Bay, Wis. (Same document, 189, pp. 15, 16, 17, &c).

On the 23d of September, 1822, a second treaty was made with the same parties for another tract. (Same document 189), and part subsequently.

These treaties were approved by the President February 9, 1822, and March 13, 1823. (Ib., 16, 21.)

The Stockbridge and Munsees took immediate possession of these lands, and continued upon them in peace until 1830, at which time the Menomonees alone became dissatisfied, and made application to the Government to adjust the "difficulties," which arose about the extent of the purchase of 1821 and 1822. The United States, on the 8th day of February, 1831 (without the consent of the Stockbridges, Munsees, or Winnebagoes), made a treaty with the Menomonees to settle the "difficulty." The location of the land in question was defined to be between the Fox River and Oconto Creek, and embracing an area of 500,000 acres. (Stats., vol. 7, p. 342.) In 1832, June 25, this location was further modified by a resolution of the Senate. (Stats., vol. 7, p. 347.)

In consequence of this a further treaty, with an appendix, was agreed to on the 27th day of October, 1832, and proclaimed March 13, 1833. (Stats., vol. 7, p. 405.)

By these treaties and modifications the Stockbridges and Munsees were secured two townships of land on the east side of Lake Winnebago, where they removed to in 1834.

On January 15, 1838, the United States, by treaty with the New York Indians, purchased all their lands in Wisconsin, except a small tract set apart and occupied by a portion of these Indians. (Stats., vol. 7, pp. 550, 551.)

By the 2d article of the treaty, the United States agreed to set apart a tract of land west of the Missouri as a permanent home for all the New York Indians, whether residing in the State of Wisconsin or elsewhere, being 320 acres for each of said Indians, as their numbers are at present computed, and the land to be held "in fee simple."

And it was understood and agreed that the Stockbridges and Munsees were to be included, and the same is to be divided equally among them according to their respective numbers as mentioned in a Schedule, A, made at that time. (Stats., vol. 7, pp. 651–556.)

By the terms of the treaty, the Government was to have appropriated $400,000 to be applied from time to time, under the direction of the President, to aid them in removing and their support.

A portion of the Stockbridge tribe became dissatisfied and desired to remove to the tract set apart for the "New York Indians." Accordingly, a treaty was made the 3d of September, 1839, by which the United States purchased one township of land, and a portion of the tribe obligated itself to remove west of the Mississippi. (Stats., vol. 7, p. 580.)

After their removal west they lived upon the lands of the Delawares, in Missouri, until arrangements could be made to locate on the lands known as the "New York tract," in which they had a right in common with the Six Nations, but the "white squatters" would not let the Indians reside upon the "New York tract," and drove them off.

A few years afterward a number of the Indians returned back to the tribe, but were not "readopted" as stated by the "memorialist." They were told that they could live with the tribe until a treaty could be made, and then provision would be made to bring them back into the tribe again.

And as the Government had not assigned these Indians any homes in the West; the Commissioner of Indian Affairs instructed the Superintendent of Indian Affairs that "arrangements ought therefore be made at once to provide them with a home to which they could be induced to remove."

In the preamble, and in article 6 of the treaty of February 5, 1856, their right is explicitly acknowledged. (See vol. 11, p. 663–665.) A few years afterwards dissention again arose in the tribe; a minority of the tribe desired to become "citizens of the United States." A petition was drawn up and signed by the minority of the tribe, praying that Congress might pass a law to make the Stockbridge Indians citizens of the United States.

The advocates of this measure were called the "citizen's party," and those who were opposed were called the "Indian party."

On March 3d, 1843, the prayer of the petition was granted, and the Stockbridges (but not Munsees) were declared to be citizens of the United States. (Stats., vol. 5, p. 645.)

The first section of the act authorizes the lands of the Stockbridges to be patented and divided among the different individuals composing the tribe, and the holding of those lands by them separately and severally "in fee simple."

The second section provides that commissioners are to make a just and fair partition and division of the lands among the members of the tribe.

The third section provides for the election of five commissioners from the individuals of the tribe by a majority of the whole number of such voters present.

The fourth section provides for the allotment and division of the lands.

The fifth section provides for the manner in which the commissioners shall make their returns, and in which appeals shall be received from the allotment.

The sixth section provides for the return of copies of the report of the commissioners.

The seventh section provides for the return of the reports and maps to the President, and confers the right of citizenship on the Stockbridges (but not on the Munsees). It expressly declares—

> That after the report and maps shall have been filed and transmitted to the President as aforesaid, the said Stockbridge tribe of Indians, and each and every of them, shall then be deemed to be citizens of the United States, to all intents and purposes, and shall be entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities of such citizens, and shall in all respects be subject to the laws of the United States and of the Territory of Wisconsin in the same manner as other citizens of said Territory; and the jurisdiction of the United States and of said Territory shall be extended over the said township or reservation now held by them in the same manner as over other parts of said Territory; and their rights as a tribe or nation, their power of making or executing their own laws, usages, or customs as such tribe, shall cease and determine.

There is also a proviso—

> That nothing in this act contained shall be so construed as to deprive them of their rights to any annuity now due them from the State of New York or the United States, but they shall be entitled to receive any such annuity in the same manner as though this act had not been passed.

This act was fully complied with on the part of the Stockbridge tribe, and the lands were allotted to each individual member of the said tribe, (see report of allotment of August 24, 1843), but on the part of the Government it was not complied with; patents remained to be issued to the several persons to whom lands had been allotted in conformity to law. (H. R. Rep. No. 447, pp. 3, 15, Twenty-ninth Congress, first session.)

And the "memorialist" is in error again when he says: "The citizen party took their allotments and exercised the rights, &c., and bore the burdens of citizens of the United States and of the Territory of Wisconsin."

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, in relation thereto, says:

By the act of March 3, 1843, the tribal character of these Indians was taken away, and they were to become citizens of the United States on the filing of the report of the commissioners chosen to carry out its provision, and of a map showing the division and assignments required by it of the lands in severalty. These papers were duly executed and filed, and all the prerequisites to citizenship fulfilled, and the Stockbridges, therefore, to all intents and purposes, became citizens, with all the rights, privileges, and immunities of citizenship. (Ex. Doc. No. 1, p. 778, Thirtieth Congress, first session.)

They had accepted of the act of 1843, and confirmed the proceedings of the commissions chosen to carry it into effect. (Same document, pp. 775, 781.)

They had accepted of the act by voting at the elections and holding offices and buying and selling lands and attending as petit and grand jurors in the district courts, &c. (Ex. Doc. No. 1, pp. 742, 789, 790, 797, 798, 804 to 810, inclusive.)

Report commissioner, 1854 (pp. 38–9; H. R. Mis. Doc. No. 14, p. 2, Forty-sixth Congress, third session).

All these citations from the official reports disprove the "citizens' party" alone took their allotments and exercised the rights of citizenship.

A majority of the tribe refused to be governed by its provisions. Congress, satisfied of the impracticability of the law, that it was necessarily repealed, on August 6th, 1846. (Vol. 9, p. 55, Stats.)

And restored the whole tribe to their ancient form of government, with all powers, rights, and privileges held and exercised by them under their customs and usages as fully and completely as though the above-recited act (of 1843) had not been passed.

The repealing act required that the subagent of Indians affairs at Green Bay, under the direction of the governor of Wisconsin, who shall be commissioner for that purpose, shall be required to open a book for the enrollment of the names of such persons of the Stockbridge tribe of Indians as shall desire to become and remain citizens of the United States. Three months shall be allowed after the opening of the books for the enrollment, when all those desiring citizenship should come forward and enroll their names with that view, and the lands should then be divided into two districts, "Indian district" and "citizen district." The land in the "Indian district" was to be held in common and the lands in the "citizen district" are to be divided to each who becomes a citizen, and three copies of the division thus made; one shall be filed in the clerk's office of the district in which the land may be situated; one copy shall be filed in the land office at Green Bay, and the other shall be returned to the Secretary of War. And upon the receipt of said copy by the Secretary of War patents may be issued to the individual reservees who become citizens, upon the receipt of which a title in fee simple to the lot of land shall rest in the patentee, and all transfers and assignments of the land made previous to the issuance of the patent shall be null and void.

There is also a proviso in this act—

That those Indians who become citizens shall forfeit all rights to receive any portion of the annuity which may be, or may become, due the nation of the Stockbridges by virtue of any treaty heretofore entered into by this Government with said Stockbridges.

And it further provides—

That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to impair any claim which said nation may have upon the Delaware Nation to a share of the lands assigned to them west of the Missouri River.

There is no evidence of record, either in the General Land Office, or office of Indian Affairs, of this act ever being carried out, so that no member of the tribe ever became a citizen under it; therefore forfeited no rights under said act.

Albert G. Ellis, who was subagent at that time, in his report (F) of December 23, 1846, says:

That he assembled the tribe on the 6th of September at their residence and explained to them the act of August 6, 1846, after which a "book of enrollment" was opened for the entry of "the names of all such persons of the tribe as should desire to become and remain citizens of the United States," and such invited to come forward and enter their names. They refused. On the 16th day of December he again assembled the tribe, and invited such of them, if any there were, as "wished to become and remain citizens of the United States" to come forward and make their application for citizenship, and the books were closed. There appeared to me but one class of persons to be recognized among them, so far as the act of the 6th of August, 1846, is concerned, to wit, Indians. At least the proceedings to enroll applicants for citizenship had made no division of the tribe. (Ex. Doc. No. 1, pp. 770–1, Thirtieth Congress, first session.

Again he says:

Soon after the 16th of December last, when I closed the "books of enrollment," the sachem of the tribe, Mr. Austin Quinney, called on me to declare the tract occupied by them "Indian country," and to notify the white inhabitants to leave the boundaries of the same. This request was made by him on the grounds that no person of the tribe having applied for citizenship while the books of enrollment were kept open, the whole tribe was to be regarded as Indians, and, of course, the reservation as Indian country. (Ex. Doc. No. 1, p. 773.)

The Superintendent of Indian Affairs says:

Though none of them had enrolled their names as citizens in the manner prescribed by the same law. (P. 39, report of Commissioner, 1854.)

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs relative thereto, says:

Those intending to remain citizens having refused to enroll their names—we do not know how many there are—and there is, therefore, no rule by which to make the division and assignment of the lands required by the act of 1846. (Ex. Doc. No. 1, p. 779.)

The Commissioner of the General Land Office, Hon. John Wilson, in his last report to the honorable Secretary of the Interior, R. McClelland, relative thereo says:

Up to this time, however, a period of nine years, not a single member of the nation has availed himself of this privilege of the act of 1846, and enroll his name as a citizen. (Report of April 18, 1855, on file in General Land Office.)

It was found impracticable to carry into full effect the provisions of the act of August 6, 1846, without infringing upon private rights, acquired in good faith under the act of 1843. Therefore, in order to relieve both parties from their embarrassment and to secure to each their just rights, all of which is more fully stated in the preamble to the treaty, it was claimed the treaty of November 24, 1848, was made. (Stats., vol. 9, p. 955.)

The fourth article of that treaty requires patents to issue to those who have become citizens of the United States, a list of whom is given. But none of them had in fact become citizens, and consequently no patents were to issue. (Same report.)

Article 6 provided for the payment of $14,504.85, for improvements of the tribe.

The seventh article authorized them to remain upon these lands one year, and to remove to the country set apart for them.

The ninth article stipulated that $16,500 should be invested for the rising generation; and by a supplemental article directed that they should be consulted as to the location of their next home, and the President of the United States should procure for them not less than seventy-two sections of land west of the Mississippi River, and $25,000 was granted as an indemnity for certain land on White River, in the State of Indiana, and for other lands in Wisconsin, which the Stockbridges and Munsees had been deprived of by treaties entered into with the Miamis and Delawares, and with the Menomonees and Winnebagoes, without their consent.

This treaty was made with the "Indian party," the band called the "citizens' party" not being permitted to sign, and the Munsees not being recognized at all. No one Munsee was consulted, nor did any agent or person accept or sign for them. This is admitted in "The Memorial to the Senate of the United States," made by the sachem and counselors of the tribe, of March 6, 1856. (Pp. 3, 4, 5, on file in the Senate.)

And it is not as the "memorialist" represents, that the "United States most manifestly endeavored to comply with the wishes of both parties, 'citizens' and 'Indian,' and was satisfactory to and accepted by both parties."

How could the "Indian party" legally sell out the Munsees and the "citizens' party," when they were not parties to the treaty of November 24, 1848, were ignorant of what took place, and were not bound by it? Nor could their title to those lands be impaired by such payments, not being parties to the contract. As a matter of law and fact, could the Munsees and "citizens' party" who were not parties to the contract or treaty, be bound or affected by the voluntary act of the Government with other parties?

What proof is there to show that the Munsees or "citizens' party" were ever parties to such an agreement? There is none. It is but a base fraud upon the majority of the tribe, and is a stigma upon the name of the commissioners who carried it out.

The treaty of 1848 was carried out as to the payments due at that time, but the removal of the Indians was delayed by the Government not succeeding, until in 1852, in purchasing lands of the Sioux.

This land was subsequently located in Minnesota. "When the lands in Minnesota were put at their disposal, these Stockbridges set up a claim against the Government for not removing them sooner, refused to remove, and applied for the township of Stockbridge to be ceded to them, which proposition was rejected, but a location offered to them in Wisconsin, near the Menomonee and Oneida Reservation, if they should prefer it to the location in Minnesota.

In the mean time the Stockbridges, who were parties to the treaty of 1848, have squandered the moneys paid to them under that treaty, and by the State of New York, the others have sold almost all their lots of land, and both are now poor and destitute, and it is not as the memorialist says: "those who had become citizens of the United States and taken their share in severalty had squandered it and were paupers," but the whole tribe were destitute. Hon. John Wilson, Commissioner of the General Land Office, in his report of July 14, 1855, says:

> The Indians, in most cases, have really no homes, are broken-spirited, and have fallen into habits of idleness, having no lands to cultivate and really nothing to do.

The township is governed by supervisors, justices of the peace, and other township officers, while the Indian organization (the nation) have their sachem and councilors, and the Indians contend, whenever it is their interest, that the courts and other authorities of the State have no jurisdiction over them. Tax titles have accrued on many lots, even on those held by the Government for taxes levied under the authority of the Territory, and the confused state of affairs existing is probably without a parallel anywhere. (Commissioner's Report, 1854, p. 39, 40.)

Such was the state of affairs in the tribe and the cause of our wretched condition. The Munsees and the "citizen party" had formed a confederacy in order to protect their rights, which were being absorbed by the "Indian party," and were annually sending delegates to the Indian Office, and to Congress, to obtain redress, and the "Indian party" resisting; while the whites who had purchased, and had become interspersed with us, by every annoyance were endeavoring to clean us out.

Application upon application was made by the Indians, when the matter was brought to the notice of the Government and the Department of the Interior, which resulted in the examination of the subject by Congress, and the passage of the general Indian appropriation bill of March 3, 1855 (Stat., vol. 10, p. 699), where there is appropriated—

> For the purpose of enabling the President to treat with and arrange the difficulties existing among the Stockbridge and Munsee Indians of Lake Winnebago, in the State of Wisconsin, arising out of the acts of Congress of the 3d March, 1843, and August 6, 1846, and under the treaty of 24th of November, 1848, in such manner as may be just to the Indians, and with their assent, and not inconsistent with the legal rights of the white persons who may reside on the Stockbridge reserve, and of the claim of the United States under the treaty of 1848, the sum of $1,500.

Hon. John Wilson, Commissioner of the General Land Office, by instruction of the Secretary of the Interior, was sent to Stockbridge to confer with Francis Huebschman, superintendent of Indian affairs at Stockbridge, in order, if possible, to settle the "difficulties" of the tribe. Thereupon a treaty was made, June 1, 1855, which was not approved by the Department, because it did not provide for the settlement of the white claimants, who it was alleged had purchased lands in good faith from the Indians. And by the honorable Secretary's direction it was referred back to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, who thereupon instructed the superintendent of Indian affairs that "arrangements ought therefore be made at once to provide them with a home, and it should be a home alike for the Stockbridges, whether known as "citizen" or Indians, and the Munsee parties to the treaty of September 3, 1839, wherever they may be." (See letter of the Commissioner of January 7, 1856, relative to Stockbridges, to the superintendent Indian affairs on file in Indian Department.)

And the "memorialist" is in error again when he alleges "it was determined to work up a new treaty as means for saddling back upon the tribe the pauper citizens."

And his abuse of the superintendent only shows his weakness in a bad cause. Under the instructions of January 7, a treaty was made, February 5, 1856 (11 Stats., p. 663), with the Stockbridges and Munsees:

> For the purpose of relieving these Indians from their complicated difficulties by which they are surrounded, and to establish comfortably together all such of the Stockbridges and Munsees, wherever they may be located, in Wisconsin, in the State of New York, or west of the Mississippi.

By the treaty the tribe ceded and relinquished to the United States all their remaining title to the lands at Stockbridge, the seventy-second section of land in Minnesota, the $20,000, the $16,500 invested, and all claims, &c.

For such cession the United States agreed to give the tribe a tract of land in Wisconsin, near the Menomonee Reservation, of sufficient extent to provide for each head of family, and others lots of land of 80 and 40 acres, and the sum of $41,100 and $20,550 to enable them to remove, and by amendment $18,000.

And by the treaty of February 11, 1856, with the Menomonees the United States purchased two townships of land for the Stockbridge and Munsee Indians. (11 Stat., p. 679.)

By the third article of the treaty of February 5, 1856, the lands were to be allotted among the individuals and families of the tribe "under the direction of the superintendent of Indian affairs," which was done immediately after their removal to Showano, and is on file in the agent's office at Keshena, Green Bay Agency. Again the "memorialist" is in gross error when he alleges, "such was not the case."

The United States was to hold the same in trust for such person, and a certificate should be issued guaranteeing to the holder their ultimate title to the land "should any of the heads of families die before the issuing of the certificate of patents provided for the same shall issue to their heirs."

By the fifth article it designates—

The persons to be included in the apportionment of land and money to be divided and expended under the provisions of this agreement shall be such only as are actual members of the said Stockbridge and Munsee tribes (a roll or census of whom shall be taken and appended to this agreement), their heirs and legal representatives, &c.

And is not, as the "memorialist" alleges—

It contemplated bringing back as members of the tribe all who had taken their share of the common country owned at the time of the passage of the act of 1843, and abandoned the tribe.

The treaty also provided—

That none of the said Stockbridges and Munsees shall be entitled to any of these lands or the money stipulated to be expended by these articles, unless they remove to their new location within two years from the ratification hereof.

The "memorialist," by his own admission, therefore, forfeited his right when he declares "the anti-1856 treaty party did not go to the new reservation gotten from the Menomonees till the fall of 1859," and it is equally certain all the tribe must have accepted of the treaty, as they all removed to the reservation and received its benefits, and indeed it is absurd to say "it was not satisfactory to the tribe, and the members of the tribe did not accept it as a settlement of former difficulties." (See memorial to the Senate by the sachem and councilors of the tribe relative to the treaty of February 5, 1856, of March 6, 1856, pp. 1–5, also letter of the sachem and councilors of the tribe relative to the same, of July 7, 1856, to the Commissioner, on file in Indian Department.)

Article 17 provides—

So much of the treaties of September 3, 1839, and of November 24, 1848, as is in contravention or in conflict with the stipulations of this agreement, is hereby abrogated and annulled.

Article 18 provides—

This instrument shall be binding upon the contracting parties whenever the same shall be ratified by the President and the Senate of the United States.

This treaty was approved by the Department, accepted by the tribe, as a settlement of former "difficulties," and was ratified by the Senate with certain amendments, April 18, 1856, and approved by the President September 8, 1856, and was not, as the memorialist alleges—

> Bribery and forgery were resorted to by Huetschman [and] the treaty so obtained was rushed to Washington City and ratified by the Senate * * * before those who were opposed to the treaty were able to prepare and present their statement of facts and objections to the treaty.

This assertion is a base fabrication of facts and would refer you to the letter of the superintendent to the honorable Commissioner of Indian Affairs of February 23, 1856. (Rev. Ind. Treaties, p. 963.)

To show that the treaty was publicly made, the senate and assembly of Wisconsin, by a joint resolution "that his excellency the President and the honorable Senate of the United States be respectfully requested speedily to ratify and carry into effect the said arrangement, approved March 31, 1856. (See p. 273, Res. No. 4, Laws of Wis., 1856.)

The sachem and councilors sent a "memorial to the Senate" in regard to the treaty of February 5, 1856, praying it may be "confirmed with amendments." (Memorial of March 6, 1856, on file in the Senate.)

To show that the Department accepted of the treaty, see Revised Indian Treaties, p. 962.

The senate and assembly of Wisconsin, by a joint resolution, assented to the locating of the Stockbridge and Munsee Indians on the lands of the Menomonees. (See Res. No. 5, p. 273, Laws of Wisconsin, 1856.)

The memorialist is in error again when he alleges:

> The one hundred and seventy-seven souls of the tribe, under the 1848 treaty, and their descendants could not and did not receive as much money under the 1856 treaty as the 1848 treaty secured to them.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, in 1852, in auditing John W. Quinney's claim in the Stockbridge Nation, directed an examination to be made in order to see how much he was entitled to.

> The result of this examination shows that the entire sum now due and invested for the Stockbridges, including all balances not yet paid over, the $30,000 per Senate amendment to the treaty of 1848, and the value of 72 sections of land, to which they are entitled under said amendment, estimated at $1.25 per acre, is $102,735. The census attached to the treaty 1848 gives the number of individuals composing the tribe as 177, making his interest in the above amount as in 177, or about $580. (Letter of Commissioner to J. W. Quinney, May 12, 1852.)

The memorialist's assertion was not based upon a clear and comprehensive knowledge of the facts, and it resulted from an imperfect acquaintance with the financial affairs of the tribe with the Government.

By the treaty of February 5, 1856, he received much more, and I do not see wherein it was not a benefit to the representatives of the one hundred and seventy seven souls; and it was accepted by all parties, which is evident.

Thus it appears that the treaty of February 5, 1856, was satisfactory to the tribe. They removed to the new reservation at Shawano, where they had lands allotted, as per treaty, and made improvements, built houses, and received their improvement and removal moneys, and cultivated the lands and resided there in peace until 1871, at which time a minority of the tribe, by distortion and gross misrepresentation, aided by outside parties, obtained the passage of a law through Congress, on the 6th of February, 1871, entitled, "An act for the relief of the Stockbridge and Munsee tribe of Indians in the State of Wisconsin. (Stats., vol. 16, 404.)

This act provided, "for the appraisement of the lands, sale, enrollment and the allotment, of lands," &c.

In accordance to this act, W. T. Richardson, then agent of the Stockbridge and Munsee tribe of Indians, was, on the 30th of August, 1871, appointed by the Commissioner to make the enrollment under the act, "but owing to the factious opposition manifested by the officers of the tribe, in unreasonable demands for enrollment of certain persons who were excluded by the terms of the act, and the refusal of such officers to sign the rolls unless prepared in accordance with their views, that it became necessary to suspend them from office and order a new election." (H. Mis. Doc. 14, Forty-sixth Congress, third session, p. 8.)

In the mean time Mr. Richardson was relieved from his task, because he went in conformity to the law.

On the 24th of March, 1874, H. R. Wells was appointed to make the enrollment. On the 1st of April, 1874, he assembled the tribe for the purpose of completing the enrollment, and stated that "his instructions were that he should go according to the law of '71," yet allowed persons to enroll whom the law prohibited from enrolling, and when his attention being called to these points, said: "The headmen and I have the power to make these rolls, the law gives us that power, and you have no right to dictate who shall go upon the rolls."

This overt act plainly showed that our rights were jeopardized. But we pass over the iniquitous conduct of the commissioner and so-called headmen, and the illegal and unjust proceedings under this law, whereby the majority were compelled to submit to the dictates of the minority.

On the 8th of April, 1874, Commissioner Wells made his report, accompanied by two "rolls" signed by the sachem and councilors (or rather usurpers) when in fact they were made the first of April and were certified by parties who were prohibited from enrolling as not being of "Stockbridge or Munsee descent."

These rolls, notwithstanding our protest, were approved the 3d of June following, and his supplemental report was approved the 29th of the same month.

Our first province seems to be to show that Mr. Wells did not go in accordance to the act of 1871, which provides, in the sixth section:

> Nor shall any person, or his or her descendants, be entered upon either of said rolls who may have heretofore separated from said tribe and received allotments of lands under the act of Congress for the relief of the Stockbridge tribe of Indians of March 3, 1843, and amendment of August 6, 1846, or under the treaty of February 5, 1856, or who shall not be of Stockbridge or Munsee descent.

Now, if this act was purely mandatory in its provision as regards the enrollment, the commissioner making the enrollment had no power but to execute the law as he found it. Has he done so? We emphatically answer no.

It will be seen that the act discriminates who are not to be enrolled.

1. Those who may have heretofore separated from said tribe and received allotments of lands under the act of March 3, 1843.
2. Under the amendment of August 6, 1846.
3. Under the treaty of February 5, 1856.
4. Who shall not be of Stockbridge or Munsee descent.

Therefore it is evident these parties under the act could not legally be enrolled, as it prohibits them from enrolling; yet they are enrolled, while a large portion of the tribe are rejected and denied their rights and privileges in the tribe, when they occupy the same status in the tribe as those who were permitted by favor to be enrolled. This is shown the allotment made August 24, 1843 (on file in the General Land fice); all received allotment of lands.

The acts above recited clearly show the fallacy of the construction aced upon the act of February 6, 1871, by the commissioner appointed carry it out. When the enrollment was made a large portion of the ibe were arbitrarily and wrongfully denied enrollment, for reasons isting before the treaty of 1856, and which apply with equal force to ose who are enrolled under the law of 1871.

Now, if the act of 1846 repealed the act 1843 as to any of the tribe, it rtainly did as to the whole, and if the repealing act of 1846 restored e tribe to their "ancient form of government" at all, it must have reored the whole tribe, irrespective of party or faction, as wholly and mpletely as though the act of 1843 had not been passed. The tribe as thereby recomposed of the same members which before constituted to the exclusion of none. To be sure, the tribe appointed commisoners, who divided the lands in conformity to the act, but this proeding was rendered of non-effect by the Government of the United ates in neglecting to issue patents, and confirm these allotments as ovided for by the act of 1843; the repealing act of 1846 would necesrily render all such proceedings utterly null and void as to the whole ibe, and "justifies in limene the inquiry whether it was not inconsistt with the tribal rights of the Stockbridges, and consequently of nonfect from the beginning."

Hon. John Wilson, Commissioner of the General Land Office, in his port of April 18, 1854, says: "The Stockbridges at the passage of e latter act (1846) were, in my judgment, as fully reinstated in all eir Indian rights to these lands as if the law of 1843 had never exted."

The same opinion is expressed by the committee who repealed the t 1843 (Rep. 447, Twenty-ninth Congress, first session, p. 3).

The supposition of the commissioner making the enrollment of 1871, at the act of 1846 was amendatory of the act 1843, confirming the lotment made by the latter act, was utterly erroneous. The act of 46 provided for all to become "citizens," but none availed themlves of its provisions for the reason that the act provides, "Those ho become 'citizens,' should forfeit all rights to annuities from the overnment or other claims due them by treaties."

The same reference is made by Albert G. Ellis, subagent, in his reort to Governor Dodge, of the 16th of July, 1847 (Ex. Doc. No. 1, p. 2). And the same is alluded to by the Rev. Cutting Marsh (same ocument, p. 776).

Hon. E. C. Kemble, United States Indian inspector, in his report of ovember 12, 1877, says:

> But whatever their status during the three years which intervened before the ssage of the law of 1846, that act, repealing the law '43 and restoring the Stockidge tribe to their ancient form of government, with all powers, rights, and privieges, &c., would seem to have taken away their rights as citizens; while the refusal part of any member of the tribe to avail themselves of its provisions made in the w (of 1846) for their becoming citizens left them as they were before the act of 1843.

The same allusion is made in regard to "citizenship" by the Commisoner of the General Land Office in his report of the 18th, 1855.

> As to citizenship, which was alleged constituted a bar against their being enlled, it would be hard to show, nor can it be shown by any treaty or act they ever ere separated from the tribe finally and conclusively. If they were "citizens" to e full intent and meaning of the term, then were the other members of the tribe citizens" when they made the treaty of 1848. (Rep. E. C. Kemble, November 12, 77.)

The circumstances under which the law of 1871 was passed, and the proceedings under it were such as to justify the belief that misrepresentations and fraud were resorted to by those who urged the passage of the law and had charge of the enrollment under it and the manner in which its provisions were executed, constitute a flagrant wrong against the tribe which ought to be redressed as speedily as practicable. (Ib. report, also letter of E. C, Kemble to the Hon. Secretary of the Interior of March 16, 1882.) (Ib. report, also letter of E. C. Kemble to the Hon. Secretary of the Interior of March 16, 1882.)

Now, as to which party stood before the Government best, it does not require much acumen to discover.

The grants of two townships of land under treaty of 1831 (7 Stats., pp. 342 and 405), could not have been for half of the tribe; besides, the old claims referred to in the amendment of the 1848 treaty, wherein it says:

Whereas the Stockbridge and Munsee Indians, by their chiefs and agents, have continued to prosecute their said claims during the last twenty years at their own expense, &c.

Taking in consideration the last twenty years would necessary fetch it back to 1828, when not a scintilla of "citizenship" or separation of the tribe was perceptible; besides it was for lands sold by the Government which the tribe owned in Indiana in 1808, already referred to. For this the Government granted seventy-two sections of land and the $25,000 to wipe out old claims. This land was exchanged for lands at Shawano and "intended for a home for all, both 'citizens' and Indians, and the Munsees parties to the treaty of September 3, 1839."

The old claims referred to were also due the "old citizens," and their share of the annuities of the tribe, in consideration for which the grants were made by the treaty of 1856. Up to the ratification of this treaty they had received lands and money, their share of the $3,000, as part settlement of the claim against the Miami Indians, a share of the unpatented allotments, about 60 acres each of lands at Lake Winnebago, valued at $2.50 to $5 per acre, their share of the annuity payments being made only up to 1843, "because the act took away the authority of sachem and councilors, and there was no one to receive the money or no authority to pay it out." (See letter of Commissioner of Indian Affairs, April 16, 1847, p. 779, Ex. Doc. No. 1.)

It cannot be alleged that they sold out their lands. It appears by the Commissioner's report of November 30, 1847, "that both parties have sold the lands which were allotted to them." (Same document, pp. 441, 442, 789, 790, and 794 to 810, inclusive.)

Neither can it be alleged as a bar to their being recognized as "Indians" that they voted at the elections and held office, and therefore were citizens, when both parties held offices and voted at all the elections. (See same document, No. 1, pp. 789,790,797,798.)

Where is your criterion to exclude one party? Where is your line of demarkation to discriminate who are "citizens" and who are not? We are unable to see, when all the tribe occupy the same status in regard to "citizenship."

We offer the following consideration in support of bill 2889:

1. That the equity of our claim has been repeatedly reported favorably and uniformily recognized, notably to the Forty-fourth, Forty-seventh, and Forty-eighth Congresses, and the executive branch of Government upon the subject. We beg to refer you to Hon. E. C. Kemble, United States Indian inspector's report of November 12, 1877, and more especially to the report of the honorable Committee on Indian Affairs of the House of Representatives, Forty-eighth Congress, first session. (Report No. 1054.)

2. That the treaty of February 5, 1856, was satisfactory to the tribe, and accepted by the Interior Department, ratified by the Senate and proclaimed by the President.

3. That they are signers of said treaty, in conformity to article 5, and their names appear upon the rolls and census of said treaty.

4. That a treaty cannot be abrogated without the consent of both parties interested.

5. That the act of 1871, drawn in view of the '56 treaty, has no binding force.

6. That it cannot be taken as the repeal of the '56 treaty, as it is in conflict with said treaty, and with section 2029, Rev. Stat., p. 366.

7. That a treaty after being executed and ratified by the proper authority becomes the supreme law of the land, and the courts cannot go back of it for the purpose of annulling it, than it can an act of Congress. (1 Cranch., 103, 6 Pet., 735; 10 How., 442; 2 Pet., 307, 309, 314; 3 Story Const. Law, p. 695.)

8. That they have not separated from the tribe, but have resided upon the reservation and lands in peaceable possession for over twenty years, and they are "Indians" and not "citizens."

9. That the treaty of 1856 was not an illegal interference by the United States with the possession of the Stockbridge tribe.

10. That the Government is bound to carry out in good faith the treaty.

With these facts of law before you your "memorialists" leave the subject to the wisdom and discretion of your honorable bodies, and in doing so we do not approach you as beggars, but only ask what justice and equity demands for us, and we earnestly hope that Congress will act promptly in affording us relief from our grievances, and pass House bill No. 2889.

All of which is most respectfully submitted.

J. C. ADAMS,
For and in behalf of the Stockbridge and Munsee tribe of Indians.

REPORT

OF THE

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES

FOR

THE YEAR 1884.

WASHINGTON:
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.
1885.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES,
Washington, D. C., January 20, 1885.

SIR: In conformity with the requirements of the act of incorporation approved March 3, 1863, I have the honor to submit herewith a report of the operations of the National Academy of Sciences during the past year.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. C. MARSH,
President of the National Academy of Sciences.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.

The National Academy of Sciences was established by act of Congress, in March, 1863, with power to frame its own constitution, select its own members, and provide in other respects for its continuance and successful operation.

The object of the Academy is to advance science, and especially to investigate, examine, experiment, and report on any subject of science or art, whenever called upon by any Department of the Government.

The Academy contains at present about one hundred members, and these have all been selected for their original researches in science. They represent within their ranks nearly every department of knowledge, and their services, in accordance with the charter of the Academy, are always at the disposal of the Government, without compensation.

SESSIONS OF THE NATIONAL ACADEMY.

During the past year, the Academy has held three sessions. The first was the regular annual meeting, held in Washington, D. C., April 15 to 18, 1884; the second was a scientific session, in Newport, R. I., October 14 to 17, 1884; and the third was a special session, in Newport, October 15, 1884.

STATED SESSION.

HELD IN WASHINGTON CITY, APRIL 15 TO 18, 1884.

The Washington session was held in the National Museum, the president, Prof. O. C. Marsh, presiding.

The following members were present during the session:

Abbe.	Gilbert.	Lesley.	Remsen.
Abbot.	Gill.	Lyman.	Rowland.
Baird.	Hall, A.	Marsh.	Schott.
Barker.	Hall, James.	Meigs.	Scudder.
Brewer.	Hayden.	Newcomb.	Silliman.
Brush.	Hilgard, J. E.	Newton.	Trowbridge, J.
Coffin.	Hill, G. W.	Packard.	Verrill.
Coues.	Hunt.	Powell.	Wright.
Ferrel.	Langley.	Pumpelly.	Young.

The following named gentlemen were invited to attend the meetings of the Academy, and to participate in the scientific proceedings: Baron Struvé, Russian minister at Washington; Mr. John A. Ryder, of the National Museum; Mr. H. M. Paul, of the National Observatory; Dr. E. M. Gallaudet, of Washington; Prof. F. W. Clark, of Washington; Mr. J. S. Diller, of Washington.

At this session, the following papers were read and discussed:

1. GILBERT, G. K.—The Sufficiency of Terrestrial Rotation to Deflect River Courses.
2. HUNT, T. STERRY.—The Origin of Crystalline Rocks.
3. VERRILL, A. E.—Zoölogical Results of the Deep-Sea Dredging Expedition of the United States Fish Commission Steamer Albatross. Discussed by Messrs. Gill and Brewer.
4. REMSEN, IRA.—The Quantitative Estimation of Carbon in Ordinary Phosphorus.
5. HILGARD, J. E.—On the Depth of the Western Part of the Atlantic Ocean and Gulf of Mexico, with an Exhibition of a Relief Model. Discussed by Messrs. Lesley, Silliman, Powell, and Hunt.
6. HILGARD, J. E.—On the Relative Levels of the Western Part of the Atlantic Ocean and Gulf of Mexico with Respect to the Gulf Stream. Discussed by Messrs. Meigs, Gilbert, and Coffin.
7. NEWCOMB, SIMON.—On the Photographs of the Transit of Venus taken at the Lick Observatory. Discussed by Messrs. Langley and Young.
8. REMSEN, IRA.—Reduction of Halogen Derivatives of Carbon Compounds.
9. LANGLEY, S. P.—The Character of the Heat Radiated from the Soil. Discussed by Messrs. Young and Newcomb.
10. COPE, E. D.—On the North American Species of Mastodon. Read by Mr. Gill.
11. GILL, THEO., and RYDER, JOHN A.—The Characteristics of Lyomerous Fishes.
12. BARKER, GEORGE F.—On the Fritts Selenium Cell. Discussed by Mr. Langley.
13. BARKER, GEORGE F.—On a Lantern Voltameter.
14. BRUSH, GEORGE J.—On the Occurrence of Mercury in Native Silver from Lake Superior. Discussed by Mr. Silliman.
15. SILLIMAN, B.—On the Existence of Tin Ore in the Older Rocks of the Blue Ridge. Discussed by Mr. J. E. Hilgard.
16. LOOMIS, ELIAS.—Reduction of Barometric Observations to Sea Level. Read by home secretary.
17. GALLAUDET, E. M. (by invitation of the Academy).—Some Recent Results of the Oral and Aural Teaching of the Deaf under the Combined System. Discussed by Messrs. Coues and Hilgard.
18. GILL, THEO.—On the Ichthyological Peculiarities of the Bassalian Realm. Discussed by Messrs. Verrill and Coues.
19. PAUL, H. M. (by invitation of the Academy).—The Krakatoa Atmospheric Waves and the Question of the Connection between Barometric Pressure and Atmospheric Electricity. Discussed by Mr. Brewer.
20. BILLINGS, JOHN S.—Memorandum on Composite Photographs in Craniology. Read by Mr. Powell.
21. WRIGHT, A. W.—Some Experiments upon the Spectra of Oxygen. Discussed by Mr. Langley.
22. COUES, ELLIOTT.—On the Application of Trinomial Nomenclature to Zoölogy. Discussed by Messrs. Gill and Brewer.
23. CLARKE, F. W. (by invitation of the Academy).—Jade Implements from Alaska.
24. ABBOT, H. L.—Recent Progress in Electrical Fuses.
25. HILGARD, J. E.—Account of Some Recent Pendulum Experiments in Different Parts of the World, made in Connection with the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.
26. DILLER, J. S. (by invitation of the Academy).—Volcanic Sand that Fell at Unalaska October 20, 1883, and Considerations Concerning its Composition.

ELECTIONS.

The following members were selected for the council for the ensuing year: Messrs. S. F. Baird, W. Gibbs, J. E. Hilgard, M. C. Meigs, S. H. Scudder, and C. A. Young.

NEW MEMBERS.

The following new members were elected: Prof. Edward S. Dana, General C. B. Comstock, U. S. A., Prof. Sidney I. Smith, Capt. C. E. Dutton, U. S. A., and Prof. W. K. Brooks.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

The treasurer presented the following report, which had been examined by the auditing committee, Messrs. Scudder, Abbe, and Pumpelly, and approved:

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE TRUSTEES OF THE WATSON FUND.

The following recommendations of the trustees of the Watson fund were adopted by the Academy, upon the advice of the council (these recommendations are based on the present cash balance of $1,292.75, and the annual income of present investments, $748):

1. That the invested fund be increased by the addition of $850.25, so that its par value may equal, as near as may be, $13,750.25, the sum received from Professor Watson's estate.

2. That dies, with suitable designs, be prepared for a medal to be awarded from time to time to the person in any country who shall make any astronomical discovery or produce any astronomical work worthy of special reward and contributing to the progress of astronomy, in compliance with the expressed wishes of Professor Watson.

3. That there be set aside annually the sum of $500, or as much thereof as may be necessary and available, to commence work on tables of the small planets discovered by Professor Watson, as also expressly desired by him in his bequest to the Academy, such work to be under the direction of Mr. Newcomb.

DONATION BY MRS. J. LAWRENCE SMITH.

The president announced that the widow of Prof. J. Lawrence Smith, late an honored member of the Academy, intended to place at the disposal of the National Academy of Sciences the sum of $8,000, as a memorial fund to promote the study of meteoric bodies.

Upon recommendation of the council, the Academy adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Academy hears with gratification the announcement that Mrs. J. Lawrence Smith intends to intrust to it a fund to promote the study of meteoric bodies, and hereby signifies its readiness to accept the trust.

The Academy also adopted the recommendation of the council "that the president be authorized to communicate with Mrs. J. Lawrence Smith, and make what arrangements are necessary."

DEATH OF MEMBERS.

The president announced the death of the following members who have died since the last meeting: General A. A. Humphreys, Chief of Engineers, U. S. A., and Prof. Arnold Guyot, of Princeton, N. J.

The following members were appointed to prepare obituary memoirs:

Of General Humphreys: General H. L. Abbot.

Of Professor Guyot: Professor J. D. Dana.

MEMORIAL MEETING.

On the evening of April 17, the Academy met in the lecture hall of the National Museum, for the reading of obituary memoirs, as follows:

Of General G. K. Warren, by General H. L. Abbot.

Of Prof. Stephen Alexander, by Prof. C. A. Young.

Of Prof. J. Lawrence Smith, by Prof. B. Silliman.

Of Dr. John L. Le Conte, by Mr. S. H. Scudder.

Of Prof. Lewis H. Morgan, by Mr. J. W. Powell. (Read by title.)

RESOLUTIONS.

On recommendation of the council, it was resolved that the home secretary have engrossed, and properly signed, the resolution of thanks to Mrs. Draper drawn up at the last stated session, as follows:

Resolved, That the grateful acknowledgments of the National Academy of Sciences are due to Mrs. Draper for the confidence which she has shown in selecting the Academy as the trustee of a fund designed to reward scientific labor, and by so doing to commemorate the services of one who was loved for his virtues, and honored for his eminent success in the branch of science to which he devoted his noble and useful life.

The following resolutions were also adopted:

Resolved, That the National Academy of Sciences authorize the sale of 160 acres of land designated as SE. ¼ of lot 11, township block 34, range 23, in the State of Missouri, held as part of the estate derived from A. D. Bache, for a sum not less than $800; and that the president of the Academy be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to execute such deed of conveyance to the purchaser, and such other papers as may be required, when he shall regard such sale desirable.

Resolved, That a scientific session be held at Newport, R. I., the second Tuesday (14) in October.

Resolved, That a special stated session be called for Wednesday, October 15, to consider the president's report to Congress, and receive reports of committees on subjects referred to the Academy by the Government.

Resolved, That the proceedings of the Academy that have not already been published, together with unpublished biographical notices, be included in the president's report to Congress.

Resolved, That the treasurer be authorized to reimburse the members of the committee on glucose for expenses incurred in that investigation, and obtain repayment from the Government.

Resolved, That the treasurer be authorized to defray the expenses of the present session on certification by the president.

Resolved, That the assessment for the ensuing year be $5.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The Academy adopted the pending amendment to Article IV, section 4, viz: Omit the words "and foreign associates."

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

It was reported that the reservation of public lands on and near Mount Whitney, California, for scientific purposes, had been established, and the committee was continued, with the view to securing and utilizing the reservation for the said scientific purposes.

Mr. Pumpelly was appointed to fill the vacancy in the committee on ways and means to provide a fund for the Academy, caused by the death of Mr. J. Lawrence Smith.

In the committee to co-operate with the National Board of Health, Mr. Billings was appointed to take the place of Dr. Engelmann, deceased, and Mr. Brewer to take the place of Mr. J. L. Smith, deceased.

Mr. Powell was appointed a member of the committee on publication.

The committee to represent the Academy before Congress, and the committee on the relation of the Academy to the Government, were, on motion of Mr. Hilgard, united under the latter title, so far as names were not duplicated.

The committee on the Henry Draper medal reported progress.

Mr. Hilgard, on the part of the board of direction of the Bache fund, made a statement of the present condition of the fund, explaining the policy which had formerly guided the board, and the rules adopted by the present board, with the view to having the fund more directly applied to distinct objects, the results of which might be published as "Memoirs of the Bache Fund."

The committee on weights, measures, and coinage, the committee on the triangulation to connect the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, and the committee on publication were continued.

The committee on questions of meteorological science and its application, the committee on the investigation of glucose for the Department of Internal Revenue, and the committee on the total eclipse of May 6, 1883, were discharged.

Dr. Joseph Leidy was, at his request, restored to the roll of members.

INVITATIONS.

During the session, the members of the Academy were invited by Professor Baird, the Fish Commissioner, to call at the central hatching station of the Fish Commission, in the Armory building, to witness the operation of hatching shad.

Members were also invited by the Standard Underground Cable Company, through its vice-president, Mr. R. S. Waring, to examine the underground electric cables laid for the use of the Departments and extending to the National Museum.

The Academy adjourned April 18, 1884.

23. MORSE, EDWARD S.—On the Methods of Eastern Archery.

DEATH OF MEMBERS.

The president announced the death of the following members: Dr. J. J. Woodward, U. S. A., and Dr. R. E. Rogers.

The following members were appointed to prepare obituary memoirs:

Of Dr. Woodward; Dr. J. S. Billings.

Of Dr. Rogers: Mr. F. Rogers.

Since the October meeting, Prof. Benjamin Silliman has died at New Haven, Conn., January 14, 1885.

DEATH OF FOREIGN ASSOCIATES.

During the past year, two foreign associates, J. B. Dumas and Adolphe Würtz, both of Paris, have died.

The scientific session closed October 17, 1884.

SPECIAL SESSION.

HELD AT NEWPORT, R. I., OCTOBER 15, 1884.

A special session of the Academy having been called by the council, in accordance with Article III, section 1, of the constitution, the Academy convened in the court-house at Newport, October 15, 1884, the president, Prof. O. C. Marsh, presiding.

The president was authorized to include in his annual report to Congress, in addition to the detail of the regular proceedings of the sessions, the report of the committee on the organization of the National Surveys and Signal Service, the report of the committee on philosophical and scientific apparatus, reports upon any other business submitted to him during the current year, by the Government of the United States, and the report of the committee on publications of the Academy.

Respectfully submitted.

O. C. MARSH,
President of the National Academy of Scien

APPENDIX B.

CONSTITUTION AND RULES OF THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.

As amended and adopted April 17, 1872, and further amended April 20, 1875, April 21, 1881, April 19, 1882, and April 18, 1883.

PREAMBLE.

Empowered by the act of incorporation enacted by Congress and approved by the President of the United States on the 3d day of March, A. D. 1863, and in conformity with the amendment to said act, approved July 14, 1870, the National Academy of Sciences adopt the following amended constitution and rules:

ARTICLE I.—OF MEMBERS.

SECTION 1. The Academy shall consist of members, honorary members, and foreign associates. Members must be citizens of the United States.

SEC. 2. Members who, from age or inability to attend the sessions of the Academy, wish to resign the duties of active membership, may, at their own request, be transferred to the roll of honorary members by a vote of the Academy.

SEC. 3. The Academy may elect fifty foreign associates.

SEC. 4. Honorary members and foreign associates shall have the privilege of attending the meetings, and of reading and communicating papers to the Academy, but shall take no part in its business, shall not be subject to its assessments, and shall be entitled to a copy of the publications of the Academy.

ARTICLE II.—OF THE OFFICERS.

SEC. 1. The officers of the Academy shall be a president, a vice-president, a foreign secretary, a home secretary, and a treasurer, all of whom shall be elected for a term of six years, by a majority of votes present at the first stated session after the expiration of the current terms, provided that existing officers retain their places until their successors are elected. In case of a vacancy, the election for six years shall be held in the same manner, at the session when such vacancy occurs or at the next stated session thereafter, as the Academy may direct. A vacancy in the office of treasurer or home secretary may, however, be filled by appointment of the president of the Academy until the next stated session of the Academy.

SEC. 2. The officers of the Academy, together with six members to be elected by the Academy at the first stated session in each year, shall constitute a council for the transaction of such business as may be assigned to them by the constitution of the Academy.

SEC. 3. The president of the Academy, or, in case of his absence or inability to act, the vice-president, shall preside at the meetings of the Academy and of the council; shall name all committees except such as are otherwise especially provided for; shall refer investigations required by the Government of the United States to members especially conversant with the subjects, and report thereon to the Academy at its session next ensuing; and, with the council, shall direct the general business of the Academy.

It shall be competent for the president, in special cases, to call in the aid, upon committees, of experts or men of special attainments, not members of the Academy.

SEC. 4. The foreign and home secretaries shall conduct the correspondence proper to their respective departments, advising with the president and council in cases of doubt, and reporting their action to the Academy at one of the stated sessions in each year.

It shall be the duty of the home secretary to give notice to the members, of the place and time of all meetings, of all nominations for membership, and of all proposed amendments to the constitution.

The minutes of each session shall be duly engrossed before the next stated session, under the direction of the home secretary.

SEC. 5. The treasurer shall attend to all receipts and disbursements of the Academy, giving such bond and furnishing such vouchers as the council may require. He shall collect all dues from members, and keep a set of books showing a full account of receipts and disbursements. He shall present a general report at the April session. He shall be the custodian of the corporate seal of the Academy.

ARTICLE III.—OF THE MEETINGS.

SEC. 1. The Academy shall hold one stated session in each year, in the city of Washington, on the third Tuesday in April, and another may be held at such place and time as the council shall determine.

Special sessions of the Academy may be called by order of eight members of the council, at such place and time as may be designated in the call.

Scientific sessions of the Academy may be held at times and places to be designated by a majority of the council.

SEC. 2. The names of the members present at each daily meeting shall be recorded in the minutes; and the members present at any meeting shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

SEC. 3. Scientific meetings of the Academy, unless otherwise ordered by a majority of the members present, shall be open to the public; those for the transaction of business, closed.

SEC. 4. The stated meetings of the council shall be held during the stated or special sessions of the Academy. Special meetings may be convened at the call of the president and two members of the council, or of four members of the council.

SEC. 5. No member who has not paid his dues shall take part in the business of the Academy.

ARTICLE IV—OF ELECTIONS AND RESIGNATIONS.

SEC. 1. All elections shall be by ballot, and each election shall be held separately, unless otherwise ordered by this constitution.

SEC. 2. The time for holding an election for officers shall be fixed by the Academy at least one day before the election is held.

SEC. 3. The six additional members of the council shall be elected on any day after the first of the first stated session in each year, by each voter inscribing six names on his ballot, and those six who have received more votes than any others shall be declared elected. If two or more names have received the lowest number of votes that would elect, additional balloting shall be had for as many members as remain each time to be elected until the number is full.

The term of the members so elected shall commence at the close of the session at which they are elected, and continue until the close of the first stated session in the next year.

SEC. 4. Nominations of members may be made in writing, signed by any five members of the Academy, at any stated session, to be voted on at the next stated session held in Washington; and each nomination shall, at the time of election, be accompanied by a written list of the original works of the nominee.

SEC. 5. Elections for membership shall be held in the following manner: Each member may inscribe on a ballot not more than five names of nominees selected from the list. Absent members may send such ballots to the home secretary. From the seven names receiving the highest number of votes in this preference ballot, the members present may proceed to elect new members in the following manner: At each ballot each member present may vote for not exceeding three persons, and the person receiving the highest number of votes shall be declared elected: Provided, That he received two thirds of the votes cast, and that his name appear on not less than twenty ballots: And provided further, That the number of members of the Academy be not already one hundred or over, in which case, to be declared to be elected, he must receive four-fifths of the votes cast, and his name must appear on at least twenty-five ballots.

Should several candidates have the same minimum number of votes on the preference list, the requisite number for completing the list shall be selected from them by a two-thirds vote of the members present.

Election of members shall be held only at the regular stated session of each year held in Washington, and not more than five members shall be elected at that session.

Before, and during elections, a discussion of the merits of nominees will be in order.

The election of members may be suspended at any time by a majority vote of the members present.

SEC. 6. Every member elect shall accept his membership, personally or in writing, before the close of the next stated session after the date of his election. Otherwise, on proof that the secretary has formally notified him of his election, his name shall not be entered on the roll of members.

SEC. 7. Foreign associates may be nominated by a committee of five members to be appointed for that purpose by the president, and elected at any stated session by a two-thirds vote of the members present. The election shall be had by each member indicating on a ballot those names for which he votes, and those nominees whose names appear on two-thirds of the ballots shall be declared elected.

SEC. 8. A diploma, with the corporate seal of the Academy, and the signatures of the officers, shall be sent by the appropriate secretary to each member on his acceptance of his membership, and to foreign associates on their election.

SEC. 9. Resignations shall be addressed to the president, and acted on by the Academy.

ARTICLE V.—OF SCIENTIFIC COMMUNICATIONS, PUBLICATIONS, AND REPORTS.

SEC. 1. Communications on scientific subjects shall be read at scientific meetings of the Academy, and papers by any member may be read by the author, or by any other member, notice of the same having been previously given to the secretary.

SEC. 2. Any member of the Academy may read a paper from a person who is not a member, and shall not be considered responsible for the facts or opinions expressed by the author, but shall be held responsible for the propriety of the paper.

Persons who are not members may read papers on invitation of the president, with the advice of the council.

SEC. 3. The Academy may provide for the publication, under the direction of the council, of proceedings, memoirs, and reports.

SEC. 4. Propositions for investigations or reports by the Academy shall be submitted to the council for approval, except those requested by the Government of the United States, which shall be acted on by the president, who will in such cases report their results to the Government as soon as obtained, and to the Academy at its next following stated session.

SEC. 5. The advice of the Academy shall be, at all times, at the disposition of the Government upon any matter of science or art within its scope.

SEC. 6. An annual report to be presented to Congress shall be prepared by the president, and, before its presentation, submitted by him, first to the council, and afterwards to the Academy, at one of the stated sessions.

SEC. 7. Medals and prizes may be established, and the means of bestowing them accepted by the Academy, upon the recommendation of the council, by whom all the necessary arrangements for their establishment and award shall be made.

Bequests and trusts having for their object the advancement of science may also be accepted, and administered by the Academy.

ARTICLE VI.—OF THE PROPERTY OF THE ACADEMY.

SEC. 1. All investments shall be made by the treasurer, in the corporate name of the Academy, in stocks of the United States.

SEC. 2. No contract shall be binding upon the Academy which has not been first approved by the council.

SEC. 3. The assessments required for the support of the Academy shall be fixed by the Academy, on the recommendation of the council.

ARTICLE VII.—OF ADDITIONS AND AMENDMENTS.

Additions and amendments to the constitution shall be made only at a stated session of the Academy. Notice of a proposition for such a change must be given at a stated session, and shall be referred to the council, which may amend the proposition, and shall report thereon to the Academy at the same session. Its report shall be considered by the Academy in committee of the whole for amendment.

The proposition as amended, if adopted in committee of the whole, shall be voted on at the next stated session, and if it receive two-thirds o the votes cast it shall be declared adopted.

Absent members may send their votes on pending changes in the constitution to the home secretary, in writing, and such votes shall be counted as if the member were present.

RULES.

I. In the absence of any officer, a member shall be chosen to perform his duties temporarily, by a plurality of viva voce votes, upon open nominations.

II. The accounts of the treasurer shall be referred to an auditing committee of three members, to be appointed by the president at the meeting at which the accounts are presented, which committee shall report before the close of that session, and shall then be discharged.

The bonds, securities, and other property owned or held in trust by the Academy shall be inspected and verified by a committee to be annually appointed by the president. The report of this committee shall be presented to the Academy at its first stated session in each year, and referred with the accounts to the auditing committee.

III. A committee of arrangements consisting of five members shall be appointed by the president for each stated session of the Academy. This committee shall meet not less than two weeks previous to each session. It shall be in session during the meetings to make arrangements for the reception of the members; to arrange the business of each day; to receive the titles of papers, reports, &c.; and toarrange the order of reading, and, in general, to attend to all business and scientific arrangements.

IV. At the meetings the order of business shall be as follows:

1. Chair taken by the president, or, in his absence, by the vice-president.
2. Roll of members called by home secretary.
3. Minutes of the preceding meeting read and approved.
4. Stated business.
5. Reports of president, secretaries, treasurer, and committees.
6. Business from council.
7. Other business.
8. On the last day of the session, the rough minutes of that day's proceedings are to be read for correction.

V. The rules of order of the Academy shall be those of the Senate of the United States, unless suspended by unanimous consent.

VI. Unless otherwise ordered by the Academy, the scientific meetings shall be convened at noon.

VII. The death of members shall be announced by the president on the last day of any session, when a member shall be selected by the president to furnish a biographical notice of the deceased at the next stated session. If such notice be not then furnished, another member may be selected by the president in place of the first, and so on until the duty is performed.

VIII. All discussions as to the claims and qualifications of nominees at meetings of the Academy will be held strictly confidential, and remarks and criticisms then made may be communicated to no person who was not a member of the Academy at the time of the discussion.

IX. The secretaries will receive memoirs at any time, and report the date of their reception at the next session. But no memoir shall be published unless it has been read before the Academy.

X. Memoirs shall date in the records of the Academy from the date of their presentation to the Academy, and the order of their presentation shall be that in which they were registered, unless changed by consent of the author.

XI. Papers from persons not members, read before the Academy, and intended for publication, shall be referred, at the meeting at which they are read, to a committee of members competent to judge whether the paper is worthy of publication. Such committee shall report to the Academy as early as practicable, and not later than the next stated session.

XII. An annual of the Academy shall be prepared and published by the secretaries.

XIII. The printing of the Academy shall be under the charge of a committee of publication, to consist of the home secretary and four other members to be named by the president, with the advice and consent of the council.

XIV. The annual report of the Academy may be accompanied by a memorial to Congress in regard to such investigations and other subjects as may be deemed advisable, recommending appropriations therefor when necessary.

XV. The proper secretary shall acknowledge all donations made to the Academy, and shall report them at the next stated session.

XVI. The books, apparatus, archives, and other collections of the Academy shall be deposited in some safe place in the city of Washington. A list of the articles so deposited shall be kept by the home secretary, who is authorized to employ a clerk to take charge of them.

XVII. A stamp corresponding to the corporate seal of the Academy shall be kept by the secretaries, who shall be responsible for the due marking of all books, and other objects to which it is applicable.

Labels or other proper marks of similar device shall be placed upon objects not admitting of the stamp.

XVIII. On the first day of each stated session, immediately after calling the roll of members, a recording secretary shall be elected by a plurality of members present to assist the home secretary in keeping the records of the session.

XIX. It shall be the duty of the committee of arrangements to fix the length of time to be devoted to reading of all papers submitted, and to limit the time to be occupied in their discussion.

XX. Ballots for election of members may be sent by sealing them up in a blank envelope, and inclosing this in another, across the back of which is written the name of the sender, and which is addressed to the home secretary. Such envelopes will be opened only by the tellers.

XXI. Any rule of the Academy may be amended, suspended, or repealed on the written motion of any two members, signed by them, and presented at a stated session of the Academy, provided the same shall be approved by a majority of the members present.

XXII. Nominations for membership should state the full name, residence, the official position, and the special scientific studies of the candidate. A form of nomination shall be prepared by the home secretary.

By a resolution adopted January 12, 1864, the president is, ex officio, a member of all Government committees of the Academy.

[CORRESPONDENCE.]

THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES,
Washington, D. C., October 16, 1884.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith the report of the committee of the National Academy of Sciences on the organization of the National Surveys and Signal Service, made in accordance with the request of the Congressional commission contained in your communication dated July 9, 1884. I send with the report—

1. A letter from the Chief Officer of the Signal Service,
2. A letter from the Director of the Geological Survey.
3. A letter from the Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey.
4. A letter from the Chief Hydrographic Officer of the Navy.

Also various other documents referred to in the report.

Very respectfully yours,

O. C. MARSH,
President of the National Academy of Sciences.

Hon. THEODORE LYMAN.

REPORT.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES:

SIR: The committee appointed by you to report upon certain organizations and works of the Government has the honor to submit the following report.

The authority under which the committee acted is shown in the following documents:

YALE COLLEGE,
New Haven, Conn., August 2, 1884.

DEAR SIR: I inclose herewith a communication from the Joint Commission appointed by Congress to consider the present organizations of the Signal Service, Geological Survey, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the Hydrographic Office of the Navy Department, with a view to secure greater efficiency and economy of administration and shoals, in order to correct the existing Admiralty charts. All this is done under direction of the Admiralty.

While the organization of the land and of the hydrographic surveys in Europe is very perfect, your committee does not find that it offers anything to improve that of the United States, except perhaps in showing the economy in time and money of greater use of photography and of zincography in the reduction and production of maps and charts. In Great Britain now, the twenty-five inch to the mile map is published even earlier than those on smaller scales, all of which are reductions from the original manuscript maps surveyed and plotted on the twenty-five-inch or six-inch scale.

Early and cheap publication of results of operations in the field, if they retain the accuracy of the original maps, are of great industrial and economic importance. The English maps of the ordnance survey are published and placed on sale as soon as printed, and at very moderate prices. For details, your committee refers to the manuscript notes on the ordnance survey herewith.

Your committee would call attention in this connection to the report made by the National Academy of Sciences to Congress in December, 1878, in which, the advantages of a consolidation of the then existing surveys were pointed out. In that report, it was recommended that surveys should be two in number; the coast and interior survey, to be concerned with the triangulation and mapping of the country and its topography, and a geological survey, to undertake geological and economical investigations. It would be a part of the duty of the first survey to supply the maps for the use of the geological survey; and, in order to secure the co-ordination and harmonious co-operation of the two surveys, it was recommended that the coast and interior survey be transferred to the Interior Department.

Congress adopted so much of this recommendation as related to the formation of a single Geological Survey, but did not provide for the proposed transfer of the Coast Survey, nor make any other provision for the topographic work necessary for the Geological Survey. The result has been that these two Surveys do not co-operate as they should. The Chief of the Geological Survey has also found it necessary to employ large corps of men in trigonometric measurements.

Your committee does not feel entire confidence that the union of these two surveys under either one of the Executive Departments, would, without other measures, necessarily lead to that unity of work which is desirable. It therefore recommends certain further legislative measures, the occasion for which will be made clear by a review of the work done by these several organizations; but its members are entirely clear in the opinion that some one of the Executive Departments should control both. It is for Congress to determine which Department shall exercise this necessary authority and control.

The Coast Survey was originally organized for the purpose of constructing maps and charts of the coast and harbors for the benefit of commerce and navigation. Conflicting opinions respecting the proper management of the Survey led to the formation in 1843, of a board of officers with the duty of reorganizing the Survey. This board submitted a plan, which was enacted by Congress into law, upon and under which law, the Survey has hitherto been executed.

This plan provided for the co-operation of military officers, naval officers, and civilians in the various parts of the work. Under it, the work of the Coast Survey has been continued to the present time.

In recent times, a great extension of the field of operations of the Survey has been made, apparently looking to a triangulation covering the entire territory of the United States. The maps published annually with the report of the Survey enable us to know the geodetic work it has executed. It appears from the maps accompanying the report of 1882, that on June 30th of that year, a chain of triangles had been extended throughout the entire length of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, and throughout about half the Pacific coast. Besides these coast lines, extensive regions in the interior are seen to be triangulated. In the northeast, the triangulation covers the greater part of the States of New Hampshire, Vermont, and Massachusetts, about half of Connecticut, and it also includes a considerable part of the State of New York.

The reconnaissance has extended westward from the New Jersey coast so as to include the greater part of the State of New Jersey, and a long strip in Pennsylvania. From Pennsylvania, the extended line of primary triangulation follows the Allegheny Mountains into Northern Alabama, and is now being continued across the country to Memphis.

A triangulation of the Mississippi River was extended from its mouth nearly to Memphis, where it would meet the last described chain of triangles. The chain connecting the Atlantic and Pacific coasts has been completed nearly across the State of Nevada, and the reconnaissance includes nearly half of Utah Territory. The line is also surveyed at various points in Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, and Illinois. Besides all this, isolated regions in Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee have been reconnoitered by the Coast and Geodetic Survey in a way indicative of a plan designed ultimately to cover the entire territory.

As its appropriations for some years past have made provision for the collection of data for a general map of the United States, we may fairly regard the Coast and Geodetic Survey as having undertaken a trigonometric survey of the whole United States. (See the communication from the Superintendent of this Survey herewith.)

From the statement of the Director of the Geological Survey, appended hereto, we learn that under authority of the annual appropriation bills to prepare a geological map of the United States, that officer has parties engaged in the trigonometric survey of the entire country to be sufficiently accurate for cartographic purposes.

It appears, therefore, that two distinct and independent trigonometric surveys of the United States, under two different Departments of the Government, are now in process of execution.

The meteorological work of the Signal Service is divisible into two distinct branches.

The first, and by far the larger portion of the work is the collection of weather reports from stations in different parts of the Union, which are utilized in predicting the probable weather during the twenty-four hours succeeding. Connected with this work is the publication of weather maps, showing at a glance the state of the weather over the entire country at certain moments of absolute time. At the school at Fort Myer, observers and operators are trained for this service. A very important part of its work is the display of signals and warnings of approaching storms, frosts, and floods.

The other branch of the meteorological service appears in scientific discussions and investigations, having for their object to advance the science of meteorology. These researches are published under the title, "Professional Papers of the Signal Service," which papers consist of memoirs separately paged and numbered in the order of their issue.

Your committee is not informed of the separate expenses of these two divisions of the Signal Service, but has no doubt that the expense of the second branch is but a small fraction of that of the first.

The Signal Service also performs a military duty, providing the material, and instructing soldiers and officers to communicate between separate bodies of troops by a system of day and night signals; and it also operates and repairs, and, when necessary, constructs telegraph lines for military purposes. The appropriation for these military works and services for the current year is $5,000.

In the opinion of the committee, it is desirable that the meteorological work of the Weather Bureau should be under the general control of the commission proposed later in this paper.

The Hydrographic Office of the Navy Department may be considered to date from the year 1848, when the depot for charts and instruments for the Navy, authorized by an act approved in 1842, was established. Under this act, an observatory was established, and was engaged in the double work of making astronomical observations, correcting chronometers, and of supplying charts to the Navy, the establishment being officially styled the United States Naval Observatory and Hydrographic Office. In 1866, Congress authorized the establishment of a separate hydrographic office, to be attached to the Bureau of Navigation in the Navy Department, for the purpose of supplying nautical publications and information, not only to vessels of the United States, but to navigators generally.

Before that time, the functions of the office had been confined to the purchase and distribution of foreign charts. Under the new organization, a drawing and engraving division was established, which constructs charts of foreign coasts and seas for distribution to vessels of the Navy, and for sale, at the cost of printing and paper, to navigators generally.

The officer now in charge of the Hydrographic Office appeared before your committee in person, and gave it a very clear account of the work his office is actually doing. A memoir by this officer, transmitted to the committee by the honorable the Secretary of the Navy, accompanies this report.

Besides the hydrographic work of the Coast Survey, which is conducted, and has always been conducted under existing laws, under the direction of the Superintendent of the Coast Survey, this Hydrographic Office is not only supplying corrected charts to the vessels of the Navy, but is collecting information as to ice which endangers every ship or steamer of the great lines which connect our Northern ports with Great Britain and France, and it also publishes constantly information as to changes in lights and buoys and discoveries by all nations of shoals and dangers not laid down upon the charts in common use. It publishes at short intervals, not only printed information by bulletin sent to commercial centers in this country, but pilot charts, especially of the North Atlantic, giving the latest intelligence in regard to currents and winds, and the location, when last seen, of all floating wrecks and derelicts, and of the icebergs and other floating ice which, through the whole spring, summer, and fall seasons, lie along the eastern edge of the Great Banks, directly in the track followed by hundreds of steamers and sailing vessels, carrying many thousands of travelers, passengers, and immigrants, and the millions of dollars of our exports and imports.

This work of the Hydrographic Office is evidently of great value and importance to our commercial and business interests, and must save many vessels from wreck, and many lives from destruction. Naval vessels, under direction and instruction of the Hydrographic Office, also survey foreign coasts and unsurveyed harbors and channels, aiding powerfully in the extension and introduction of our commerce to such coasts and harbors, and they contribute to the knowledge of the earth and its inhabitants by deep-sea soundings, by observations of the currents and winds and storms, and of the bottom of the ocean and of its shores.

While this work is scientific work, your committee is not prepared to recommend that it be detached in any way from the control of the Navy Department; nor can they recommend that the hydrographic work of the Coast Survey, for over forty years conducted so satisfactorily under the civil control of the Coast Survey, be separated from that organization before the original survey shall be completed. After that is done, perhaps the work of re-sounding, of re-examining may, without injury to the service, be committed to the control of the Navy Department. Yet, even then, correction and revision of the Coast Survey charts will require some co-ordination, some authoritative connection between the Coast Survey Office and the parties and vessels engaged in these re-examinations for correction of our coast charts.

From the terms of the act under which your committee is considering this subject, it may be inferred that the principal question affecting the Hydrographic Office, on which an opinion is desired, is that of its consolidation with the hydrographic work of the Coast Survey. The reasons for the consolidation of these two works under the Navy Department have been urged with force by the Secretary of the Navy in his last two annual reports. But there are also cogent reasons on the other side of this question. The Coast Survey was specially organized to secure the harmonious co-operation of civilians, officers of the Navy, and officers of the Army, each in his own department, and yet in a single well co-ordinated work. No scientific department of the Government has worked more successfully through the forty years in which this organization has been in operation. Each of the three branches, thus harmoniously co-operating, has received the benefit of the skill and professional experience of the other.

An organization of this sort should not, while its work is going on, be disrupted, except for very strong reasons affecting its efficiency. We would also advert, in illustration of the advantages which our military and naval officers have derived from their connection with the Coast Survey, to the brilliant list of military and naval men during the civil war who derived a very important part of their professional training from their experience on that work. Such a list would include an array of professional leaders which it would be difficult to collect from any other associated body of men. We suggest the names of Porter, the Rodgerses, of Meade, and of Humphreys. Many others might be added, who, after service on the Coast Survey, rose to high employments in the Army and Navy.

While, therefore, your committee are not prepared at the present time to recommend the proposed consolidation, we do not conceive that Congress should adopt measures looking to the separation in perpetuity of the two branches under consideration. The policy of the Coast Survey should, we conceive, be directed towards the completion, at the earliest possible date, of the survey of our coast line; its main operations will thereafter be confined principally to the interior, and then the policy of consolidating its hydrography with the work of the naval hydrographic office will be open for consideration.

We are therefore of opinion that the Hydrographic Office of the Navy Department is worked with all due efficiency as it is now organized, and that no change is at present necessary in its relations to the Government.

Preliminary to our recommendations as to the other three works upon which your committee is called upon to report, it desires to present some general views respecting the working of the departments of the Government.

We conceive it desirable that there should be a clear understanding as to what sorts of scientific investigation may be undertaken by Government organizations. We conceive it to be a sound principle that Congress should not undertake any work which can be equally well done by the enterprise of individual investigators. Our leading universities are constantly increasing the means of scientific research by their professors and students; and while the Government may with propriety encourage and co-operate with them there is no reason why it should compete with them. The scientific work of the Government ought not, therefore, to be such as can be undertaken by individuals. It should also be confined to the increase and systematization of knowledge tending "to promote the general welfare" of the country. Within these two restrictions, there is a large and increasing field which is only partly occupied by the organizations now under consideration. In considering the limits of their functions, your committee, as one of scientists, and not of constitutional lawyers, naturally confine themselves to considerations affecting the general welfare.

The General Government having commenced a general trigonometrical survey of the United States on a large scale under organizations much more efficient in their action than those which any single State can provide, we conceive it desirable that the work thus undertaken should be continued at least to the point at which it can be advantageously taken up by the States themselves. At what precise limit the General Government should stop, we are not prepared to decide, nor is it necessary that this limit should be defined at present. The attention of Congress should also be directed to the fact that the administration of a scientific bureau or department involves greater difficulties than that of a purely business department. The connections between the work done, and the results ultimately to be attained for the public, are not at all obvious to the people and press, and thus the great benefit of vigilant watching and constant criticism is wanting. Again, its administration requires a combination of scientific knowledge with administrative ability, which is more difficult to command than either of these qualities separately. These difficulties are intensified by the absence of any central authority to control the work of a Government scientific organization. Each head of a scientific organization is now, practically, absolutely independent, and, in his individual judgment of what his organization shall do, is controlled only by Congress itself, acting only through its annual appropriation bills. We conceive that this state of things calls for measures of reform.

A feature of such reform will be the collection of the organizations now under consideration together, with such other scientific bureaus as Congress may see fit to include in the scheme, under one central authority, to be recognized as responsible for, and controlling generally the scientific operations of the Government. Various forms of such an authority might be devised, the choice of which will some day be made by Congress. The best form would be, perhaps, the establishment of a Department of Science, the head of which should be an administrator familiar with scientific affairs, but not necessarily an investigator in any special branch.

DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE.

Your committee states only the general sentiment and wish of men of science, when it says that its members believe the time is near when the country will demand the institution of a branch of the executive Government devoted especially to the direction and control of all the purely scientific work of the Government. In this day, the pursuit of science itself is, visibly to all men of education, directly connected with the promotion of the general welfare. The art of photography, beginning in 1802, with the scientific experiments of Wedgwood, has developed till, in this country alone, the annual value of photographs produced is estimated at thirty millions of dollars. The study of electricity has resulted in the telegraph, the telephone, the electric light, the electric railway, some of which results count their revenue by millions, and have created already within a few years of their discovery properties employing the capital of hundreds of millions.

None who have lived with open eyes during the development of these results of purely scientific investigation doubt that the cultivation of science "promotes the general welfare."

Should such a Department be now impracticable, should public opinion not be now ready for it, the next best measure, in the opinion of scientific men, would be to transfer all such work or bureaus to some one Executive Department. Keeping in mind what has been said respecting the two classes of work under the Signal Service, we are of opinion that the functions of the several organizations under consideration could now be most advantageously divided among perhaps four bureaus, namely:

1. The Coast and Interior Survey, to be concerned principally with geodesy and hydrography, and to consist of the present Coast and Geodetic Survey.

2. The Geological Survey, to comprise the present Geological Survey with its organization unchanged.

3. The Meteorological Bureau, to which should be transferred so much of the present personnel and functions of the Chief Signal Office as are not necessary to the military duties of that office.

4. A physical observatory, to investigate the laws of solar and terrestrial radiation and their application to meteorology with such other investigations in exact science as the Government might assign to it. In this connection, attention is called to a resolution passed by the recent Electrical Conference in Philadelphia requesting the establishment, the Government, of a bureau of electrical standards. We are of opinion that the functions of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, now performed by the Coast Survey, could be advantageously transferred to the proposed bureau, and extended so as to include electrical measures.

The members of your committee are conscious that placing these bureaus under one Department would not necessarily result in the proper co-ordination of their work, because the head of such Department would probably find it impracticable to enter into the consideration of all details necessary to that purpose. It appears to us that the evils already pointed out require in any case the organization of a permanent commission to prescribe a general policy for each of these bureaus. The functions of this commission would be—

I. To examine, improve, and approve the plans of work proposed by the several bureaus, and to revise their estimates in accordance with such plan. The performance of this duty would require consultation with their chiefs generally and separately, respecting the character of their work, and they should be members of the commission.

II. To approve in detail the methods of expenditure of the appropriations.

III. To recommend such measures as they deem necessary to the efficiency of the bureaus under their supervision. It should, however, be understood that this commission is not charged with purely administrative responsibility.

It prescribes what shall be done, and recommends any measures necessary to secure that object, but does not concern itself with administrative details.

We submit the following as a suggestion for the formation and personnel of such a commission.

The commission shall consist of (1) the President of the National Academy of Sciences; (2) the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution; (3 and 4) two civilians of high scientific reputation, not otherwise in the Government service, to be appointed by the President of the United States, for the term of six years; (5) one officer of the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army; (6) one professor of mathematics in the Navy, skilled in astronomy, these two to be designated by the President of the United States for a term of six years, who, with (7) the Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, (8) the Director of the Geological Survey, and (9) the officer in charge of the meteorological service, shall constitute the commission of ———. The Secretary of the ——— Department shall be, ex officio, president of the commission.

The members of the commission, for their services as such, shall each be paid by the United States compensation in the sum of ——— dollars per annum. Their necessary transportation and traveling expenses shall be provided for as are those of officers of the Army and Navy when traveling on public business or duty, to be paid out of the appropriations for the services under their supervision.

The commission shall meet in Washington, D. C., for the transaction of business, not less than four times a year. But the president of the commission may convene it whenever, in his judgment, the exigencies of the service require a meeting.

The commission shall be attached to the office of the Secretary of the Department of ———, and, under his superintendence, shall exercise a general control over the plans of work of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, the United States Geological Survey, and the meteorological service, and shall have the charge and custody of all the archives, books, documents, drawing, models, returns, apparatus, instruments, and all other things appertaining to the commission.

The estimates of the heads of these bureaus or offices shall pass through the commission for revision and approval, and, after the annual appropriations have been made, no money shall be expended under them, except after revision and approval by the commission of projects submitted by these bureaus in compliance with such projects.

If at any time public money is being spent by any of these bureaus not in accordance with the views of the commission, the commission shall notify the proper auditor of the fact.

Respectfully submitted.

Letters from the Signal Office.

SIGNAL OFFICE, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, September 16, 1884.

General C. B. COMSTOCK, U. S. Army,
Secretary Committee of National Academy of Sciences:

DEAR SIR: In reply to your letter of the 10th instant, requesting me substantially to state what is necessary for "the best organization of the Signal Service, the duties which it should perform, its relations to other scientific branches of the public service, and other matters relating to the subject which may occur" to me, I have the honor to express my decided opinions, based upon long observation and careful study, that no other than a military organization can secure that prompt and unbroken series of observations and reports which alone give the highest value to forecasts of weather and other branches of our meteorological work, and such is the testimony of all foreign meteorological authorities whose opinion I have learned.

The branch of duties known as military signaling, which has now become indispensable in all armies, must of course have a military organization. Now, the one organization performs both duties, while, were the meteorological part to be performed by a civil one, the present organization, or its equivalent, would be needed for this work alone, while the military signal service would be wholly additional.

The system now in use by this Government, surpassing as it does all others, and which is the result of fourteen years' experience and study and the expenditure of millions of money, would be wholly unsuited to any plan but a military one, and to attempt to transfer or change it would be the loss of system and plan, and a long step backward, even if it could finally succeed, which, without the obligations of regular enlistment and military discipline, it is believed it cannot do.

In order that the Signal Service shall carry on all its present work efficiently, its personnel cannot be reduced either in numbers or grade, nor ought any of its work to be abandoned; and saving in money can be effected only by more economical methods of administration.

This can come only in one way; that is, by completing its present partial organization. As is well known, the Signal Corps, so far as it is an organization at all, has been built up step by step, according to a regular plan, till now it has head and feet, the former with the rank of brigadier-general and the latter of second lieutenant, the unfinished part being the intermediate grades. These have not yet been created, but the time has fully arrived for making them. These intermediate grades are now filled by temporary details from the line of the Army, and, before the officers detailed are fully familiar with their duties as signal officers, their colonels begin calling for them to go back to their regiments, which calls finally prevail.

By this means, a large proportion of the time of these officers is consumed in getting ready for duty, and when they have become fully instructed and useful, they, with their valuable and costly experience, are lost to the Signal Service. In this way, there is a great waste, not only of time, which costs money, but in money itself, because, like the work of an inexperienced mechanic, there is much waste of material.

The needs of the Signal Service, then, make it imperative that the intermediate grades of field officers, captains, and first lieutenants be now made, not only on the score of efficiency, but of economy, and this is especially necessary at this time, since Congress has adopted the plan of sending two officers of experience back to their regiments whenever two sergeants of the Signal Corps are promoted to be second lieutenants. Economies many times greater than the additional cost for salaries can be effected by a completed organization.

It will be seen from papers already furnished, that in four years the expenditures of the Signal Service have been reduced, till now there is a saving of about $327,000 annually over what it cost when I assumed the office of Chief Signal Officer. Quite a large proportion of this extra expenditure was through extravagant methods that probably would not have been adopted had the expenditures always been made by experienced officers of the Signal Corps. Scarcely a month has passed but some leak has been discovered and stopped, where money was unnecessarily spent, not corruptly, but from inexperience and lack of that close and intelligent attention to duty which springs from a wholesome esprit du corps.

The easy plan in the line of economy, which will give efficiency to the Service, is to complete the organization of the Signal Corps. The legislation necessary to do it is sketched in an accompanying paper.

A considerable economy can also be effected, while it will give safe storage to the vast accumulation of meteorological records, almost invaluable, and now greatly exposed to damage by fire, by building a suitable office for the Signal Corps. The amount for rents now, and for years past, is $7,000, while the needs for the next year will require $800 additional; and, since the different branches of the office are scattered and located in nine distinct and separate buildings, some $3,000 a year is now paid to messengers and porters, which would then be saved. This makes a cost of $10,800, while a new office, better adapted in every way to our purposes, and which would give safety to the records, could be built, with cost of site, for $300,000, or at an annual interest, at 3 per cent., of $9,000, giving an annual saving of $1,800.

These are the chief ways in which large savings can be made, while largely benefiting the service.

These are but a part of the advantages to be derived from a completed organization, the chief one being, like that of a permanent staff everywhere, a better general administration.

I have no doubt but that, had I had an organized corps, with officers of my own, whose points I fully knew, the disaster that overtook the Greely Relief Expedition of 1883 would not have occurred. The want of such a corps is felt every day, and it is hoped that Congress will no longer withhold its benefits, leaving it alone, of all services in the Army, weakened and embarrassed by the want of organization.

I have here pointed out what appears to me the best organization of the Signal Service, based upon all the experiences and observations of this and other Governments.

I do not think it should be related in any way to other scientific branches of the public service, except in amity and courteous co-operation when opportunities occur, its work being entirely unique and separate, while its duties should be just what they are now, meteorological and military signaling, endeavoring in every possible way to develop the former, and improve the latter. This is enough work for one bureau.

For a year, one of the professors of this corps, Mr. Waldo, by my direction, pursued the studies of the various branches of meteorological science in the best schools of Europe, becoming well acquainted with their progress and methods. I inclose his opinions upon the subject, and also those of Lieutenant Ray, U. S. A., who represented me at the International Polar Conference at Vienna last March, where he met the leading meteorologists of foreign countries.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. B. HAZEN,
Brig. and Bvt. Maj. Gen., Chief Signal Officer, U. S. A.

SIGNAL OFFICE, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, September 17, 1884.

Maj. Gen. M. C. MEIGS, U. S. Army,
Chairman Committee of National Academy of Sciences:

DEAR SIR: In reply to your letter of August 14, I would respectfully state that most of the information desired will be found in the inclosed copies and publications.

1. The letter to General Comstock, secretary of the committee of which you are chairman (copy inclosed), contains much that otherwise would be written here. Its reading will be necessary to make complete what I desire to communicate.

2. The pamphlet setting forth the needs of a completed organization for the Signal Corps, I call special attention to. The present plan of sending away to their regiments officers who have gained great experience is a constant loss, which no corps of men can suffer and hope to gain the highest efficiency.

It is traditional that all, or nearly all, meteorological records of value, from the prime necessity of continuity, and the necessity of firmly holding the observers, have been kept by some order of military men. This need is now shown.

3. The statutes and general legislation on which the Signal Service stands are fully given.

4. The scheme and rules for the Signal Service school at Fort Myer, Virginia. This school has received and is receiving very full and careful attention.

5. A copy of the last annual report, from which can be readily gathered principal features of the current work of the Signal Corps. In addition, since this report was written, a plan for giving the approach of "cold waves" by flags has been adopted and received with marked favor, as in some cases has the plan of giving the probable changes of weather along lines of railroads by a system of colored disks, displayed on the moving trains.

The subject of earth currents of electricity in their relations to the weather has also been taken up within the last year.

6. The annual report for 1882, with appendices, showing this work more fully.

7. A full series of the current publications of the office. (Copies of these are sent to the chairman and secretary only.)

8. A list of publications of the Signal Service since the present Chief Signal Officer has controlled it, printed and in press.

The service now has a proficient and distinguished corps of professors, who have begun the work of original investigations upon this almost new work, the domain of meteorology.

10. A list of foreign meteorological bureaus.

For a short account of them, I refer to Professor Waldo's statement. By my direction, he investigated for a year foreign meteorology, as studied and applied at the best seminaries in Europe. I also call attention to the statement of Lieutenant Ray, on page 10, No. 2, inclosed papers, who represented the Chief Signal Officer at the late conference of the International Polar Commission at Vienna, where he met the directors of the chief meteorological bureaus of the world.

In comparing the services of different nations, attention is invited to the radical difference in purpose between the Signal Service of the United States and the services in foreign countries. It will be seen by the character of nearly all the legislation relating to the United States service since the joint resolution of February 9, 1870, that the prime object has always been to "give warning of the approach and force of storms," and that the specific object for which the appropriations have annually been made has been the immediate and current benefits arising from the "observation and report of storms." The benefits of the first legislative action extended only to the sea and lake coasts; but the results accomplished were so favorable, and the public benefits so considerable, that it was soon found necessary to extend the system of warnings and predictions, so as to more directly reach the great agricultural interests, such as cotton, sugar-cane, tobacco, corn, and fruit and vegetable-growing, and stock-raising. So entirely have the money, time, and labor of the service been required to meet the public demands in this respect, viz, current observations and reports in the way of bulletins and predictions, that little has been left for climatological work or research.

The services of most European governments, from the very nature of their geographical situations, have been established more for purposes of climatology, and scientific research and discussion, than for the current publication of observations and predictions. In most European countries, the meteorological work done is of use only to scientific men, and then only after years of study and discussion. In the United States, the Signal Service bulletins and publishes thrice daily, by its admirably trained and disciplined corps of observers, its meteorological reports for the entire country, within one to two and a half hours of the time of observation, in hundreds of the principal cities and ports, and the intelligent and educated American public daily uses these reports in nearly every branch of human industry, occupation, and pursuit. The little that is published in the way of daily reports and predictions in European countries reaches the public too late to be of much practical use, owing to causes which do not exist in the United States, where all the observers are directly under one head, and act with the vigilance, celerity, and certainty, which, only the true military system can attain. I doubt if there is anything in any of these services that could be advantageously incorporated into our own.

11. A statement of the comparative cost of the Signal Service now and four years ago. During this period, the practical work of the Signal Service has been nearly doubled, and its methods and work have been improved in every way. A few copies of current publications of the former period are inclosed for comparison.

12. A statement showing more specifically the objects to which the appropriations for the Signal Service are directed.

13. A statement of the relative cost of the Weather Bureau under its present military organization and a civil one.

14. History of the Signal Service, with a list of signal stations. (This paper is not quite ready, and will be sent later.)

I would prefer to answer only as regards the Signal Corps, and I can see no advantage in connecting it with any other scientific corps.

I have already very fully stated how, in my opinion, it would be very desirable to complete the organization of the Signal Corps.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. B. HAZEN,
Brig. and Bvt. Maj. Gen'l, Chief Signal Officer, U. S. A.

Letter from the Director of the Geological Survey.

HOTEL LAFAYETTE,
Philadelphia, September 8, 1884.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter as chairman of the committee of the National Academy of Sciences, requesting from me a statement of the organization of the United States Geological Survey, and an outline of its operations. The following is a reply thereto:

I. The organization under my direction is prosecuting a topographic survey of the United States under authority of law. For this purpose, it is executing a triangulation of the United States sufficiently refined for cartographic purposes, but not more refined than is necessary for the construction of good maps. In connection with this work, there is, first, an astronomic and computing division, the officers of which are engaged in determining the geographic co-ordinates of certain primary points; second, a trigonometric corps, engaged in expanding a system of triangulation over various portions of the country from measured base-lines; third, a topographic corps, organized for the purpose of prosecuting a topographic survey from the points previously determined by the astronomic and trigonometric divisions. This topographic corps is organized into twenty-seven parties, scattered in various portions of the United States. The topographic work is not everywhere carried on by the same methods, but the methods are somewhat diversified, depending upon the characteristics of the country surveyed, and the scale on which the maps are to be constructed. It is believed that this work should be more refined and elaborate in some portions of the country than in others, and the methods of survey in a level country necessarily differ from the methods to be pursued in a country of high and mountainous reliefs. Again, there are portions of the United States devoid of timber, and other portions densely wooded, and, in these districts, diverse methods must be adopted. And still other reasons demand a variety of methods. The scale adopted for the general work varies from $\frac{1}{250000}$ to $\frac{1}{62500}$. It is believed that the triangulation and topographic field-work are carried on with a degree of refinement sufficient for the scale adopted; that is, determinations of positions and altitudes are made with all the approximation to accuracy that it is possible to utilize in representing the field-work on paper.

II. With topographic maps constructed as above, a geologic survey is prosecuted in the field, embracing the subjects of areal and structural geology; that is, this survey is conducted for the purpose of exhibiting the geographic distribution of geologic formations, and plotting the same upon charts, and, at the same time, the structural geology of the formations is studied, and the materials collected in the field are plotted in geologic sections. While engaged in this field-work this corps of geologists collects fossils, minerals, ores, and rocks, for further study in the laboratories of the survey.

III. There are in the Survey three distinct corps of geologists engaged in the study of economic geology, at the present time relating especially to gold, silver, copper, iron, coal, and quicksilver.

IV. There are in the Survey, as at present organized, the following paleontologic laboratories:

(a.) A laboratory of vertebrate paleontology for formations older than the Quaternary. In connection with this laboratory, there is a corps of paleontologists.

(b.) There is a laboratory of invertebrate paleontology of Quaternary age, with a corps of paleontologists.

(c.) There is a laboratory of invertebrate paleontology of Cenozoic and Mesozoic age, with a corps of paleontologists.

(d.) There is a laboratory for invertebrate paleontology of Paleozoic age, with a corps of paleontologists.

(e.) There is a laboratory of paleobotany, with a corps of paleobotanists.

The paleontologists and paleobotanists connected with the laboratories above described, study and discuss in reports the fossils collected by the general geologists in the field. They also supplement the work of the field geologists by making special collections in important districts and at critical horizons; but the paleontologists are not held responsible for areal and structural geology on the one hand, and the geologists are not held responsible for paleontology on the other. In addition to the large number of paleontologists on the regular work of the Geological Survey, as above described, several paleontologists are engaged from time to time to make special studies.

V. There is a chemical laboratory attached to the Survey, with a large corps of chemists engaged in a great variety of researches relating to the constitution of waters, minerals, ores, and rocks.

VI. There is a lithologic laboratory in the Survey, with a large corps of lithologists engaged in the microscopic study of rocks.

VII. There is a physical laboratory in the Survey, with a small corps of men engaged in certain physical researches of prime importance to geologic philosophy.

VIII. There is in the Survey a division of illustration, organized for the purpose of preparing illustrations for paleontologic and geologic reports.

IX. There is in the Survey an extensive geologic library, and the librarian has a corps of assistants engaged in bibliography.

X. There is in the Survey a division of mineral statistics, with a large corps of men engaged in statistical work, the results of which are published in an annual report entitled "Mineral Resources."

With the organization above indicated, a general topographic and geologic survey of the United States is in progress, and the officers of the Survey at the present time are widely scattered throughout the country.

The topographic survey of the United States properly commenced about the year 1870, under the four organizations that were subsequently consolidated so as to constitute the present United States Geological Survey. The work has been continued under the present organization by methods more elaborate and refined. The total area topographically surveyed at the close of the present field season will be something more than 600,000 square miles. In the prosecution of this work, the triangulation of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the triangulation of the Lake surveys, and various other geographic works prosecuted by the General Government, and by the several States, and by private enterprise are utilized to the greatest possible extent. In general geology, the work heretofore done by the General Government, and by the several State governments, and by various individuals is also utilized to the greatest possible degree.

In connection with the general survey embracing topography, general geology, and mining geology, certain great economic problems are under investigation. The most important of these relates to the irrigation of the arid portions of the United States. The second question of importance relates to the relief which will be afforded to the lower valley of the Mississippi by utilizing the waters that flow from the Rocky Mountains on the west, and the great plains in irrigation. A third problem of great importance relates to the distribution of the forest areas of the country.

The organization and operations of the Survey are thus briefly set forth, in compliance with your request.

I beg permission to make a request, viz: That I may be permitted to present to the committee of the Academy over which you preside, certain opinions relating to the organization of the scientific work of the Government, on a comprehensive plan, by which the work can be more thoroughly co-ordinated, more systematically prosecuted, and more economically administered than at present, and to present the facts on which these opinions are founded. I beg permission also to state that I should esteem it a pleasure to answer any further inquiries, to any desired extent of detail, which the committee may wish to propound.

I am, with great respect, your obedient servant,

J. W. POWELL.

General M. C. MEIGS,
Chairman Committee National Academy Sciences, Washington, D. C.

Reply of the Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey to the inquiries of the chairman of the committee of the National Academy of Sciences.

UNITED STATES COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY OFFICE,
Washington, September 19, 1884.

DEAR SIR: In compliance with your invitation through the Secretary of the Treasury under date of August 14, I communicate herewith the following statement in regard to the organization of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the present condition of the work, for the information of your committee.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

A systematic survey of the coast was first inaugurated by the act of Congress of February 10, 1807, which read as follows:

"AN ACT to provide for surveying the coast of the United States.

"Be it enacted, &c., That the President of the United States shall be, and he is hereby, authorized and requested to cause a survey to be taken of the coasts of the United States, in which shall be designated the islands and shoals, with the roads or places of anchorage, within twenty leagues of any part of the shores of the United States; and also the respective courses and distances between the principal capes, or headlands, together with such other matters as he may deem proper for completing an accurate chart of every part of the coast within the extent aforesaid."

The work was assigned to the direction of the Treasury Department, where it continued until 1817, when the bill making appropriations for the work contained a proviso that the survey should be conducted only by naval officers. The work, then just fairly inaugurated, was thus discontinued as a separate organization, and only disconnected surveys were made as opportunity or occasion presented. Such discord and dissatisfaction resulted from the want of system that in 1832, July 10, the survey was reorganized by the following act:

"AN ACT to carry into effect the act to provide for a survey of the coast of the United States.

"SECTION 1. Be it enacted, &c., That for carrying into effect the act entitled 'An act to provide for surveying the coasts of the United States,' approved on the 10th day of February, 1807, there shall be, and hereby is, appropriated a sum not exceeding twenty thousand dollars, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; and the said act is hereby revived, and shall be deemed to provide for the survey of the coasts of Florida, in the same manner as if the same had been named therein.

"SEC. 2. That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized, in and about the execution of the said act, to use all maps, charts, books, instruments, and apparatus which now, or hereafter, may belong to the United States, and employ all persons in the land or naval service of the United States, and such astronomers and other persons as he shall deem proper."

Upon reorganization, the conduct of the work was assigned to the Treasury Department. In 1834, it was transferred, as an organization, to the Navy Department (by Executive order, the matter being then within the functions of the President), but the extreme difficulty of conducting such work under other than a civil organization was so forcibly shown that after two years' trial it was retransferred to the Treasury Department, where it has since remained.

The question of assignment to the Navy Department being constantly agitated Congress, in 1843, provided for an examination into and settlement of the matter by the following act of March 3, 1843:

"AN ACT making appropriations for year ending June 30, 1844.

"For survey of the coast of the United States, including compensation of Superintendent and assistants, one hundred thousand dollars: Provided, That this, and all other appropriations hereafter to be made for this work, shall, until otherwise provided by law, be expended in accordance with a plan of reorganizing the mode of executing the survey to be submitted to the President of the United States by a board of officers which shall be organized by him, to consist of the present Superintendent, his two principal assistants, and the two naval officers now in charge of the hydrographical parties, and four from among the principal officers of the Corps of Topographical Engineers; none of whom shall receive any additional compensation whatever for this service, and who shall sit as soon as organized. And the President of the United States shall adopt and carry into effect the plan of said board, as agreed upon by a majority of its members. And the plan of said board shall cause to be employed as many officers of the Army and Navy of the United States as will be compatible with the successful prosecution of the work; the officers of the Navy to be employed on the hydrographical parts, and the officers of the Army on the topographical parts of the work; and no officer of the Army or Navy shall hereafter receive any extra pay out of this, or any future appropriations for surveys."

After discussing the matter, outlining the methods, and defining the duties of those employed, the Board adopted the following resolution, expressive of their opinion as to which Department should have control of the work:

"Resolved, That inasmuch as the object and purpose of the Survey of the coast refer principally to the commercial interests of the country, and as all the laws of Congress in relation to the same contemplate the employment of civilians and officers of the Army and Navy upon said work, it is the opinion of this Board, and they do hereby respectfully recommend, that it should be under the control, and considered a part of the Treasury Department."

The plan of organization submitted by the Board received the President's approval and became operative on April 29, 1843, and has been since then the basis upon which the Survey has been conducted.

In the spring of 1848, an attempt was again made in Congress to transfer the Survey to the Navy Department. It was defeated in the House by a vote of 90 to 36. In the spring of 1849, in the Senate, Mr. Benton moved to amend the civil bill as it came from the House by reducing the amount appropriated for the Coast Survey, and adding the words "the said Survey shall be carried on exclusively by the Navy Department, under the direction of the President of the United States." After a full discussion, the amendment was lost, only two Senators voting for it.

On December 31, 1850, a resolution of the Senate called upon the Secretary of the Navy to report what advantages would be derived by a transfer of the Coast Survey to the Navy Department, and upon the Secretary of the Treasury to state why, in his opinion, such transfer should not be made. Their replies are printed as Senate Ex. Docs. Nos. 35 and 36, Thirty-first Congress, second session (15 February, 1851). The arguments in favor of transfer were not considered of sufficient weight to warrant any change. The propriety of maintaining the Survey as a distinctive civil organization then became so generally recognized that no further serious attempt was made for many years.

In 1871 (act of March 3), the field operations of the Coast Survey were extended so as to include the execution of a primary triangulation across the continent to form a geodetic connection between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The same bill authorized the extending of aid to States for the survey of their territory, by the following clause:

"Provided, That the triangulation shall determine points in each State of the Union which shall make requisite provisions for its own topographical and geological surveys."

Under the provisions of this last clause, eleven States have inaugurated surveys which are now in active prosecution under direction of the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

With this enlargement of the functions of the Survey, its name was changed to the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.

In 1878, a clause of the sundry civil bill (June 30) read as follows: "And the National Academy of Sciences is hereby required, at their next meeting, to take into consideration the methods and expenses of conducting all surveys of a scientific character under the War or Interior Department, and the surveys of the Land Office, and to report to Congress, as soon thereafter as may be practicable, a plan for surveying and mapping the Territories of the United States on such general system as will, in their judgment, secure the best results at the least possible cost; and also to recommend to Congress a suitable plan for the publication and distribution of reports, maps, documents, and other results of the said surveys."

Their report (H. R. Mis. Doc. No. 5, Forty-fifth Congress, third session, December 3, 1878) recommends the consolidation of all surveys of mensuration under one head; has carefully considered the various questions, and believes that the Coast and Geodetic Survey is practically best prepared to execute the entire mensuration system required, and suggests such consolidation under the Coast and Geodetic Survey, its name to be changed to the Coast and Interior Survey.

At the same time, it recommended the establishment of an independent organization, to be known as the United States Geological Survey, to be charged with the duty of examining into the geological structure, natural resources, and production of the public domain, but that no surveys of mensuration be made by it other than local topographical surveys for development of special mineral deposits.

The recommendations of the Academy were so far adopted as to leave the Coast and Geodetic Survey in charge of the survey of the coast, and of the State surveys and interior geodetic work, to discontinue the various geological and geographical surveys, and to organize the United States Geological Survey, charging it with the duties specified by the Academy. Its functions were to be confined to geology and not to embrace geodesy (sundry civil bill, March 3, 1879).

In his annual message to Congress, presented in December, 1882, the Secretary of the Navy recommended the transfer to his Department of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Revenue Marine, the Life-Saving Service, the Light-House Board, and other bureaus of the Treasury Department. The heads of the various bureaus named were invited by the Secretary of the Treasury to make such statements in regard to the proposal as should seem advisable. Their replies were published as Treasury Doc. No. 395 (January, 1883), and the arguments presented in opposition to the transfer of any of the bureaus were such that no action was taken.

From the foregoing it will appear that the present organization of the Coast and Geodetic Survey may be briefly stated as follows:

Its organization provides for a survey of the coasts of the United States upon the basis of a trigonometrical survey, as set forth in the act of 1843.

In 1871, the extension of the triangulation to a line reaching across the continent, and connecting the surveys of the Atlantic and Pacific coasts was authorized, as well as the supplying of points for State surveys in such States as provided for a topographical or geological survey of their area. This had underlying the idea of an ultimate trigonometrical survey of the whole area of the country, giving natural precedence to those regions where circumstances most called for such work. The views which have guided my predecessor and myself in this shaping of the future of the work were expressed by me in the subjoined letter to the chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations in 1882:

UNITED STATES COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY OFFICE,
Washington, May 2, 1882.

SIR: In compliance with your request, I submit a statement of the scientific objects and practical usefulness of the work carried on for some years past by this office, under the designation of "triangulation to connect the Atlantic and Pacific coasts," and "determination of points in aid of State surveys."

That work was first authorized in the appropriation bill for the year 1871–'72,* and with slight variations in the terms of appropriation, simplifying the statement, has been provided for ever since.

The immediate object of the geodetic connection, or transcontinental triangulation, is to ascertain accurately the distance between some points on the two coasts, and their relative positions on the surface of the earth. This requires the same operations of base measure and triangulation, and, at frequent points, observations of latitude, longitude, and direction of the meridian, as are made for the surveys of the coasts.

By this means we obtain, in addition to the separate surveys of the coasts proper, a connecting link, which gives for a general map of the whole country a known skeleton or framework.

Such a connecting link is a necessary and proper part of a survey of the "coasts and adjacent islands, &c., of the United States," as originally provided for by law, in order to bring into harmony the measurements along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. This is sufficiently obvious to allow us to believe that it would have been specified in the original law if the country had, at the time of its enactment (1807), had a "western coast." In fact, the terms of section 4681 (Revised Statutes) require no straining to be applied to the ascertainment of the distance and direction between Cape Cod and Cape Mendocino, or between Sandy Hook and the Golden Gate.

In addition to this requisite purpose of the transcontinental line of survey, it presents the following scientific and practical advantages, viz:

SCIENTIFIC RESULTS.

It accomplishes incidentally—

1st. The measurement of an east-and-west line of about three thousand miles, the curvature of which is determined by the longitude observations, and thus contributes by far the longest arc of a parallel that has been measured for the determination of the size and figure of the earth, just as the survey of the coast contributes, incidentally, important meridional measurements.

2d. The accurate determination of the height above the sea level of a great number of points along the line, affording a common datum plane for all elevations across the continent, and also ascertaining the relation of the mean level of the ocean on the eastern and western coasts.

PRACTICAL ADVANTAGES.

The transcontinental link furnishes accurate base lines for all State surveys within its range, and puts into position the (so-called) meridians and base lines of the public land survey wherever it intersects them. Such surveys as now exist are irreconcilable, frequently by many miles. The best maps of the States of Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky, constructed upon independent data, when put together, leave no delineation of the Ohio River. Between the land survey maps of Illinois and Missouri, the Mississippi River presents in places wide lakes, in others, it entirely disappears.

Without some outside check, no property surveys can be combined into a town map, no town surveys can be combined into county maps, no county surveys can be combined into a State map. A map of a State constructed upon such a basis will be widely in error, while that of a State constructed upon the reverse method; viz., a system of some accurately ascertained points, from which one or more points in every county are derived by triangulation, will possess all the essentials of correctness.

In the foregoing considerations, except so far as the direct connection between the surveys of the Atlantic and Pacific coasts is concerned, there is underlying the general idea that in time it will become necessary to have a correct map of the whole area of the United States.

The detail of such a map may properly be constructed by each State as their necessity and convenience may require. The situation in regard to Government surveys of the several States differs very much according to their history, the more recent States having been parceled out according to the system of the public land surveys, which furnish at the charge of the General Government at least an approximate map of the most important features of the country, while the older States have had no such benefit.

A simple framework of points from 15 to 25 miles apart within which all local surveys must rigorously fit is all that is requisite to bring harmony into what is now utter confusion.

Such is the work now in progress in nine States, under the recital of the general appropriation for the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey: "Furnishing points for State surveys."

Leaving to each State the care of making provision for detailed surveys of boundaries and properties within its limits, or for topographical and economic purposes at such times as their occasions may demand, it remains evident that a general framework of accurate distances and bearings between intervisible points covering the whole country is necessary to secure unity and harmony in all its parts.

This general framework is necessarily a national work. It is not proposed to press it forward in advance of the requirements of the times, but with reasonable foresight to have it in hand for the inevitable demand.

Mr. Chairman, I will not expand further the statement which you have given me the opportunity of making, but will only add the statistical facts that within recent years about $30,000 have been expended annually upon triangulation between the Eastern and Western coasts, and about $15,000 for aid to State surveys distributed in nine States. The former object can be completed at the same rate of expenditure in five years; the latter is indefinite in its character, and subject to such expansion as Congress may see fit to give to it from time to time.

I have not referred to the work of this nature that has been done by other nations—even by those of the scantiest resources—because the general facts are too well known to require recital in this brief statement.

Very respectfully,

J. E. HILGARD,
Superintendent.

Hon. FRANK HISCOCK,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives.

Moderate appropriations have been granted annually for this class of work; for the transcontinental triangulation about $30,000 (this year only $20,000), and for geodesy for the several State surveys about $14,000. The present status of the work is as follows, approximately stated:

Transcontinental triangulation about three-fifths done.

Surveys in States table prepared June, 1884. (See below.)

States in which triangulation has been carried on under the appropriation "for furnishing points for State surveys," and amounts expended in 1883–'84.

State.	Amount.	Name.	Progress.
New Hampshire	$1,816	Prof. E. T. Quimby	Three-fourths completed.
Vermont	1,210	Prof. V. G. Barbour	One-fourth completed.
New Jersey	2,338	Prof. E. A. Bowser	Two-thirds completed.
Pennsylvania	1,430	Prof. M. Merriman	SE. portion nearly completed.
Tennessee	1,447	Prof. A. H. Buchanan	One-third completed.
Kentucky	2,005	Prof. J. R. Proctor	Well under way.
Ohio	785	Prof. R. S. Devol	Lately begun.
Indiana	1,496	Prof. J. L. Campbell	Much laid out to be done.
Wisconsin	2,280	Prof. J. E. Davies	Southern border nearly completed and reconstruction of portion of center.

These amounts were allotted last year to each State where the geodetic work was intrusted to some scientific man employed by the State.

The Coast and Geodetic Survey supplies instruments, criticizes and approves estimates, and keeps general control, assimilating the work to its own well established methods and principles. Under its care the work has made good progress in each State.

In regard to the survey of the coast proper, the following statement will give a general view of its condition:

On the Atlantic and Gulf coast the survey is about nine-tenths completed. The changes which take place in the shores and channels, mainly from natural and partly from artificial causes, render resurveys necessary from time to time, in different places, in order to keep the charts and sailing directions up to date. Of the important harbor of New York, the entrance is kept under annual examination in order to keep track of the changes, and, if possible, control their causes. A complete resurvey of the great thoroughfare of Long Island Sound is in progress under special appropriations, as, in time, great changes have taken place, or many localities have very much grown in importance. A complete resurvey of Delaware Bay is just about being finished.

It is evident that even where the whole extent of the coast has once been charted, a considerable amount of work must continually be done in order to maintain the correctness of the charts and "coast pilots" or sailing directions. I estimate that it will require a force of two parties, one ashore and one afloat, in each of five districts between Passamaquoddy Bay and the Rio Grande to keep up this work.

The survey of the Pacific coast between San Diego (the Mexican boundary) and Fuca Straits (with Puget Sound) is about three-fifths done, and the publication of charts, sailing directions, and tide tables is proportionally advanced. The same considerations in regard to future resurveys obtain here equally as on the Atlantic coast. One resurvey of San Francisco Bay has been made some ten years ago, and a new one is now strongly urged.

In the territory of Alaska, no minute or exact surveys have yet been undertaken, as the condition of the country does not yet call for them, but a good deal has been done in the way of geographical exploration and hydrographic reconnaissance. Many charts of approximate correctness have been published as well as a volume of sailing directions.

Mention must not be omitted of the explorations of the Gulf Stream, having for their object the discovery of the laws that govern it, with the view of taking due account of it in navigation, and as an indication of the approach to our shores, as also of the researches into the distribution and laws of change of the earth's magnetism, by which we have been enabled to ascertain the variation of the compass along our coasts, as well as over the whole country—a knowledge equally important to the mariner and to the land-surveyor.

Having thus summarily recited the organization of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the present state of the work intrusted to it, I will now offer some remarks upon the second and third questions of the Congressional Commission as to the way in which certain scientific bureaus can best be co-ordinated, and what changes or additions in them are desirable.

So far as the Coast and Geodetic Survey is concerned, it has no relations to the "weather service," and I shall leave it out of consideration.

The questions raised have, in great part, their origin in a recommendation of the Secretary of the Navy, that the administrative direction of the Coast Survey be transferred to his Department. I have endeavored to reply to this proposition in a letter addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, which is subjoined:

UNITED STATES COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY OFFICE,
Washington, January 6, 1883.

SIR: The principal reasons against transferring the Coast Survey Service from the Treasury Department to the Navy Department must necessarily be those which led, in 1843, to the adoption of the present system of administration, together with the fact that the work has been successfully conducted under the same. These considerations may be briefly stated as follows:

The work is one which requires the co-operation of persons specially trained in geodesy or spherical surveying, in trigonometrical and topographical surveying, in nautical surveying and the science of navigation, beside the employment of mathematical computers, skilled draughtsmen, engravers, mechanicians, and other persons of special attainments.

It was believed that an organization composed of such various elements, including civilians, engineer officers of the Army, and officers of the Navy, would be most advantageously placed under a civil Department, where all difficulties arising from questions of relative rank and special privilege would disappear. For this reason, and as relating mainly to the commercial interests of the country, the work was placed under the Treasury Department, which has charge of that part of the public service.

It is claimed and admitted that this plan has worked well, and excellently well. The permanent civil nucleus has preserved unity of plan and methods in the work, has fostered its progress and development, and has maintained the necessary strict coordination of the survey afloat with that of the shore.

The spare force of the naval and military service has been utilized to advantage. There are not now any officers of the Army employed in the work, because their whole force is needed in improvements of rivers and harbors. In like manner, at times when the Navy required its whole force for war purposes, not a single naval officer was employed on the Coast Survey. On the contrary, civilians on the work performed duty with the fleets. The case is now reversed, and about fifty naval officers, mostly of lower grades, find useful employment and valuable experience on the Coast Survey. About 250 men are furnished with pay and rations, and the total expenditure on the part of the Navy amounts to about $250,000 a year, being 30 per cent. of the whole expenditure for the Coast and Geodetic Survey. This is made the ground by the Secretary of the Navy for the claim that the work should be transferred to his Department. It is not claimed that the officers would not be paid, whether on this duty or not. It is possible that the number of enlisted men, although within the whole number allowed for the Navy, might not be employed. We must admit, therefore, that the appropriations for the naval service are increased by the pay and rations for the men employed on the Coast Survey, say $92,000 per annum, or less than 15 per cent. of the whole expenditure for the work. This expenditure is necessary, if the work is to be done, whether administered by the Treasury or by the Navy Department.

The leading considerations which I would urge in opposition to the proposed transfer may be summed up in the following propositions:

1. The present system, perfected nearly forty years ago, has proved thoroughly efficient, economical, and satisfactory to the country. It is wise to hold fast to that which has been proved to be good.

2. It affords to the Navy all the advantages that can be legitimately claimed. It employs as many of its officers in service afloat as can be advantageously used in hydrography. The employment of a larger number, in the event of a transfer, would result in training naval officers to be geodesists, topographers, chiefs of technical bureaus, and in withdrawing their interests and habits from the naval service proper.

3. The efficiency of the service would suffer by the loss of ambition and emulation, which exist at present in a high degree, but which find no stimulus in a service where no positions of responsibility and direction are open to civil experts, however great their attainments and devotion to the public service.

Yours, respectfully,

J. E. HILGARD,
Superintendent Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Hon. CHARLES J. FOLGER,
Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

To the foregoing may be added that the naval officers are almost without exception well pleased with their service on the survey of the coast, although in reality more arduous than the regular routine of the naval service in time of peace. They are at all times, however, perfectly under the control of the Navy Department, and subject to being detached and ordered upon other duty. No officers above the grade of commander are attached to the survey; most of the officers are of the grades between ensign and lieutenant. They obtain a most valuable experience, which stands them in great stead on foreign stations.

The hydrographic survey along our shores is in reality not a nautical survey, but, properly speaking, a trigonometrical survey, in which the positions of the depths observed, of rocks and shoals, are determined by the observation of angles upon objects on shore, which are known by the triangulation and topography, with which the hydrography is closely co-ordinated. It cannot be separated from them without losing much of its present excellence.

It appears to me, then, that the existing relations of the Coast Survey to the Navy are working smoothly, economically, and efficiently, and that there is no reason for making any change. The plan has satisfactorily stood the test of time.

The Hydrographic Office of the Navy Department has entirely different functions from those of the Coast Survey. They consist in publishing charts of foreign coasts for the use of the Navy and our commercial marine, as also of directing surveys on foreign unsurveyed coasts by our naval vessels, when their opportunities permit. There is no duplication of work between the two services, and the distinction is clearly drawn, so that there is no clashing.

Another and principal motive for the questions propounded by the Congressional commission, is a supposed want of co-ordination of the work of the Geological Survey and the Coast and Geodetic in the interior, and a consequent duplication of work and useless expenditure. Such a state of facts does not actually exist by reason of the willing co-operation of the chiefs of the two works. Whenever the operations of the Geological Survey have touched regions to which the trigonometrical work had been extended, the director of the former work has applied for the geographical positions and distances determined, and has been promptly supplied with them. But it is obvious that here is a danger of interference and of duplication. It is necessary that the functions of the two organizations should be clearly defined, and that the mode in which their operations are to be co-ordinated should be firmly established.

To this end I am now, as I have always been, frankly in favor of the plan submitted by the Academy to Congress in 1878, according to which the Coast and Geodetic Survey should be transferred to the Interior Department, "retaining its original field of operations and assuming also the entire mensuration of the public domain," and to be known hereafter as the Coast and Interior Survey.

I see no objection on the part of the Coast and Geodetic Survey to such transfer to another civil Department, provided its present scope is preserved, and there is added to its functions the gradual execution of a trigonometrical network over the whole country, as a basis for all economic or property surveys and maps, and likewise all accurate topographical surveys.

The requisite co-operation in the plans and execution of the work of the different scientific bureaus can then be secured by the consultation of a board composed of their heads reporting to the Secretary.

Such appears to me to be a feasible plan, which, in time, may lead to the establishment of a separate governmental department.

Very respectfully yours,

J. E. HILGARD,
Superintendent Coast and Geodetic Survey.

General M. C. MEIGS,
Chairman Committee of the National Academy of Sciences.

Letter from the Hydrographic Office.

UNITED STATES HYDROGRAPHIC OFFICE,
BUREAU OF NAVIGATION, NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, September 17, 1884.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Bureau's letter of August 16, inclosing a letter from General M. C. Meigs, U. S. A., chairman of a committee of the National Academy of Sciences, in which I am requested to give information in reference to the organization and operations of the Hydrographic Office. I have the honor to give the following as the organization of this office:

In 1846, Lieut. M. F. Maury, when in charge of the Naval Observatory and Chart Depot, which was at that time under the Bureau of Ordnance and Hydrography, began the collection of information from the logs of vessels, according to a carefully devised scheme, for the purpose of making charts to show the prevailing winds and currents, their limits and general characteristics, and, in general, all the physical features of the ocean, including its meteorology, the limits of icebergs, the feeding ground of whales, and all facts of interest and value to the maritime community. It was a long time before important results were obtained, but gradually mariners of all nations became interested, and sent their logs for examination. From the data thus gathered, Lieutenant Maury constructed his famous wind and current charts, and wrote his sailing directions. These charts and sailing directions have become known the world over, and the routes therein laid down for passages are followed to this day. It was estimated that the saving of time by the routes thus determined was equivalent to many millions of dollars annually. Two hundred thousand of the charts and twenty thousand of the sailing directions were distributed gratuitously to the masters of vessels who had contributed their logs. The continuance of this work, of invaluable benefit to the maritime interests of the world, was interrupted by the war, Maury's last publication appearing as Monograph No. 3 in May, 1861.

The Hydrographic Office was definitely established by the act of Congress approved June 21, 1866, now embodied in the Revised Statutes as follows (par. 431):

"There shall be a Hydrographic Office attached to the Bureau of Navigation in the Navy Department, for the improvement of the means for navigating safely the vessels of the Navy and of the mercantile marine, by providing, under the authority of the Secretary of the Navy, accurate and cheap nautical charts, sailing directions, navigators, and manuals of instruction for the use of all vessels of the United States, and for the benefit and use of navigators generally."

An appropriation was made at about the same time for the purchase from Messrs. E. and G. Blunt, of New York, of Bowditch's Navigator, and of a number of copper plates of charts of the several oceans, and of the waters adjacent to the coasts of the United States, but not including the coast lines. A new edition of the Navigator was published, and charts were printed from the plates, and sold to the merchant marine as they were called for. The plates of Maury's Wind and Current Charts were turned over to the Hydrographic Office, as well as those prepared under a special appropriation from the surveys made by the expeditions under Wilkes, Rodgers, Perry, and Page. To supply our ships of war with charts of every part of the world, copies were purchased of those published by the British Admiralty. A considerable number of admiralty charts have been reproduced; some in copper plate, but the greater part by photo-lithography.

As provided for in the statute establishing the Hydrographic Office, books relating to navigation, sailing directions, and other information of use to the navigator have been prepared from time to time and published; correspondence has been carried on with foreign hydrographic offices, and the information thus obtained has been republished in the form of Notices to Mariners, which have been distributed gratuitously to marine agencies and insurance companies, and to masters of vessels who have applied for them.

Efforts were resumed in 1873 to collect meteorological data from the merchant service for a new edition of Maury's Charts, and with the additional information obtained during the last twenty years, from the logs of our ships of war, a set of charts for the North Pacific has been prepared and published.

The work of the office, as now organized, is arranged in six divisions: Plate and printing; Hydrographic Office charts, British Admiralty charts, books, notices and archives, drafting and engraving, and meteorology.

PLATE AND PRINTING DIVISION.

The copper plates belonging to the office in the plate and printing division, and available for use in printing, are as follows:

Purchased from Messrs. Blunt	27
Exploring expedition plates transferred to office	112
Prepared by office, finished	165
Maury's Wind and Current Charts	24
Total	329

The number of charts printed from the above plates during the year has been 17,000.

CHART DIVISION.

The chart division has charge of all charts kept for issue to vessels, except original charts of the British Admiralty. They include charts printed from copper plates in the plate and printing division; reproductions on stone of British Admiralty charts, together with a few original French charts, and charts of the United States Coast Survey.

The number of copies on hand June 30 was as follows:

Designation of charts.	Number of charts.	Number of copies.
From copper plates:
Blunt's charts	27
Exploring expedition charts	112
Office charts, finished	140	10,000
Office charts, unfinished	25
Maury's charts	24	22,000
From stone	510	83,000
	838	115,000
Deducting the wind and current charts	24	22,000
Total sailing charts	814	93,000

The number of charts issued during the year has been as follows:

To ships of war	5,941
To merchant vessels transmitting meteorological journals	1,570
To home correspondents and libraries	574
To foreign hydrographic offices (exchanges)	537
To agents, for sale	8,857
To navy-yards and Government offices	7,886
Total	25,365

ADMIRALTY CHART DIVISION.

The hydrographic office connected with the British Admiralty has published a series of charts numbering about 3,000, and representing bodies of water in all parts of the world. From 75 to 100 charts are issued, and about double the number receive important corrections annually. The series forms the most complete collection in existence, and the navigators of all countries, whether naval or mercantile, must rely primarily upon this office for charts. Of these publications, the admiralty chart division of the Hydrographic Office keeps at all times a supply. At present, the aggregate number of copies on hand is 16,000, representing 2,300 charts. Every new chart, and every chart having important corrections, is received from the British Admiralty at the Hydrographic Office as soon as issued.

DIVISION OF BOOKS.

In the division of books, there are 20,000 copies of the publications of this office, of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, and of the Light-House Board, and others purchased abroad for the use of our naval vessels. The first only are kept for sale. Several copies of each publication are always kept corrected to the latest date.

NOTICE AND ARCHIVE DIVISION.

The division of notices and archives contains single copies of 7,000 American and foreign charts, kept for reference. In this division is also filed all nautical information from whatever source received. During the year, there have been received from thirty foreign hydrographic offices, and marine and port departments, 2,400 printed notices. The notices in foreign languages, including Chinese and Japanese, as well as those of nearly every country in Europe, have been translated by naval officers attached to the division. The information obtained from the notices has been republished in notices to mariners, indicating changes of lights and buoys, and in hydrographic notices indicating changes in hydrography.

METEOROLOGICAL DIVISION.

The province of the meteorological division is to furnish blank meteorological journals to the masters of merchant vessels who are willing to post them, the masters receiving in return a set of charts covering the route to be traversed. The data obtained from these journals and from the log-books of ships of war are condensed for use in the construction of new editions of Maury's Wind and Current Charts. From this division is issued a monthly pilot chart, which shows graphically the possible limits of the Gulf Stream, icebergs, the best track for steamers, reported rocks, shoals, and other marine dangers, the establishment of new lights, and changes in position of buoys, &c.

BRANCH OFFICES.

In order to extend the full benefit of the co-operation of this office with all foreign offices to the merchant marine, branch offices are located in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, and San Francisco. These branches are in charge of officers detailed from the main office. Each branch is supplied with charts covering the navigable waters of the globe, nautical works, light lists, and sailing directions, all corrected to date. The plan has the double advantage of placing within easy reach of masters of vessels all the information contained in the Hydrographic Office, and of enabling the office to obtain with greater fullness, accuracy, and dispatch all the information brought to those ports by incoming navigators as the fruit of their own experience. The number of vessels boarded during the last six months foots up 5,000. Logs have been examined, and barometers and charts corrected to date.

For a thorough understanding of interior details, and what the office is accomplishing for the merchant marine and the cause of science, the office is at all times open to the personal inspection of those interested.

Very respectfully,

J. R. BARTLETT, U. S. N.,
Commander and Hydrographer.

Commodore J. G. WALKER, U. S. N.,
Chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

Letters from Prof. J. D. Dana.

NEW HAVEN, September 12, 1884.

DEAR SIR: On the urgent request of Prof. W. P. Trowbridge, I take the liberty of writing you briefly with regard to the kind of maps which appear to be needed for geological field work.

I would remark, in the first place, that when in the field I have been always troubled by the want of a trustworthy map. I have worked much in the bordering parts of Connecticut, New York, and Massachusetts, and I have found it impossible to unite the larger published maps of these several States into a common map, or the maps of Connecticut towns into a State map, without a degree of manipulation, of shifting of rivers and roads, that was shocking to one's scientific and moral sensibilities. Such facts are well known among State and town surveyors. There is obviously no doubt as to the great need of a geodetic and topographical survey that will result in the production of accurate maps.

The maps should be large enough in scale for ordinary geological purposes, and accurate enough to admit of enlargement without introducing thereby serious topographical errors. A scale of 2 inches to the mile I think would be sufficient for ordinary work.

The accuracy of the maps should be the highest that is attainable. The geologist needs to lay down the limits of formations, to determine and record bearings, to make records of the courses of structure-lines, of feature-lines, and of all lines of dynamical import. He finds often in feature-lines an indication of broad facts as to structural relations and stratigraphical details, as to the limits or range of a rock formation, as to the characters of rocks, and the changes that have taken place over them. The surface over the most of the continent is so largely under soil that he has often to rely on facts from widely distant points, and a knowledge of relative heights or courses is sought in order to solve the problems that present themselves.

Given a map on which the roads are accurately laid down, even to each turn and the position of each house, and the geologist, whenever at work over the area it represents, has a base to measure from for each locality of interest or rock limit, and he feels sure that his work may be correctly registered and will not need to be done over again because maps will some time be better.

Give him contour-lines that are exact, and he has starting-points that can be trusted for detailed measurements as to new levels, and a means also of finding his position in a region.

The free-hand contour-lines much used of late are of no value to the careful geologist. They may give the general shape of the surface sufficiently well to satisfy the geographer, but they are grossly misleading if used for any other purpose.

Under the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, a careful survey was made, a few years since, of the region about New Haven, Conn., including about 40 square miles. It has contour-lines for every twenty feet. I have found it even a source of geological revelations. Outcrops of trap occur in distant hills; with the map in hand, the outcrops are seen to fall into line, and are proved to be parts of a common dike. Bowl-like depressions of the surface are scattered about; on the map, they are found to be systematically arranged with reference to other features and depressions. Ridges, valleys, and plains make up the surface; on the map, a nearly common direction is found for the sandstone ridges and intervening valleys, and this direction corresponds with that of the glacier movement in the Glacial era. And so I might go on with other details.

It thus appears to me that, even if geology alone is considered, there cannot be too great accuracy in the topographical survey of the country; and that no contour-lines should be drawn on a map that are not strictly accurate up to the limit of surveying capabilities; that, until such accuracy can be attained, levels and form should be indicated only by ordinary lines of shading and records of actually measured heights; and, of the latter, the more the better.

I beg you will excuse my addressing you so freely, and believe me, with highest esteem, very truly yours,

JAMES D. DANA.

General M. C. MEIGS.

NEW HAVEN, September 18, 1884.

DEAR SIR: I have the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of your letters of the 16th and 17th.

As to the degree of accuracy required in maps for geological investigators, I may have expressed myself a little too strongly, but I think only a little. I was prompted by my own difficulties and sense of need while in the field. I have long felt that what the field geologist needs most or first is maps on which all the roads, wood-roads, rivers, and brooks are laid down with accuracy, and, besides this, the positions also of houses, churches, bridges (even the smallest), &c. Each house, or turn in the road, or bridge, or road-crossing serves as a base for fixing localities and lines, and is almost the only resource at hand, and if the positions are inaccurate so is the field work. If roads on a map are too near together, or too far apart, or too far from a river, or bends in a river are out of place, the belt of limestone or other rock which the geologist attempts to plot takes false or distorted shapes, or has too great or too little width, leading to false conclusions and discordances different ways.

To a map that is correct in its geographical lines, the addition of the topography and true levels is of great importance, and these levels should be given over the plains and valleys as well as for mountain regions. I should make no use of any contour-lines that were not a result throughout of direct measurement or of the best plane-table work. Were a geologist attempting to lay down the high terrace along a river valley, correct levels for points along the bottom of the valley would be of great value, while free-hand contour-lines over the region could not be trusted. I may add that where contour-lines are correctly put in it is not often easy to find the exact points over which they pass, so as to be able to use the level at any point as a base for special measurements (I speak from attempts to use the New Haven map); and hence I think it desirable that where contour-lines cross roads, the distance of this crossing from the next corner or turn in the road should in some way be noted on the map.

Of course roads and rivers cannot be correctly mapped without first a primary and secondary triangulation.

The size of map which I mentioned, 2 inches to the mile, is insufficient for much detailed geological work. This size is one which ought to come within the probable limits of appropriations. A smaller size is, in my opinion, quite inadequate for anything more than a rough reconnaissance. This is especially true with regard to regions like New England and the other metamorphic and much disturbed portions of the continent. I was yesterday where a map of 6 inches to the mile, or larger, would be required to plot intelligibly the distribution of the limestone and schist; but these are exceptional cases, and there should be an exceptional provision for them.

Very truly yours,

JAMES D. DANA.

General MEIGS.

APPENDIX E.

[CORRESPONDENCE.]

YALE COLLEGE,
New Haven, Conn., December 8, 1884.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit to you herewith a report on the customs duty on philosophical and scientific apparatus, made by a committee of the National Academy of Sciences, in compliance with a request of your predecessor, dated September 13, 1884.

I return herewith, as requested, the inclosures sent with that communication.

Very truly yours,

O. C. MARSH,
President of the National Academy of Sciences.

The Hon. SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., September 13, 1884.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a letter from Mr. E. B. Moore, appraiser of customs at Philadelphia, dated the 21st ultimo, in which he states that great difficulty is experienced in determining what instruments and other articles are entitled to classification for duty as "philosophical apparatus and instruments," under the tariff act of March 3, 1883, a copy of which, duly marked, is herewith inclosed, and suggests that the subject be referred to the Smithsonian Institution, with a request to prepare a list of such apparatus and instruments, for the use of customs officers in the premises.

In accordance with such suggestion, Professor Baird was requested to furnish the desired list, but the Department is in receipt of a communication from him, dated the 9th instant, in which he recommends that the matter be referred to you, with the request that you appoint a committee of the Academy for the purpose of reporting a list comprising the different articles which properly come within the scope of the said statutory provision.

A list of certain articles lately imported into Philadelphia, and claimed by the importers to be philosophical instruments and apparatus, and four printed catalogues, are also transmitted, and the Department will feel obliged if you will comply with the recommendation of Professor Baird, and furnish the said list.

A return of the five inclosures last mentioned is respectfully requested.

Very respectfully,

H. F. FRENCH,
Acting Secretary.

Prof. O. C. MARSH,
President National Academy of Sciences.

THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES,
Washington, December 2, 1884.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit to you herewith the report of the committee appointed to consider the matter submitted to you by the honorable Secretary of the Treasury in regard to customs duties on philosophical and scientific apparatus.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. J. BRUSH,
Chairman.

Prof. O. C. MARSH,
President National Academy of Sciences.

REPORT.

The committee of the National Academy of Sciences appointed, in accordance with the request of the Secretary of the Treasury contained in his letter dated September 13, 1884, to consider the subject of customs duty on philosophical and scientific apparatus, submit the following:

The letter of the United States appraiser addressed to the collector of the port of Philadelphia, and inclosed to us, seems to imply that a distinction exists between what may be regarded as scientific instruments and those that are known to scholars as philosophical. Your committee think that it is impossible to draw any such distinction, and, moreover, they do not find any separate reference to scientific instruments as distinct from philosophical in the tariff bill approved March 3, 1883. The only references to such instruments as forming a separate clause are as follows:

The free list (section 759, page 58) contains the clause, "Philosophical and scientific apparatus, instruments, and preparations * * * specially imported in good faith for the use of any society or institution incorporated for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for encouragement of the fine arts, not intended for sale."

The meaning, objects, and limitations of these clauses do not seem to your committee to offer any difficulty. Although the term "philosophical" as applied to instruments has long ceased to be employed in scientific language, it has a well defined signification in ordinary use. It has come down from a time when nearly all our knowledge of inanimate nature was comprehended under the general term "natural philosophy," and the instruments and apparatus necessary for acquiring and illustrating that knowledge were termed "philosophical." The obvious intent of Congress in specially designating philosophical instruments was to cover the case of institutions and individuals who might import the instruments and apparatus for the purpose of improving natural knowledge. It therefore appears to us that the terms "philosophical apparatus and instruments" in both clauses quoted should be held to cover all such instruments and apparatus imported for this purpose.

It does not appear to your committee that the addition of the word "scientific" in the last clause of the law quoted comprehends any objects other than those which may be included under the term "philosophical" as hereinbefore defined. We regard the addition of this word as merely intended to render the meaning of Congress more explicit.

The letter of the honorable Secretary of the Treasury embodies a request that the Academy shall prepare a list of instruments and apparatus which, in its opinion, should belong in the class philosophical. Recognizing the insufficiency of any general definition to enable the collectors of customs to decide to what class a given object belongs, your committee has given much attention to the question of preparing the required list. They have not, however, found it possible to do this in a way which would be at all satisfactory. The difficulties are two in number: Firstly, an instrument is philosophical, not in consequence of its special construction or function, but in consequence of the uses to which it is to be put, and many instruments may be put both to uses which are philosophical and to uses which are purely industrial or commercial. Secondly, the number of different kinds of philosophical apparatus is so great, and new kinds are so constantly added, that an exhaustive enumeration is impracticable.

Respectfully submitted.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

MARCH 6, 1885.—Ordered to be printed.

Mr. VAN WYCK submitted the following

RESOLUTION:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be directed to inform the Senate whether patents have been issued for the lands granted in 1871 to the New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Vicksburg, popularly known as the Backbone Railroad; if so, for what number of acres, to what corporation or individuals, whose receipt was taken for the same, when signed, whether unusual means were used to hasten the preparation and execution of said patents, whether the clerical force employed worked nights and Sunday so they might be completed before March 4, what day they were ready for the signature of the President, what the necessity for any special exertion to secure the completion and signature before the fourth day of March, whether anything was done to protect the actual settlers in their rights to any of such lands; also, whether previous to the fourth day of March anything was done or written in regard to any other of the unearned land grants, the forfeiture of which had been considered by the Forty-eighth Congress.

LETTER

FROM

HON. CHARLES F. ADAMS, JR.,

IN RELATION TO

Bill regulating the future payments to be made by the Union Pacific Railway Company to the United States in settlement of its obligations.

(The Union Pacific Railway Company, Equitable building, Charles F. Adams, jr., president; Elisha Atkins, vice-president; Henry McFarland, secretary and treasurer; Oliver W. Mink, assistant secretary and assistant treasurer; post-office box No. 5287.)

BOSTON, February 9, 1885.

MY DEAR SIR: The bill of the Senate Judiciary Committee, reported by you, regulating the future payments to be made by this company to the United States in settlement of its obligations, has now, for some days, been in my hands. As you are aware, the representatives of the company were not consulted in regard to this bill while it was in preparation, nor were they permitted to see it until it had been reported to the Senate. As the Union Pacific is one of the corporations interested, it may not be out of place for me, now that an opportunity for considering the measure has been afforded, to state to you, as briefly as may be, the conclusions reached in regard to it from the directors' point of view.

As originally reported, the bill was construed as compelling the company to make semi-annual payments amounting to about $450,000 each, with an increasing interest from the first payment forward to the one hundred and twentieth, so that, in round numbers, the payments during the first year would have amounted to about $950,000, and the payments during the sixtieth year would have amounted to about $2,500,000. As subsequently amended, the annual payments from the beginning were to include interest on the entire amount of the unpaid debt; that is, the payments for the first year would have been $2,500,000, which would have regularly decreased at the rate of about $30,000 per annum as the debt was paid, until, in the sixtieth year, the payments would have amounted to but about $900,000. Finally, in the shape in which the measure is now left, the payments, as I understand it, are equalized through the entire period, so that, including the central branch, they will be about $1,800,000 a year.

It is merely necessary for me to refer to the last two plans, that of annually decreasing payments, and that of equalized payments.

As respects the first of these two plans, that of the largest payments at first, I am obliged to say that I do not think, under the present business conditions of the country, the Union Pacific would be able to meet its requirements. However it might have been under conditions which have heretofore existed, it is notorious that neither for the Union Pacific nor for other railroads in the country, are the present times prosperous. Business is languishing; receipts falling off; the future uncertain. Nor are these adverse conditions of a merely passing nature. There are now four transcontinental routes in place of one, and the Union Pacific meets severe competition in its most valuable local territory. It remains to be seen how far the increase of traffic will compensate for its subdivision. Consequently, a load which a few years ago might have been safely assumed is now dangerously heavy. If you expect a horse to pull a load, it is not well to hitch to him a load heavier than he can pull. What is true physically of a horse is true financially of the Union Pacific. From my present knowledge of the company's system of roads and the existing business conditions I am obliged to say that annual requirements of $2,500,000 on the part of the United States would so cripple the Union Pacific that I should be unwilling to assume any responsibility for the result.

As respects the second scheme, I am advised that the equalized payments, including those for the Central Branch, would amount to about $1,800,000 a year. There is, I think, a fair and reasonable prospect that the company could carry this burden. I do not pretend to speak with confidence, for even that load is a heavy one, and the future of a railroad is always matter of uncertainty. It depends not only upon the business growth of the country, but upon the competition which the particular road has to encounter. As I have already said, the Union Pacific is not free from competition. Nor that only, but, while compelling it to meet competition in order to retain its traffic, the Government has, by its legislation, so tied up the hands of this company that it cannot meet its competitors on equal terms. While they are at liberty to issue securities, to guarantee construction, and otherwise to do what may be necessary to develop and extend their systems in the manner usual with railroad companies, the Union Pacific is more or less hampered in all these respects.

I cannot, therefore, but consider the policy of late years pursued with this company by the United States as economically a faulty one. From my point of view, it is not the interest either of the Government or the people to force the Union Pacific to annually take these large sums out of its quick capital and lock them up in an overflowing National Treasury. The Union Pacific serves six States and four Territories. There is not one of those States or Territories which is not to-day calling for railroad development which, if it could be provided, would not only afford whole communities sorely needed business facilities, but would add largely to the traffic and the income of this company. Every dollar of money, therefore, which is taken out of our business annually is so much which could be applied to the development of the country, not only to the great advantage of the Union Pacific, but to the increase of the security of the Government so far as the ultimate recovery of its debt is concerned. Each request for these additional facilities which now reaches me will have to be met with the answer that the money which would have sufficed to supply it has been paid into the National Treasury. The Government has taken from us and the communities we serve just so much fructifying capital.

The Union Pacific now has in the Thurman act sinking-fund, bringing less than 3 per cent. interest a year, some $5,000,000. That $5,000,000, would easily construct and equip 350 miles of railroad. Those 350 miles of railroad would bring into the Union Pacific system probably ten times the net income of the sinking-fund investments. The first-mortgage securities representing the ownership of this additional mileage might be deposited in the Treasury; and if, at the maturity of our loan, the company was unable to raise the necessary money to pay the Government off, it must take the consequences. The Government could sell out the securities representing the whole Union Pacific system to the highest bidder. In all human probability no loss would then have been incurred, while an inestimable benefit would have been conferred upon the communities which that system served.

Such, it seems to me, would yet be the true business policy for the Government to pursue with this company. Congress might impose any restrictions it saw fit in regard to the construction of auxiliary lines. It might insist upon their securities of every description being deposited in the Treasury. But for a dozen years to come, before the Pacific loans mature, the people in the States and Territories beyond the Missouri and among the mountains would have the advantage of those lines, and thus what is now a barren sinking-fund, useful to no one, would be converted into what seems to me the most beneficent system of internal improvement which could be devised.

This plan, undoubtedly, Congress has fully considered, and set aside as impracticable. I therefore do not urge it. I merely submit it as the original scheme of the directors of the Union Pacific Railway Company, and it seems to me to-day, from every conceivable point of view, a wiser scheme and one more financially sound than any other which has been suggested.

Meanwhile, it now only remains for the Union Pacific to accept such terms as are imposed upon it. When the Thurman bill was passed the Government practically took the control of this matter out of the company's hands. The plan its representatives had devised for meeting the Government obligations at maturity was then set aside, and another, devised by Congress, substituted for it. The sinking-fund plan was substituted for the auxiliary railroad system plan. Since then, as I stated in a recent letter to the Board of Government Directors, the attitude of the company has been an expectant one. It has waited to see what rule Congress, in its wisdom, shall impose, and when that rule is imposed it will live up to it, if it can. If upon a fair trial the burden exceeds the company's strength, the directors do not doubt that in the interest of all concerned Congress will modify it. This, therefore, is the view which the directors now take of the Senate judiciary bill in the shape which I understand it has finally assumed. The company is willing to accept it, and to loyally live up to it to the best of its ability. Meanwhile, it is not responsible for it; and if, as I hope will not be the case, the burden shall be found to exceed its strength, it will be simply for Congress to say whether it proposes to take the property or to modify the act.

There is one other matter to which I wish to refer, upon which much stress has been laid in discussions over the different measures proposed. It is a matter of some delicacy, but it seems to me important; and in such cases I do not see that anything is gained by not speaking out frankly, or, if need be, bluntly. I have seen it stated, not only in the papers, but in debates in Congress, that practically the Union Pacific was still managed by Mr. Gould, and that I had been simply put forward by him as a figure-head in order to allay popular feeling, and to obtain terms more favorable than would otherwise be given. In justice to Mr. Gould, as well as myself, I wish to state that this is in no degree the case. I was not Mr. Gould's choice for the position I now hold. Moreover, since the 17th day of June last, when I became president of the Union Pacific Railway Company, I wish to be held solely responsible for whatever has been done in the management of that company. In the conduct of its affairs Mr. Gould has been consulted as other directors have been consulted, neither more nor less. Generally, his views and my own have coincided. Where they have not coincided he has invariably acquiesced in my conclusions, properly taking the ground that, as the responsibility for results rested on me, it was for me to finally decide what course should be pursued. It is, perhaps, well it should be publicly understood that the course in this respect which has been pursued heretofore will continue to be pursued so long as I remain president of the company. Whatever is done will be done because, after full discussion with the directors, I think it is the best and wisest thing to be done. If, at any time, a policy is imposed upon me by either any single director, or a majority of the directors, which does not seem to me to be right and sound, I shall forthwith make way as president for some one else more in sympathy with that policy than I. Meanwhile, until I do so, I assume in advance full responsibility, if need be, to the exclusion of every one else, for whatever is done.

Should it, in the course of the debate, seem to you expedient so to do, you are welcome to make such use as you see fit, of the whole or any part of this letter.

I remain, very truly yours,

CHARLES F. ADAMS, JR.,
President.

OF

CITIZENS OF HERNANDO COUNTY, FLORIDA,

IN RELATION TO

Certain lands claimed by the Florida Railway and Navigation Company.

LAKE BUDDU, HERNANDO, November 28.

Whereas the Florida Railway and Navigation Company are now advertising for sale, on December 3, 1884 (the sale having been postponed from the 26th of November), all railroad land, or at least lands claimed by them, in Hernando County, as low as the last tiers in Township 25; which lands are now, or at least the greater portion have been, settled upon by bona fide settlers, who have been induced to go on these lands by a circular issued by the railroad company, allowing the settler the right of purchase when the same was put on market at Government prices. The railroad now refuses to recognize said circular; also the settler has been informed and believes that the company have no right to these lands, and that the Secretary has refused to issue them a patent for the same. Should the Florida Railway and Navigation Company be allowed to sell these lands it will work great injury to the settler, and will throw many out of a home, disturbing the peace and quiet of our county and producing innumerable hardships on many of good citizens. In view of these facts we keenly feel the need of legislative action taken in the premises by our Congress. And we expect and exhort them to take immediate action in the matter, giving the settler all possible relief. Also inclosed circular of notice to purchasers. Therefore,

Be it resolved, That we urge our Congressmen to take such immediate action in the matter as will give the settler the right of purchasing at Government prices or homesteading the Government land now claimed by the railroad company in Hernando County.

Resolved, We send a copy of the proceedings of this meeting to Senator Call and Congressman Davidson.

J. B. PIXTAN,

No. 1.

HERNANDO COUNTY, FLORIDA,
October 29, 1884.

Whereas in accordance with various charters granted to sundry railroad companies in divers portions of the country by the General Government, large bodies of the public lands have been reserved to said companies in aid of the construction of their roads, the time limited for the construction of the same under said charters being definitely and unmistakably set forth in the grants severally made; and whereas the limitations therein specified have long since transpired, and the conditions governing the construction of the said roads have not been met by the said railroad companies, and by reason of the same should be declared canceled and void;

We, the undersigned, settlers upon the lands reserved under one of said charters, to wit, The Florida Railroad and Navigation Company, better known as the "Yulee Company," respectfully petition the honorable Congress of the United States to take such prompt action in the matter of said grants as may best comport with our interest as actual settlers upon the public domain, and that said action be had with the view of setting aside, canceling, and annulling the said grant of lands and said lands, be returned to the National Government for sale at Government prices to actual settlers, and subject to homestead entry, the same as all public lands of the United States Government.

We most earnestly ask that prompt action be taken by the honorable Congress of the United States, and your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

The citizens of Middle and South Florida to the honorale Senators and Representatives in the United States Congress.

HONORABLE SIRS: Permit us, as humble petitioners, to appear before you in this manner to ask you to relieve us from the tyranny of the railroad.

We ask of you, gentlemen, confirmation in our homestead rights, to-wit: Five, ten, and fifteen years ago, we settled on the public domain, under the homestead law. Some of us have complied with the law, and made our final proof; others are ready to do so. Honestly we went to work, feeling perfectly secure in our possessions. We have opened up farms, built houses, and in many other ways made our homes comfortable and valuable. In some instances we have enhanced the value of our possessions tenfold; in others, one hundred; and in others, in part, one thousand fold!

Right lately the railroad came along, and claims that in De Soto's time, or some other ancient date, it got a grant to all the odd sections of land through here.

Now, gentlemen, if you wish to dishonor the General Government, and ruin this entire section of our common country, encourage the railroad and dispossess hundreds of our citizens of their honest labors. If otherwise, confirm all of us in our homestead rights that can make the required proof; and, if justice demands it, indemnify the railroad from the vacant lands of the even sections in the same district—about the only way to do justice to all, and give general satisfaction.

Feeling that your honorable body will do right in the case, we submit it to you, trusting in your honor, prudence, and wisdom.

No. 3.

To the honorable members of the Senate and House of Representatives:

The undersigned petitioners, citizens living along the line of the Tropical Florida Railroad, most respectfully pray your honorable body for immediate action whereby no indemnity of United States homesteadable lands shall be allowed said railroad for lands heretofore located and settled by individuals upon the alternate sections within the 6-mile limits, as per the original donation of some thirty years ago.

We respectfully call the attention of your honorable body to the fact that, from the extraordinary lapse of time since the donation, the railroad company has forfeited all rightful claim to any part or portion of said donation; and we consider it an act of simple charity to permit said railroad company to acquire titles to such lands of the original donation as they may find unoccupied at the time of completing their railroad to said unoccupied lands.

We would earnestly show unto your honorable body that a railroad corporation, sincerely desirous of reaping profits from their own legitimate business rather than from land speculation, would hail with delight the settlement in advance of the entire tract donated, even should they not be indemnified to the extent of a single acre.

And we beg to further represent to your honorable body that during the interim of thirty years of sluggish sleep or designing delay on the part of the railroad company, lements by homestead and otherwise have gone steadily onward, and that too at h a rate as to make the operating of the railroad a paying enterprise from the run- g of the very first train to our country, as has been demonstrated.

Ve would also respectfully show to your honorable body that the reserving from nestead entry or taking off the market of such a large quantity of land along the e of said railroad, penetrating, as it does, the most desirable portions of the Penin- a, coupled with the uncertainty of the railroad ever acquiring titles and the in- inite period of its getting and perfecting such titles, is driving from our midst that st desirable class of immigrants, honest workingmen of small means; wherefore, we in pray for positive and immediate action on the part of Congress.

Ve especially beseech your honorable body that the said railroad company be not wed to locate upon or acquire any title or claim to the even-numbered sections as emnity for lands of the original grant which have been occupied by settlers; and further pray that no lands be reserved from pre-emption and homestead for the efit of the railroad company beyond the advance of their locating survey; and t no lands reserved along the locating survey be withheld from homestead and pre- otion for the railroad company's benefit for a longer period than two years, and t lands thus reserved under this provision be made subject to homestead and pre- otion, if the railroad has not been completed to them within two years after their ervation.

nd your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

DEAR SIR: I did not get to see you during your stay at home, but in election ters things are fairer for us than they have been for some time. Hope all will well.

As the time is close when you will all meet in Congress, I would like to ask y it be possible for you to take hold of and untwist this railroad-land matter th annoys us? There are a great deal of lands here among us, particularly on the sections, that the railroads cannot sell; neither can the would-be settler bu homestead; the result is greatly retarding the filling in and building up of our c try. Many settlers are driven off somewhere else. Now, what we wish is that gress take hold of the matter, and say what the railroad may have and sell and the Government shall offer to the settler. I have known scores of would-be sett

ORANGE SPRINGS, FLA., March 18, 1885.

SIR: Permit me to call your attention to the position of certain homesteaders within the limits of the grant of the Transit road, the Yulee corporation. I will cite my brother's case—it is a type of the others. Some seven years ago he entered a homestead in Putnam County within the limits of the above grant, and, unfortunately, in an odd or railroad section. Last spring, in company with three neighbors, he offered final proof, and has recently received a notice that while his application for patent has been approved, his claim is subject to appeal by the above-mentioned corporation. Two of the people who proved up with him have received similar letters, while the the third, who is in an even section, has received his patent. I shall not go into the merits of this case—they are, I should say, sufficiently obvious to any person of ordinary intelligence. I write merely to ascertain what action, if any, has been taken this session toward the forfeiture of this company's grant, which was last year, I believe, numbered among the doomed, and to suggest that if nothing has yet been done for the relief of the settlers some decisive step should, if possible, be taken. It is clear, I think, that at the time my brother entered this land the Land Office must have held that the company had forfeited all claim to the property, otherwise the action of the honorable Commissioner is inexplicable. At that time, and for a long time after, the only portion of the Transit road which had been begun, not to say completed, was the fragment between Fernandina and Cedar Keys, and if the tardy completion of the road has, by what many think an ill-advised generosity, been considered sufficiently patent to revive this lapsed claim, it certainly does seem as if the company should be content with regaining such portions of the grant as have not been otherwise disposed of, and not seek to oust settlers from lands which their own negligence and incapacity have alone laid open to entry. But though the company's grant was limited its greed seems boundless. Can nothing be done? I hope and believe that something may and will be done, and in that hope I have written you. May I hope for the honor of a response.

I am, very respectfully, yours,

S. B. RUSS.

2213 I STREET, WASHINGTON, D. C.,
January 15, 1885.

DEAR SIR: At an interview which I had with you in June last, in regard to the forfeiture of the land grant of May 17, 1856, and now clamed by the Florida Railway and Navigation Company, you promised me that whether Congress declared the grant forfeited or not you would protect my parents, who reside on the so-called grant, from any attempt at injustice on the part of the said company. About the 1st of December ultimo, the company, in the person of one S. I. Wailes, land commissioner for the same, proceeded to sell the land occupied by my parents and others residing in their vicinity. The first step of the company was to appraise the land at its improved value, and the settler was obliged to pay for his own improvements, or permit his home to be sold to a stranger, a land speculator. Great heavens! who has ever heard of a more flagrant piece of high-handed robbery? Is this the sort of protection the people of Florida are to receive from the Government? I cannot yet believe that there is no power strong enough to cast off this worse than foreign yoke from the necks of the people, and I shall do all that lies in my power to bring this matter before Congress in its proper light; and it will seem strange, indeed, if no one can be found in the United States Congress possessed of sufficient moral courage to stand up and protest against the continuance of such outrages upon the rights of the people. You are the only one that has attempted to defend these settlers, and I most sincerely hope for your re-election. I have strongly advocated it to my friends in Florida, and have declared to them my firm belief that your defeat would be a great victory to the monopolists and United States land grabbers.

The land occupied by my parents has been appraised by the company at $5 per acre. This is exorbitant, and more than they are willing or can afford to pay, and run the risk of losing, should the company's deed fail. See extract from letter of Secretary of the Interior inclosed herewith. For the sake of peace, as the company is threatening to sell their land, they are willing to pay $1.25 or $1.50 at the most, per acre.

I informed father last summer of your promise, as you directed me, and he now writes me to see you in relation thereto.

Begging your early attention to the grievance of these old people, and your pardon for having intruded thus much upon your valuable time, I remain, dear sir, with very great respect,

Your obedient servant,

J. P. SIMONTON.

Hon. WILKINSON CALL,
United States Senator.

My father's name and address is H. J. Simonton, San Antonio, Hernando County, Florida.

Mr. S. I. Wailes is now at Jacksonville, and is doing business at the company's office.

SIR: I believe that myself and others wrote you that the counter petition, to which you refer in your remarks in the Senate the other day, was a petition signed largely by railroad employés, and in no instance signed by an actual settler that was not a large land speculator, except in case of fear. Agents were sent around to argue to the settlers "now that they had become purchasers of railroad land they would lose what they had paid out unless they assisted in petitioning and in otherwise helping to get Congress to take no action in the matter. That the land as it stood belonged to the railroad, and so regarded by the land office. Hence the railroad company had a perfect right to dispose of them, and that there was no go back upon the railroad, and therefore if Congress interfered the purchasers would be the losers."

In regard to this railroad grant matter, the selling by the railroad of the homes of old settlers is not by any means the greater evil growing out of this wholesale fraud upon the Government and people. The settlers, in many instances, were able and did buy the homes of the railroad company. The greater trouble is in the doubtfulness of titles. Those who bought for speculation can't find any one to buy of them, and those who bought their homes are discouraged—are afraid to improve them vigorously till some one shall test the validity of railroad titles. Hence the progress and development of the country along the railroad line is balked and kept back. Here, in the vicinity of Wild Wood, numbers of acres of our most desirable lands are unoccupied, are practically tied up and lost to help in peopling and developing our section. Hence it is that we have and still pray for immediate and decisive action by Congress.

Many of these lands will now sell for $25 per acre if a satisfactory title could be given. In consequence of their great value (if canceled to the railroad) the Government should allow them entered only by homesteads, and in not larger than 40-acre lots—40 acres of these lands which have been held off the market till all adjoining has been entered is worth more now than was 160 acres four years ago.

Very respectfully,

I. E. BARWICK.

Hon. W. CALL,
Washington, D. C.

LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR, TRANSMITTING, IN ANSWER TO SENATE RESOLUTION OF DECEMBER 18, 1883, INFORMATION CONCERNING THE TEXAS PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY'S MORTGAGES.

A.—Statement showing States and corporations to which grants have been made to aid in the construction of railroads which have not been completed within the time required by law.

Atlantic, Gulf and West India Transit Railroad of Florida; grant made May 17, 1856, 11 Stat., page 15, and acts supplemental thereto; should have been completed May 17, 1866.

Length of road as definitely located	miles..	305
Completed before expiration of grant	do....	155
Completed after expiration of grant	do....	70.97
Uncompleted at date when road should have been completed	do.....	150
Now uncompleted	do....	79 03
Sections granted for each mile of road		3

Under the contract made with me at that time I graded the road nearly if not quite to Cedar Keys; the iron was bought and laid as far as Starke, and the balance of the iron necessary for the road was purchased by Finnegan & Co., and piled at Fernandina, except perhaps a small quantity necessary to extend the road across the marshes.

Adjourned the examination until 8.30 a. m. to-morrow morning. 5.15 p. m., November 7, A. D. 1877.

WALTER R. YATES,
Special Examiner.

NOVEMBER 8.

Met pursuant to adjournment at 8.30 a. m. this morning.

General Finnegan wished to correct part of his previous testimony in reference to the stock of the Florida Railroad and the credits upon it.

Mr. G. W. Call purchased what is known as the Long tract, part of the present town of Fernandina, containing about 300 acres, for for about $1,000, and the "Cappo tract," in the extension of the town of Fernandina, for about $500, which was afterwards transferred to the Florida Railroad Company, and, I think, was credited to George W. Call's stock.

J. H. Brown, one of the associates, purchased what is known as the Smith tract on the mainland on Saint Mary's River, for $1,000, which was afterwards transferred to the railroad company, and I think his stock was credited with this amount, and Mr. Yulee turned over some lands he owned near Way Keys to the company for an amount which I do not now remember, and which I think was also credited to his stock.

Q. When and how did your connection with the road terminate?

A. In the fall of 1857 there was a great commercial crisis in New York, and I was unable to procure the means necessary to go on with the work, and leaving New York and coming to Charleston, there I negotiated the sale of some internal-improvement bonds to a Mr. Barrett, and on which I realized, at different times, $70,000, in cash; this money enabled me to keep the force we had in the field for some months; it is proper to state that during the progress of our work in constructing the road, Finnegan & Co. had paid for the Florida Railroad Company about $98,600 to pay interest on the free-land bonds which the company were bound to pay, but which they had neither money nor credit to do; for this advance, made to the Florida Railroad Company, Finnegan & Co. received from the Florida Railroad Company stock to the amount of $98,600, with the same credit the other stockholders had on the face of stock, amounting to some 7,400 shares. This gave usa majority of the stock in the Florida Railroad. Mr. Yulee resisted the issue of the stock to the contractors, but finally yielded on the urgent solicitation of Mr. Call, the secretary and treasurer.

Afterwards, at Mr. Riggs's office in New York, Mr. Yulee asked me to turn over all the stock to him for the benefit of Mr. Yulee. Mr. Cole, and myself, which I declined on the ground that it was assets held by Finnegan & Co. for the payment of their debts, which were large.

Finding that Finnegan & Co. had a majority of the stock of Florida Railroad Company and could control its action if necessary, I called a meeting of the principal creditors of Finnegan & Co. in New York, and inquired of them if they would take the notes of the Florida Railroad Company in substitution of the notes of Finnegan & Co., contractors, with the same collateral security as then held by them, in order to enable Finnegan & Co. to go on and complete the railroad, which they consented to do, and two of these creditors, Mr. Crooks and Perkins, representing the largest claims, accompanied me to Washington City to see Mr. Yulee and have this arrangement perfected. Mr. Yulee suggested that it would take time to perfect the arrangement, and urged that I proceed to Florida and look after the interests of the road, which had been neglected during my absence.

This I did, and Mr. Yulee refused or declined to carry out the arrangement, and it was never perfected. I continued in the prosecution of the work until the 12th of May, 1858, when I got a letter from Mr. Yulee asking me to go to Washington City, and that he had a man there ready to buy out the interest of Finnegan & Co. in the Florida Railroad.

In the mean time I would say that after I left Washington City on the occasion before referred to, and up to the time of Mr. Yulee's invitation to go there, I had every reason to believe that Mr. Yulee was embarrassing——

I went to Washington City, and there Mr. Yulee insisted with great urgency upon a sale of my interest in the contract, together with all the stock and town site interest to Mr. Edward N. Dickinson, defendant in this suit.

Mr. Yulee gave his personal assurance and guarantee that Mr. Dickinson represented, in the purchase he was about to make, Marshall O. Roberts and Moses Taylor, of New York, who were large capitalists.

Upon this assurance and guarantee of Mr. Yulee that Moses Taylor and Marshall O. Roberts, of New York, were the real parties with whom I was dealing, and that they were responsible for and would made good the engagements of Mr. Dickinson in the contract, and would pay all the debts of Finnegan & Co., and would return our notes, and the additional assurance that they would put large capital into the enterprise and put a line of steamers at both ends of the road immediately on completion. the contract was executed with Mr. Dickinson. In pursuance of the obligations of that contract, Finnegan & Co. transferred to David L. Yulee all their bonds and stock, to be held by him in trust, to secure the performance of the contract by said Edward N. Dickinson, and a written agreement to that effect was signed by the said Dickinson, Finnegan, and Cole, and witnessed by said Yulee, and the said trust accepted by the said D. L. Yulee.

NOTE.—A copy of said agreement was here offered in evidence, the original being on file in the case of Yulee vs. Vose, in this court, and the same received by consent of counsel, a copy of which is hereto attached as Exhibit A, the original to be produced if required.

In April, 1857, the interest of Alexander McRae was purchased by Joseph Finnegan & Co. for $13,155.96 in cash, and $30,000 in free-land bonds in the Florida Railroad Company, and on the 12th May he assigned all interest to J. Finnegan and A. H. Cole.

Mr. Dickerson was not a capitalist, nor a man of any adequate means to carry into effect the contract, and we accepted him solely on the representation of Mr. Yulee that he was the agent and representative of Marshall O. Roberts and Moses Taylor.

This assurance and guarantee on the part of Yulee was entirely untrue. Mr. Dickerson did not represent the above-named M. O. Roberts and Moses Taylor, and was not authorized to use their names in that connection. This fact was subsequently ascertained by me.

I have had no conversation at all with Mr. Dickerson on this subject, and the whole transaction was arranged by Mr. Yulee, and he attended to all the details.

At the time of the signing of the partnership papers between McRae, Finnegan & Cole for building the Florida Railroad, Mr. Yulee stipulated that he was to have $25,000 out of the proceeds of the contract for such services as he could render us in the prosecution of the work. I agreed to do this after I had realized $100,000 on my contract.

By the contract before mentioned with Dickerson, Finnegan & Co. were to retain one hundred and forty-two free-land bonds of $1,000 each, and Mr. Dickerson was to get all the balance of the assets which were to be turned over to Mr. Yulee.

Mr. Dickerson never did carry out the contract or agreement with Finnegan & Co. He failed to take up some of the notes of Finnegan & Co., and I had to pay them myself. In fact, all the engagements of Finnegan & Co. which were performed after that date and all the outstanding debts were performed and taken up by the Florida Railroad Company in its corporate capacity. (NOTE.—Complainant's counsel here offers in evidence memorandum of agreement marked Exhibit C in the bill of Yulee vs. Vose, and is hereto attached as Exhibit B, by consent of defendants' counsel, in lieu of the original on file in this court.) In reality, after I gave up the contract the Florida Railroad Company finished the road to Cedar Keys.

(Objected to by defendants' counsel, on the ground that it is the opinion of the witness.)

If the powers contained in the two trust deeds creating the trust, and the provisions contained in the second deed of trust for the protection of the free-land bonds, requiring an assessment of the stock one-half per cent. semi-annually, had been faithfully carried into effect, the trustees would then have had ample means to have paid the interest and expenses and protected the trust.

This provision for a sinking fund by assessment of the stock was never carried into effect by the trustees. It required the trustees to take possession of the road and its franchises upon the failure of the company to pay the 1 per cent. annually assessed to the stock of the trustees.

The second deed of trust was never recorded by the trustees, but executed and delivered, and was in the hands of the secretary of the company, and was recognized by the trustees and all the parties in interest as a subsisting obligation for the benefit of the bondholders.

The money secured by the deed of trust to John Elliott and referred to in the answer of Mr. Yulee, borrowed from the payment of interest on the free-land bonds, was paid out at the office of Riggs & Co., at Wall street, New York. I presented my coupons for payment to the agent, John Elliott, at Riggs & Co.'s, New York, and was refused payment by instruction of Mr. Yulee.

I examined the list of payment of coupons, and testify that the parties making the loan received a large portion of the money for coupons held by them. Amongst those presenting and receiving payments were David L. Yulee and James F. Sonter in his own right.

(Objected to, on the ground that it is secondary.)

I know that $32,000 of the bonds paid in by Edward N. Dickerson as the purchase-money for the town sites of Fernandina and Cedar Keys to John McRae, trustee, were he same bonds which I had paid in for lots bought from trustees, and which were required to be canceled under the trust-deed.

I have compared the numbers of these bonds with the numbers which John McRae eceived for the town sites, and I know that they are the same. Mr. Yulee was not a man of large property, and what he possessed was, I think, encumbered by mortgages.

(Objected to.)

The suit by Cole vs. Trustees did not amount to anything, and was never pressed; he bonds sued on were given to Yulee, who received them, and finally settled the natter with Mr. Cole.

The suit of the United States did not involve any valuable property in Fernandina, nd was on the outskirts of the city.

Soutter and McRae gave no personal attention to the administration of the trust; he whole management and administration before and since the war has been practically done by Mr. Yulee.

During the time that I was building the road I demanded from the secretary and reasurer of the road, who was the agent of the trustees, that the bonds received in ayment for town sites should be canceled in accordance with a provision in a trust-leed which I had incorporated in the trust-deed myself for my protection, as I received the bonds as cash from the railroad for the construction of the road.

Mr. Call proceeded to cancel the bonds in his office in my presence, and had got sixteen of them canceled when Mr. Yulee came in and stopped him.

I was present at a meeting of the bondholders in Fernandina on the 1st of June, 1868; I then held about $50,000 of bonds and coupons, and I asked to be permitted to participate in the proceedings, but was refused.

The bondholders at the meeting of June 1st, 1868, to which I was refused admittance by Mr. Yulee, did not all approve the plan of surrender of their bonds, and the receipt of lands in payment. The approval of one of these bondholders, holding $40,000 of these bonds and 6,000 coupons, was given subject to an agreement with Mr. Yulee, hat he was to be paid in cash $25,000.

(Objected to, as hearsay, &c.)

The means of the Florida Railroad Company, after the war, to relay the track to Fernandina and build the bridges, were ample.

Before Mr. Yulee's release from confinement Mr. Meador was superintendent, and actively prosecuting the work of rebuilding the road from Baldwin to Fernandina. offered him to procure the loan of $5,000, at the request of parties who had the money, o assist in building the road.

Meador declined this, and stated that he had ample means to complete the road to Fernandina, including the draw-bridge, and that he had in the treasury about $17,000.

(Objected to.)

The internal-improvement fund owned more than $90,000 in paid-up stock in the Florida Railroad Company.

Mr. Dickinson and Mr. Yulee held a large majority of the unpaid stock.

Up to the time of my leaving, the Florida Railroad Company were estimating the own sites of Fernandina and Cedar Keys; at the amount at which they were put in by the associates, it did not reach 5 per cent. on the capital stock subscribed.

At the time of the sale of the Florida Railroad the cash value of the iron was over $1,000,000.

Cross-examination by JAMES M. BAKER, Esq., counsel for defendants:

The 32,000 bonds alluded to by me in the preceding as paid in Ed. M. Dickerson for purchase-money are numbered as follows: 1042, 1045, 1044, 1037, 1038, 1039, 1032, 1034, 724, 723, 1048, 1035, 1033, 1046, 725, 1036, 1047, 891, and 890, 1233, 1246, 1247, 1248, 1249, 1251, 1255, 1257, 1258, 1261, 1263, 1267, 1253.

On the 14th November, 1859, I sent to New York a check on Riggs & Co., New York, $1,135, to take up the notes of Finnegan & Co. Afterwards Mr. Yulee gave me three nternal-improvement bonds as security for this amount.

EXHIBIT A.

Duplicate A.

It is agreed between Joseph Finegan and Company and Edwin N. Dickerson, that the various bonds and certificates of stock conveyed by Joseph Finegan & Co. to Edwin N. Dickerson, under an agreement dated May 24th, 1858, shall be held by David L. Yulee to secure the performance of the said contract by said Edwin N. Dickerson, and that the said Yulee shall release and deliver to said Dickerson the said bonds and stock as he satisfies the debts contracted to be paid by him for said Finegan and Company, and in proportion to the amounts discharged and paid.

Dated May 29th, 1859.

EXHIBIT B.

Duplicate.

These articles of agreement and contract entered into this eleventh day of June, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, between David L. Yulee, president of the Florida Railroad Company, in behalf of said company, of the first part, and Joseph Finegan & Comp'y, of the State of Florida, of the second part, witness as follows:

ART. 1. The said Finegan & Co. stipulate and agree to construct a railroad from Fernandina to Cedar Keys, upon a route to be designated by the president of the Florida Railroad Co., in all respects conformable to the requirements of the sixth section of the act of the general assembly of Florida, approved the —— day of January, A. D. 1855, entitled "An act to provide for and encourage a liberal system of internal improvements in this State."

ART. 2. The grade line on said road shall not exceed fifteen feet to the mile as a maximum.

ART. 3. The said Joseph Finegan & Company stipulate and agree also to construct all bridges, culverts, trestle-work, and piling required upon said road, and to erect suitable depots at each terminus, and fully equip the road with locomotives and passenger and freight cars, &c., and to erect water stations on the route, and a wooden pier at Fernandina and Cedar Keys, and all other structures necessary for the convenient working of said road.

ART. 4. All the work to be executed with strict regard to the requirements of law, and the whole to be completed within two years from the first day of October next.

ART. 5. In case any part of the bonds hereafter provided to be paid to the said contractors shall not be negotiable at a rate netting to the contractors eighty cents on the dollar, a further time shall be allowed for the completion of the work, it being understood that the contractors shall have at least two years for the completion of the work from the time all the bonds can be negotiated at eighty per cent. on the dollar.

ART. 6. The depot buildings to be required, under this contract, shall not exceed in cost ten thousand dollars each, nor shall the equipment exceed six passenger and freight locomotives, engines of not more than twenty tons each, eight passenger cars of first class, two of second class, three baggage cars, fifteen box cars, and forty flat cars.

ART. 7. In case of any alteration being directed by the legislature on the application of this company in the detail of construction for the road, the execution of the work to conform thereto.

ART. 8. The Florida Railroad Company agrees to pay said Finnegan & Co. the sum of twenty thousand dollars per mile for the said road, estimating at the same rate all turn-out tracks; and also one hundred thousand dollars for the structures necessary to cross from the west side of Nassau River to Amelia Island; and one hundred thousand dollars for the culverts and other water crossings on the line of the road, including the crossing to Cedar Keys, and for the piers at Fernandina and Cedar Keys.

ART. 9. The payments to be made as follows: Ten thousand dollars per mile in bonds of the company guaranteed, as provided by law, as soon as twenty miles have been prepared for the iron and the iron and proportionate equipment for the same is within the jurisdiction of the State, and so on for each succeeding section of ten miles: one hundred thousand dollars in bonds of the company guaranteed, as provided by law, for the structures from the west bank of Nassau River to Amelia Island, in proportion as the work progresses monthly, and the remaining one hundred thousand dollars for piers, culverts, &c., and ten thousand dollars per mile in cash or common bonds of the company in proportion as the work progresses.

ART. 10. In case of the issue of common bonds of this company they shall be made payable in thirty-five years from their date, and shall bear an interest of eight per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, either in the city of New York or Charleston, S. C.; and to secure the same the company will pledge all the town sites and real estate they own, or may by law or otherwise become entitled to, along the line of said road, or at or near the terminal points thereof, and will also mortgage the road and other property of the company, subject, of course, to the first mortgage or lien created by law in favor of the guaranteed bonds; and to make this pledge the more effectual, the company will vest in suitable trustees, to be agreed upon by the parties hereto, the legal title in all the said lands and other property of the company, to be held subject to the payment of the interest and principal of the said bonds; and will also provide a sinking fund of one per cent. per annum to be derived from annual assessments upon the stock under a penalty of forfeiture of the stock in favor of the trust fund.

ART. 11. If required by the said Finnegan & Co., the said Florida Railroad Company will advance to them four hundred thousand dollars in common bonds of the company secured as provided in the last preceding section; provided said Finnegan & Co. shall furnish ample security, to be approved by the president of the company, for the due application of their proceeds to the work of construction; which four hundred thousand dollars of bonds may be convertible into the stock of the company, and shall be redeemable out of the first proceeds of the lands and other property of the company pledged under the provisions of the tenth article.

ART. 12. The interest accruing upon so much of the convertible bonds provided for in the preceding article (11) as may from time to time be in advance of work actually done, and pay earned according to the terms of this contract, shall be paid by the said contractors without charge to the said Florida Railroad Company.

ART. 13. The work to be prosecuted under the direction of a competent chief engineer to [be] employed by the contractors and approved by the president of the company.

Additional articles agreed upon between the parties to the foregoing contract, and which are to form a part thereof:

14. The 2d article having provided that the grade line of the road shall not exceed a maximum elevation of 15 feet to the mile, and it being apprehended by the contractors that, under possible circumstances, the said clause may cause an excessive expenditure not contemplated at the time of the original agreement, it is agreed that — the amount of excavation and embankment in any one mile, in order to preserve the grade of 15 feet, shall exceed 50,000 cubic yards, the excess shall be paid for at the rate of 26 cents per yard.

15. The said Finegan & Co. agree to furnish, in addition to the equipment specified in the sixth article, the following items, namely, six locomotive engines, forty-five box cars, one baggage car, and twenty flat cars, their compensation being increased in proportion.

16. It is understood that it shall be at the option of the Florida Railroad Company alone whether they will pay in cash or bonds, under the provisions in second line from bottom of article nine.

17. It is agreed and understood that in case the lands at the terminal points of the road, referred to in article 10, shall pass into the possession of a separate company the Florida Railroad Company shall make some provision by which the company owning said terminal points shall subject them to a lien for the security of the common construction bonds provided to be paid to the said Finegan & Co.

NOVEMBER 8, 1877, A. D.

ROBERT H. JOHNSON AND WILLIAM W. CORCORAN
vs.
THE ATLANTIC, GULF AND WEST INDIA TRANSIT COMPANY, and others. } In chancery.

Testimony of David L. Yulee, a witness examined before me, Charles W. Lewis, a commissioner duly appointed to take testimony in the above-entitled cause, under an order of the United States district court, Hon. Thomas Settle, judge of said court, of January 12, examined upon interrogatories filed in behalf of defendants in said cause.

The witness, David Yulee, having been duly sworn before me this —— day of ——, 1880, replying to the fourth interrogatory, answered:

I do not know if the bonds specified by witness were paid in by Mr. Dickerson to the trustees. It is quite possible they were. The bonds he enumerates were in the hands of Mr. Soutter, one of the trustees.

They were among a parcel of bonds (122 in number) delivered to me by Mr. Call for transmission to Mr. Soutter, in the winter of 1860, and reached Mr. Soutter through the People's Bank of Charleston. What disposition he made of them I do not know, but I think it quite probable they were a part of the ninety bonds deposited with the Bank of Wilmington as collateral for the loan the trustees obtained from that bank to pay interest coupons due March 1, 1860, and which were sold by the bank.

The authority of the trustees to pledge or sell the bonds they received in payment for lands for the purpose of procuring funds to pay interest was the subject of the opinion furnished by Mr. Stanton, and which is appended to my additional answer in this case as Exhibit C.

The use of these bonds for the payment of the Belmont debt and to provide for the September interest had been previously recommended by Mr. George W. Call, resident agent of the trustees, in his letter to Mr. Elliott of March 29, 1860. See Exhibit D of additional answer.

The bonds handed me by Mr. Call were put by me into two packets. As I was not going to New York I left them in Charleston, where I thought it possible the trustees might be able to use them as collaterals for a loan to discharge the Belmont debt, and informed Mr. Soutter of it.

They were afterwards transmitted to Mr. Soutter by the People's Bank of South Carolina.

I know that they were part of those bonds, because it seems that, for some reason not now recollected, I had occason to inquire from the People's Bank the numbers of the bonds contained in the larger packet, and the reply, which I chanced to retain, enumerates these as part of its contents.

I produce the original letter, dated February 24, 1860.

I know they reached Mr. Soutter from the People's Bank, because the latter wrote me they were sent, and Mr. Soutter at a subsequent time recognized their receipt in a letter to me.

The two letters I produce, dated respectively April 3, 1860, and October 26, 1860, and also a copy of my reply to Mr. Soutter, dated October 30, 1860, as it stands recorded at the time in the letter copy-book. (Letters offered and letter-book produced; the handwriting of that from Mr. Soutter verified, and of cashier of People's Bank, the witness believes it to be his handwriting.) I also produce a copy of my letter to Mr. Soutter of April 7, 1860, referred to in that letter.

I think it very probable they were among the ninety bonds delivered by Mr. Soutter to the Bank of Wilmington, and sold by them, because those ninety were taken from the parcel which went to him, as I have before stated, from the People's Bank, and the bonds enumerated by witness, Finegan, were not among those remaining in Mr. Soutter's hands afterwards.

No. 11½.

Extract from message of Governor M. S. Perry, of Florida, to the house of representatives of Florida, in reply to a resolution of the house on the 7th December, 1858, requesting "the president of the board of trustees to furnish the evidence upon which the suggestions in his message are based relative to the Florida Railroad Company, together with all certificates, affidavits, and evidence," under date of Executive Chamber, Tallahassee, December 10, 1858.

Page 2: The estimated cost of the Florida Railroad, as furnished by Col. G. W. Call, secretary and treasurer, about the 1st of November, 1857, sets forth the estimated cost, the amount of stock, the amount of stock taken, and the assessment which had been made upon said stock up to that time, and is perhaps a more thorough exposé of the affairs of that company than any which has been given to the public, and is herewith communicated and marked I.

I.

The estimated cost of the Florida Railroad is	$3,500,000
(This sum includes all expenditures, and provides a fully equipped road, with depots, station-houses, wharves, and everything necessary to a full business.)
To pay this the company have of internal-improvement bonds	1,655,000
Of land bonds, well secured, and which are paid to contractors at par	1,500,000
	3,155,000
Leaving to be raised on the stock	345,000
	3,500,000
The stock is fixed for the present at	3,000,000
Should the whole be taken, an assessment of 12 per cent. would produce	360,000
Or more than the amount required; but the whole stock as yet taken is little over $1,000,000, the present assessment on which (12 per cent.) produces	120,000
And should no more be taken, a further assessment of 12½ per cent. will be required to produce	225,000
To make up the deficiency of	345,000
Making the total payment on the stock, in any event, only 34½ per cent., or $34.50 on every $100 subscribed. It is, however, presumed that there will be taken at least $500,000 more of the stock, making the whole amount	1,500,000

On which 25 per cent., or $25 on every $100, will be the whole assessment.

While the road is in progress the interest on the internal-improvement bonds is paid by the internal-improvement fund. After its completion, if the road earns 6 per cent. on its cost, the company pays the interest, and 1 per cent. on the amount of the bonds as a sinking fund. If the road does not earn 6 per cent., then the earnings are divided between the bonded debt and the stock paid in. The land bonds are secured by the town sites of Fernandina and Cedar Keys, and 700,000 acres of land, the sales of which will [word omitted; probably "redeem"] them without any cost to the company, leaving the earnings of the road to be divided between the stockholders (after paying interest on the internal improvement bonds); so that, if the road earns eight per cent. on the cost, there will be nearly $150,000 to be divided annually among the subscribers, which, divided by $345,000 (the amount of cash subscription required), gives 43 cents annual income for every dollar paid in on the stock.

To facilitate subscription by the citizens of Florida, the treasurer is authorized to receive the notes of all solvent persons at 90 days for all sums over $100, and at four months for all sums over $200, and at five months for all sums over $300, and at six months for all sums over $400. These notes, to make them equal to cash, should bear interest of 8 per cent. from their dates, and should be made payable to George W. Call, treasurer Florida Railroad Company, or order. Upon being forwarded to Fernandina the proper certificates of stock will be issued.

GEO. W. CALL,
Secretary and Treasurer Florida Railroad Company.

Entered on order of L. G. Dennis, as compensation for services as agent of the State in obtaining patent No. 18, of Tallahassee district, for 58,484.12 acres, at 10 per cent. of the lands, in 1883	5,800.27
Entered with Stonelake floats Nos. 1, 3, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12 in year 1883	440.00
Amount conveyed to Disston and others, at his request, during years 1881, 1882, 1883, and 1884	3,966,079.68
Making total disposed of in years 1883 and 1884, including the Disston sale	8,241,658.83
Total disposed of up to January 1, 1885, including the Disston sale	10,319,036.41
Leaving balance on hand January 1, 1885	5,367,206.26

Of the quantity of land reported by me in my last report in the sales of 1881 and 1882, and in this report in the sales of 1883 and 1884, 33,939.31 acres were sold to settlers, and the purchase money, amounting to $30,660.69, turned over to Mr. Disston, under the arrangement made with him by the trustees for the protection of settlers. This amount, added to the amount above reported as conveyed to Mr. Disston and others at his request, makes the 4,000,000 acres which were contracted to be conveyed to him.

Of the lands reported above as sold, 12,264.47 acres were sold to Sydney I. Wailes, for $8,919.51, on his account as agent of the State at Washington in adjusting land claims, under his contract with the trustees of October 19, 1878, and 6,515 acres sold to John A. Henderson, for $4,873.61, as agent of the State for selecting swamp lands.

No. 13.

(Extract from the testimony of Hon. D. L. Yulee.)

The defendant further denies that the designation of Edward N. Dickerson and associates, who, it is charged, owned stock in the original Florida Railroad Company, included David L. Yulee (this defendant).

This defendant was not directly or indirectly interested pecuniarily in the property, contract, stock, or transactions of said contractors, Edward N. Dickerson and associates.

And this defendant further says that it is not true, as charged, that any of the said internal-improvement bonds were unissued by the said Florida Railroad Company, and only held in hypothecation for the company, or that any or them were used for any other purposes than those contemplated in the law. All of the said bonds were issued by the said company under their contract of June 11, 1855, with Joseph Finnegan & Co. (afterwards assigned with, the assent of the company, to Edward N. Dickerson and associates), in payment for the bridges and other structures crossing the marshes and waters of Amelia River, and for iron or equipment put on the said railroad; and although the notes of the contractors given to various persons for iron, for equipment, and for advances were taken in and substituted by notes of the company, under arrangements with the contractors beneficial to the company, the bonds which constituted the collateral security to the holders of the notes were bonds furnished by the contractors, or to which they were entitled by their contract, and which bonds or their proceeds were strictly applied to the purposes contemplated by the law.

And this defendant further says that since the acquisition of said railroad by the purchasers at the trustees' sale as aforesaid, he became a director in the company formed by said purchasers, and afterwards was made vice-president of the same; that he is, therefore, familiar with the subsequent management; that he knows large amounts had to be expended to place the road in condition for successful operation: and such was the condition of the country, and so unfavorable the prospects for earnings beyond the amount required for ordinary running expenses, that strict economy and care were observed in the outlays of cash that were made or credits that were credited for the purpose aforesaid; and this defendant says that he knows that since the acquisition of said road as aforesaid by the said purchasers the earnings of the said road, with the most judicious, economical, and careful management, have not been sufficient to enable the said company to pay the indebtedness necessarily incurred in putting and keeping the road in condition to be operated, nor to reimburse advances made by them for its benefit.

AN ACT to change the name of the corporation now owning the road called the Florida Railroad, and to call it the Atlantic, Gulf and West India Transit Company.

* * * * * * * *

The people, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That the corporate company owning the property formerly known as the Florida Railroad, and which has heretofore been known as the Florida Railroad Company, shall hereafter be known as the Atlantic, Gulf and West India Transit Company; and the rights, franchises, and privileges, as well as the duties, responsibilities, and liabilities, of the said corporation, shall in all respects remain and continue the same as though no change had been made in their said name.

SEC. 2. That this act shall take effect so soon as the stockholders of said corporation shall pass a resolution adopting such change in their name, and shall transmit to the governor of this State an authenticated copy of the said resolution, to be filed in the office of the secretary of the State.

Approved January 18, 1872.

Affidavit of Edward W. Dickerson.

In the circuit court of the United States, northern district of Florida. In equity. Between the Atlantic, Gulf and West India Transit Company and others, defendants, and Robert H. Johnson complainant.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Columbia, ss:

Edward N. Dickerson, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith: He is the president of the Atlantic, Gulf and West India Transit Company, having succeeded Marshall O. Roberts in that office. This company is a corporation first organized under the name of the Florida Railroad Company in the month of November, A. D. 1866, under a franchise conveyed to this deponent by the trustees of the internal-improvement fund of Florida by a deed dated November 3, 1866, a copy of which is hereto annexed, and reorganized on the first day of January, A. D. 1870, under an act of the legislature of Florida June 24, 1869. The name of the corporation was changed to its present title January 29, 1872, under the authority of an act of the legislature of Florida January 18, 1872.

The railroad owned by this corporation was purchased at public sale, at the time and in the manner set out in the deed herein referred to, in the interest and for the account of various owners of the first-mortgage bonds of the Florida Railroad Company, whose franchise and railroad had been seized by the trustees of the internal-improvement fund of Florida, and offered for sale, according to the statute. The owners of more than $1,400,000 out of $1,617,000 of these bonds concerned in this sale, and the owner of $195,000, being the balance of the bonds, so far as could be ascertained, accepted the sale as satisfactory, and now holds his lien on the railroad under the statute, whereby his payment is abundantly secured.

At the time of the purchase the road was destroyed for many miles, the iron being removed to other roads, and states the whole wood superstructure was decayed or destroyed and worthless.

There were very few cars on the road, and the few that were there were utterly worthless, and not one of these is now in existence.

The purchasers rebuilt the road, purchased an entirely new rolling stock, built and furnished with new machinery the workshops and other needed buildings, there being none at either end of the road, and set the road in operation. In doing this the purchasers have expended more than $500,000 more than the road has received by way of earnings from all sources whatever; and not one dollar has been repaid to any of the parties whose money has been expended in this work.

The charge in the bill to the effect that the present owners of the road have misapplied its funds is simply false; and it is notorious in Florida, and must have been known to the person who swore to the bill of complaint, if he knew anything about it at all, that the earnings of the road since its construction have been far less than the expenditure upon the road.

From the time of the purchase of the road till the filing of the bill in this case no demand has ever been made by the complainant in this case, or by any other person whatever, upon the owners of the road, for payment of the second-mortgage bonds of the old Florida Railroad Company, and I never heard it suggested, and the thought never entered my mind, that any such claim ever would be made.

On the 26th of May, A. D. 1869, the owners of the road, under the then title of the Florida Railroad Company, executed a deed of trust conveying their said railroad to John A. Stewart and Frederick A. Conkling, of the city of New York, which deed was duly recorded in Florida in every county in which the road exists; and the said trustees have indorsed a large number of bonds, which have been sold to various bona fide holders, are now outstanding, secured by said deed of trust. A copy of this deed is hereto annexed.

And this depenent further saith that this company has no knowledge of the various averments in the bill of complaint as to events anterior to the sale and purchase of the road as above set fourth; but they claim as bone fide purchasers for full value from the trustees, who were executing their trust according to law; and they submit that it would be a gross violation of their rights of property to take out of their hands their railroad, on which they have expended, in the bonds which it in part represents, and in cash, since the purchase, more than $2,000,000, and deliver it to a receiver for the benefit of complainant, who owns two second-mortgage bonds, on which he has made no claim for seven years, while this company has been building up this road and dealing with it, unquestioned by any one, before the world as their own property.

And this defendant saith that the railroad is in the possession of this company, and not of David L. Yulee or of any other person. Mr. Yulee is vice-president, employed by the company, and is resident at Fernandina; but he has no possession or control of the property except as agent of the company, and for them and not for himself.

EDWARD N. DICKERSON.

No. 14.

From report of the secretary of the board of trustees internal-improvement fund, page 55. State of Florida.

April 14, 1884, W. J. Newton, esq., attorney for Charles Pomeroy, appeared before the board and applied for lands due for services rendered in obtaining swamp-land indemnity certificates from the United States Government by said Pomeroy, and presented the following order from L. G. Dennis, who claims that he was the agent of the State to procure the said certificates, and that he appointed the said Pomeroy to act as his clerk and agent at Washington, D. C.:

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., April 13, 1883.

To the board of trustees of the internal-improvement fund of the State of Florida:

GENTLEMEN: Please deliver to Charles Pomeroy, for me, patents for 5,800 acres of land, to be selected by him out of the quantity of land due to me as compensation for my services in recovering lands for the State of Florida, under my appointment for that purpose by the governor of the State of Florida, bearing date November 10, 1875, and charge the same to me in part satisfaction of my claim for compensation.

Yours, very respectfully,

L. G. DENNIS,
Per ED. M. CHENEY, Attorney.

And it appearing that said Pomeroy had procured patents from the General Land Office for 58,484.12 acres, it is Ordered, That 5,800 acres of the said lands so procured be deeded to said Pomeroy, as a payment on the 10 per cent. claim of the said Dennis for having the said patents obtained from the United States Land Office.

TALLAHASSEE, FLA., December 29, 1883.

The honorable board of trustees of internal-improvement fund of Florida:

GENTLEMEN: I respectfully present that while engaged, under the authority of yourselves and your predecessors in office, in efforts to sell of the lands of your trust a sufficient amount to discharge the incumbrances on said fund, I was occupied the greater portion of my time for seven years, and spent much of the same in visiting different parts of the United States, Canada, and Europe, and had the services, at my expense, of agents in the United States, Canada, and Europe, aiding me in my efforts; that the actual cash outlay of money paid out by myself and my agents amounts to the sum of $24,738.39, and, excluding all items of expense subsequent to the institution of the suit in the United States court for the northern district of Florida, the sum of $18,438.39; and the above aggregates are exclusive of interest.

Respectfully,

SAMUEL A. SWANN.

And inclosing an order of Judge Settle dismissing the suit of Swann vs. The Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund of Florida.

Circuit court of the United United States, fifth circuit, northern district of Florida.
In equity.

In the matter of the petition of Samuel A. Swann for compensation.

This cause coming on to be heard this day, on motion of Samuel A. Swann, esq., in proper, and there being no objection,

It is ordered that the said petition of Samuel A. Swann be dismissed on payment of costs by the petitioner.

THOMAS SETTLE, Judge.

DECEMBER 27, 1883.

A true copy.

PHILIP WALTER, Clerk.

Whereupon it was ordered that Henry A. L'Engle, treasurer of this board, do pay to S. A. Swann $20,000, in full acquittance and discharge of his claim for reimbursement and compensation on account of his services under his said authority, upon his executing to this board a release, acquittance, and discharge of the liability of the board to him, the same to cover all liabilities and expenses incurred by him in the employment of other persons or otherwise.

O

SPECIAL SESSION. | SENATE. | MIS. DOC. No. 20.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

MARCH 21, 1885.—Ordered to be printed.

Mr. MITCHELL submitted the following

RESOLUTION:

Whereas Congress, on the 12th of February, 1873, authorized the coinage of trade dollars, weighing 420 grains each of standard silver; which dollars by the same act were made coins of the United States, and a legal tender at their nominal value for any amount not exceeding five dollars in any one payment; and

Whereas, by the joint resolution of July 22, 1876, Congress declared that the trade dollar should not thereafter be a legal tender, and authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to limit from time to time the coinage thereof to such an amount as he might deem sufficient to meet the export demand for the same; and

Whereas prior to the passage of the said resolution nearly 15,600,000 trade dollars were coined at and issued from the mints of the United States; and

Whereas subsequently to the passage of the said resolution, over 20,300,000 of these pieces were coined at and issued from said mints; and

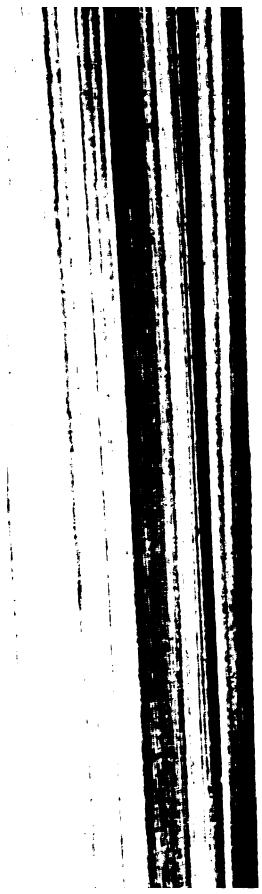
Whereas a former Secretary of the Treasury, now a Senator from Ohio, did on the 26th of February, 1885, in the Senate of the United States, declare that the Secretary of the Treasury in October, 1877, stopped the coinage of trade dollars, and that the Government of the United States had no part or lot in this matter after the 15th of October, 1877; whereas, in truth and fact, as appears by the report for 1879 of the Director of the Mint, 5,248,960 were coined and issued after October, 1877, of which number, 4,259,900, bearing date of 1878, were coined in 1878; and

Whereas millions of the said coins, as is believed, were put in circulation and circulated at their face value as coin of the United States, in the channels of trade and business; and

Whereas the House of Representatives, on the 19th of June, 1882, passed a bill for the retirement of trade dollars from circulation and their recoinage into standard silver dollars, which bill provided that the trade dollars so received should be regarded as silver bullion, and should be deemed a part of the monthly purchase of bullion, as required by the act of February 28, 1878; and

Whereas, notwithstanding the appeals of merchants, business men, and the people at large by petitions presented while the said bill was pending in the Senate, the Senate failed to pass the bill, which fell finally on the expiration of the Forty-seventh Congress, March 4, 1883; and

Whereas some of the aforesaid merchants and business men in New



Whereas the House of Representatives, on the 1st of April, 1886, again pass a bill for the retirement and recoinage of the trade do which bill also failed to pass the Senate and fell with the expiratio the Forty-eighth Congress on the 4th of March, 1885; and

Whereas in fixing the value of foreign coin, as estimated by Director of the Mint and proclaimed by the Secretary of the Trea on the 1st of January, 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878, the valuation of s was for those four years at the trade-dollar rate, viz, 420 grains fine, to the dollar, thereby recognizing the said coins as dollars of United States; therefore,

Be it resolved, That a special committee of five Senators be appoi by the President of the Senate, to inquire and report to the Senat later than the second Monday of December next—

First. How many trade dollars were put in circulation in the U States prior to the passage of the resolution repealing their legal-te quality?

Second. How, when, where, and in what quantities, the said came into circulation, subsequently, in this country?

Third. How many of the said coins are still held in this country what States, and the amount in each; and at what rates the same taken?

Fourth. How much profit accrued to the United States by the age of trade dollars, either from collecting customs duties levied a trade-dollar rate, from 1875 to 1878 inclusive, or otherwise?

Fifth. What has been the practice under this and other Governm as to the receipt or refusal by them of their own coin?

And that the said committee have power to employ a stenogra to subpœna witnesses, and to administer oaths and take testim and that the actually necessary expenses incurred in the executi
this resolution shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the S upon the allowance and order of the said committee.
